Agency Sets New Barrier In Way of 1-Cent Milk

Aid Pledged to D. C. If Consumption Rises 270%, Which Is Almost Impossible

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The Department of Agriculture is now telling Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou he must pledge a 270 per cent increase in milk consumption to obtain a Federally subsidized "penny program" for underfed school children.

This is the gist of a letter sent to Dr. Ballou's office Monday by Agriculture's Surplus Marketing Administration, The Post learned yesterday.

Dr. Ballou is on vacation and his secretary would not make public the letter. Neither would Surplus Marketing. The latter, for that matter, is not anxious to discuss—for the record—any part of the confused situation.

Subterfuge and stalling have marked the SMA's every move in connection with their "study" of the Capital's grave need for adequate supplies of low-cost milk for needy families and school children.

Study Under Way

The "study" has been under way since May 21, when The Post began disclosing woeful shortcomings of the "nickel quart" project—which bars far more deserving families than it accommodates—and presenting justification for a penny-half-pint project in schools of low income neighborhoods.

Two weeks ago Leon J. Steck, aide to O. M. Reed, chief of the SMA Dairy Division, assured The Post that the bureau had all the information it needed to pass on Dr. Ballou's application.

A new set of standards, approved on August 14 by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, did not necessitate a new application by Dr. Ballou or require the transmission of any more information in order that a decision might be reached, according to Steck.

Pertinent Questions

However, the Surplus Marketing Administration now is not only demanding a 270 per cent consumption increase—a qualification which it is almost impossible to meet—but asking the school superintendent if parents will cooperate, how much District money is available for expenditure and other questions.

Here are a few questions for the Agriculture Department to answer:

Was it sheer coincidence, or otherwise, that the letter to Dr. Ballou was not written until August 25, the same day that Secretary Wickard

During his absence, Lieut. Col. Leroy S. Mann, executive officer, has been acting in command of the antiaircraft regiment.

Guns for Soldiers

U. S. All Out to Beat Hitler, But All In From Labor Strife

Copyright, 1941, By The Washington Post.

A PLANE TAKES OFF from the new Washington National Airport. Heading northwestward, it comes, in two hours time, to the very front line of America's arms-producing drive.

Here the blast furnaces send up a fiery glow at night, here incredibly efficient machines gouge out the implements of war, and here the visitor sees more men in working garb in 10 minutes than he would see in Washington in 10 years.

It is in this industrial area, and in others like it, that the V (for victory) really is expected to be forged. Nobody knows that better than Adolf Hitler; it is the chief reason that he is a man in a hurry. For all its vaunted efficiency, Nazi Germany never saw the day when it could compete with industrial America in turning out guns, planes and tanks—that is, once America gets going.

But America has not yet got going. Something is radically wrong. The Army still is waiting for guns, the Air Corps for planes. The President says he is not satisfied. The people in general say they are not satisfied.

What is wrong?

Having scoured Washington for the answer, The Washington Post sent a reporter into the field to see the Nation's captains of industry, the men who are running the great plants that make up the "arsenal of democracy." What did they think was wrong?.

Industry Counters With Questions

The industrialists countered with a question of their own: What, they asked, is more important in this critical stage of America's history—social reforms or guns?

AS THEY SEE IT, first things must come first. President Roosevelt, they say, is going to have to decide which is paramount—the New Deal social revolution or an all-out effort to arm the Nation and its allies against Hitler.

These industrialists were not talking about social security, Federal housing and other New Deal reforms that have now become a part of the American economy. They were talking primarily about labor.

There are times, these industrialists say, when they suspect that the social revolution comes first and the arms program second. They themselves are for President Roosevelt's foreign policy almost to a man. They suspect, however, that many of the New Dealers saw in the war a heaven-sent opportunity—an opportunity for unrestrained spending and an opportunity for bringing about their pet reforms.

This condition of affairs, the industrialists say, is one of the chief reasons for America's failure to achieve the full might of her industrial prowess.

Safety Before Reform

"President Roosevelt can't conduct a social revolution and fight a war at the same time," said one executive, the head of an important machine-tool plant. "I am quite sure he can bring about a social revolution. I am also confident that, in the long run, he can bring about the downfall of Adolf Hitler. But I emphatically don't believe that he can do both at the same time.

"If we are going to revolutionize our country, we had better first make sure that we preserve it. Then we will have a country to make over when the time comes."

A GOOD MANY OTHER INDUSTRIALISTS agreed with him. They cited the case of France as an example of what happens to a country that dabbles in reforms while the enemy is working around the clock and making sacrifices in order to turn out guns.

They pointed to what they called the benign attitude of the Roosevelt Administration in the face of an unending series of strikes in shipyards, aircraft plants, ordnance plants and other defense industries; to the seeming inclination of the President to close his eyes while local labor leaders break contracts, indulge in mob violence and tie up defense plants with complete immunity from the law.

And, finally, they pointed to the anomaly which sees all this happening at a time when the country is being called on for unity, for sacrifice and for an all-out effort against the totalitarian powers.

The industrialists, as has been said, are squarely behind President Roosevelt's foreign policy, whatever may have been their attitude in the 1940 campaign. They feel, along with Wendell Willkie, that this is a good time to forget partisan politics.

But where labor is concerned, they say, the national defense program takes on a strictly New Deal hue that recalls Mr. Roosevelt's political indebtedness to labor and vice versa.

Bad Effect Among Selectees

Several of the industrialists interviewed had sons with the armed forces. They said they had heard enough to know that the strike situation was producing a bad effect among the 900,000 selectees who are drawing $21 a month and wondering when they are going to get guns and tanks.

THE INDUSTRIALISTS WERE ANGERED by stories and statistics out of Washington, which sought to prove that strikes, after all, were not greatly interfering wih the production program.

"Why, the attitude of labor, encouraged as it is by the Administration, is the greatest single deterrent to war production," one indus-

Defense Ships Given Priority, Japan to Lose Philippine Trade

(OPM Issues Order Forcing Manufacturers to Accept Defense Contracts, Page 6.)

President Roosevelt, in two moves to strengthen national defense, acted yesterday to give vessels carrying defense supplies special port rights and at the same time issued an order designed to keep Philippine food and vegetable products from reaching Japan.

Acting under an old law, the President issued an executive order authorizing the Maritime Commission to issue warrants giving certain ships priority in the movement of materials needed for national defense.

Such vessels would have first call on wharfage facilities, loading and unloading and other facilities needed to insure prompt delivery of defense products.

The President's order said the priority system for shipping was needed to "insure the prompt delivery of materials essential to the national defense through (1) the importation of substantial quantities of strategic and critical materials; (2) the transportation of substantial quantities of materials re-

Senate Unit Votes $5 Tax On Auto Use

Excess Profits Levy Liberalized; Group Cuts Estimated Yield 80 Millions

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Finance Committee late yesterday approved the $5 annual use tax on automobiles in the 3½-billion-dollar defense revenue bill approved by the House. The levy was accepted by a vote of 13 to 4.

At the same time the committee cut the measure's estimated yield by about 80 million dollars, liberalizing the excess profits tax provisions and dropping controversial levies on soft drinks, radio time sales and outdoor advertising.

Yesterday's six-hour committee session left the tax bill about 20 million dollars over the 3½ billion goal originally set by the Treasury—and some 480 million short of the four billion mark which some members believe the committee can attain.

Rejects Alternative Plan

Early in the day the committee rejected one of the Treasury's alternative plans for a substantial increase in revenue, a doubling of the automobile excise tax, estimated to produce an additional 167 million dollars.

Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, told reporters that new revenue sources were still being surveyed, however. The committee has not yet acted on proposals for heavier beer and cigarette taxes, which would bring in about 180 million dollars more than the schedules passed by the House.

Other Provisions Approved

The automobile use tax, most important of the "nuisance" levies in the revenue bill, is expected to produce 160 million dollars.

Other excise provisions approved yesterday by the Senate committee in the form passed by the House will impose new or increased taxes on luggage, passenger travel, business machines, jewelry, furs, toilet articles, neon signs, sporting goods, matches and numerous other articles in daily use.

The committee trimmed an estimated 50 million dollars from the revenue bill by eliminating a special 10 per cent tax which the House had applied to "defense-born" earning of corporations not now reached by the excess profits tax.

Final Action Postponed

The special 10 per cent tax, approved by the House as a method of tapping earnings of heavily capitalized firms with recently increased profits but relatively low average earnings, was attacked by many business spokesmen on the grounds that it was unfair to firms that are only beginning to recoup prewar losses.

Final action on the general schedule of excess profits tax rates was again postponed yesterday.

Elimination of the soft-drink levy, which would have come to one-sixth of a cent on bottles retailing for a dime or less, reduced total yield of the tax bill by $22,600,000.

In striking out the graduated tax on radio time sales the committee trimmed an estimated $4,800,000 from the bill. Rejection of the billboard tax cost $1,700,000.

The committee drastically increased the House tax on coin-

Shake-up Continues

District Chiefs May Name Two More as Inspectors

Appointment of two additional police inspectors will be considered today by the District Commissioners as a sequel to the shake up in the police high command started yesterday.

Commissioner J. Russell Young, in charge of police personnel, said that the Board of Commissioners will first take under advisement the promotion of Ira Keck, who had been acting chief of detectives since the retirement of Inspector B. W. Thompson. Keck, a lieutenant serving as an acting captain, is expected to be named an inspector in the event civil service requirements can be met.

The other officer whose status will be considered today is Capt. John Fowler, Thirteenth Precinct. Fowler, ballistics expert of the Police Department for many years and former ace headquarters detective, is also expected to be elevated to the rank of inspector.

The city heads yesterday named Capt. Richard H. Mansfield, Ninth Precinct commander, head of the Detective Bureau. Capt. Harvey C. Callahan, slated to become assistant superintendent of police, was raised to the rank of inspector, as was Capt. Milton D. Smith, who will be placed in charge of the police property division.

Inspector James F. Beckett, who has been acting assistant superintendent, was relieved of that assignment and will resume his duties as district inspector. Inspector Edward J. Kelly, who is to be the new chief of police, was given the grade of assistant superintendent for the purpose of the record. Kelly, new serving as acting superintendent, will be appointed police chief October 17 when Maj. Ernest W. Brown's leave of absence expires and his retirement becomes effective.

In making public the report of a special board investigating the Police Department, the Commissioners announce the report carries 40 specific recommendations for strengthening the force.

Nazis Claim Advance

Berlin (Thursday), Aug. 28.—Adolf Hitler's eastern armies claiming sweeping victories all along the 1800-mile Russian front, were reported today to have cut the Moscow-Leningrad railroad and to be storming into the eastern Ukraine after crossing the lower Dnieper River.

The official D. N. B. agency reported the cutting of the "life-line" of communications running southward to Moscow from besieged Leningrad, second city and ancient Czarist capital of Russia which was said to be under fierce aerial siege with German and Finnish forces closing in upon it in a giant encircling assault.

Crush Red Resistance

The point where the railroad was cut was not revealed but it was indicated that it might have occurred near Novgorod, which is 100 miles south of Leningrad and 40 miles west of the rail line.

German and Hungarian forces were said in an official Budapest communique, confirmed in Berlin, to have stormed across the Dnieper and on into the eastern Ukraine after crushing fierce Russian resistance and breaking Marshal Semyon Budyenny's defense lines along the eastern bank.

The crossing of the Dnieper was announced after claims of sweeping victories along the 1,800-mile Russian front, where the Soviet Twenty-second Army was said to have been annihilated west of Moscow, with 70,000 dead and prisoners, and the Dnieper town of Borislav taken in bloody house-to-house fighting.

Assassin Critically Injures Laval and Deat at Versailles

By the Associated Press

Versailles, Occupied France (Thursday), Aug. 28.—Pierre Laval, foremost French collaborator with the German "new order," and his aide and faithful follower, Marcel Deat, were shot here yesterday by a 29-year-old French assassin posing as a volunteer in the French legion recruited to fight Russia.

The condition of the two men was described as critical early today by physicians who worked over them in the municipal hospital.

Paul Colette, the assassin, cooly emptied his gun at Laval and Deat and bullets struck two other men, who were wounded slightly.

Authorities said he confessed that he had gained entry by a ruse to the Versailles barracks, where the antibolshevik legion was being formed, for the express purpose of killing Laval.

Fernand de Brinon, Vichy ambassador to Paris and collaborationist, was near Laval but was uninjured.

Early today De Brinon said:

"We are faced with a terroristic organization."

The shooting occured in the Borgnis des Bordes barracks near the palace of Versailles. It was in open defiance of the German officials present who had announced death decrees for French hostages should

Entire City Ablaze In 'Scorched Earth' Retreat, Reports Say

By the United Press

Stockholm (Thursday) Aug. 28.—The entire city of Tallinn, besieged capital of Estonia and most beautiful city of the Baltic States, was being devoured by flames early today in a devastating application of Russian "scorched earth" tactics, according to reports reaching Stockholm.

Not only the important port but all the residential and business areas of the city of 133,000 inhabitants on the Gulf of Finland opposite Helsinki were said to be a mass of flames as German forces closed in upon it from the south and east.

The Russian radio was quoted by the newspaper Aftonbladet as saying that when the Germans enter the city they will find "only burning, smoking debris."

(Helsinki dispatches told of a great fire, visible for 50 miles across the Gulf of Finland from the direction of Tallinn, as the German land encirclement of the city was supported by heavy aerial bombardment.)

Various Baltic reports told of the sky lighted by fire over Tallinn. At first it was believed that only the port section was ablaze, but later accounts said that the flames, which German bombers help to spread, had covered the entire city.

The Soviet radio was quoted by the Aftonbladet as saying:

"Not only Tallinn but all of Estonia is burning . . . There is not even a sack of oats left . . . All shale and oil plants have been destroyed.

"The counter-revolutionaries and friends of Germany have been liquidated."

Teheran, Iran (Thursday), Aug. 28.—The cabinet of Premier Ali Mansur, at war with Britain and Russia, resigned early today and Reza Shah Pahlavi, ruler of Iran, ordered the ministers to continue their tasks until another cabinet is formed.

The undersecretaries also were ordered to remain at their posts until their successors were chosen.

The cabinet resigned two days after Iran was reliably reported to have delivered to the British and Russian ministers a plea that the Iranian war end and a guarantee that all Germans save a few in indispensable technical posts would be ousted within a week.

The British and the Russians had demanded the ouster of the Germans, holding that they were a danger to the Allies.

(Martin Agronsky, NBC representative in Ankara, Turkey, in a broadcast to the United States said reliable foreign quarters in Ankara reported the new premier, yet to be chosen, would announce that the token resistance put up by Iran showed the country's desire for independence and that she was bowing to British-Russian force.

(There was no immediate indication as to who might head the new government.)

President to Decide

War Center Is 'Up in Air' Until Roosevelt Sees Site

President Roosevelt was expected last night to motor soon to Arlington, Va., to decide in person where the War Department's new offices will be built, after a session in his office yesterday, during which Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief, stood his ground against the Chief Executive's expressed desire to build the structure on a site reserved for a Quartermaster depot.

The President met yesterday with Somervell, Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; George E. Bergstrom, architect for the "dream building," and Harold D. Smith, Director of the Budget.

Delano, the President's uncle, told The Post last night that Somervell staunchly insisted on building a 35 million dollar office unit on the site across from Memorial Bridge and that the President jokingly reminded the general who was Commander in Chief of the Army.

Somervell denied a report in early editions of The Post last night that the President had to remind him he was Commander in Chief of the

The United States and Russia yesterday defied a Japanese challenge of America's right to send war supplies to the Soviet port of Vladivostok "under the very noses" of the Axis-affiliated Japanese.

A showdown in the Pacific—either verbal or military—appeared inevitable when protests from Tokyo were answered by stern American and Russian warnings to the Japanese to keep "hands off"

New Cabinet Crisis Reported in Japan

Shanghai, Thursday, Aug. 28 (U.P.) Non-Axis diplomats here received reports today from Tokyo that a Japanese cabinet crisis is growing over failure of the Government of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye to solve the problems arising from the Anglo-American freezing of Nipponese assets and to halt United States shipments to Russia via Vladivostok.

According to these reports, the pro-Axis faction in Japan is doing its utmost to obtain a military cabinet which will press for Japanese expansion.

The diplomatic sources said their reports indicated Japan has reached the crossroads and that a final determination of policy must be reached within a fortnight.

Henderson Lists Fair Gas Prices For Eastern Cities

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday issued a list of what his office considers fair prices for gasoline in 40 East Coast cities.

The list of prices, which are not mandatory, was drawn up in an attempt to curb profiteering by dealers who might take advantage of the rationed supply of gasoline.

A price of 16.5 per gallon, the lowest of the 40 cities, was listed for Washington.

The Senate inquiry into the petroleum situation will open today with Ralph D. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, as first witness.

Action Near City Of 'K' Is Reported In Soviet Communique

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 28.—Russia officially indicated today the Red army was holding its ground on all fronts against strong German attacks and front-line dispatches said scores of thousands of Germans were killed when the invaders were routed from the outskirts of the city of "K."

The Soviet communique declared the Red army was putting up a fierce struggle on the fronts made familiar in the recent communique—Kingisepp, 70 miles southwest of Leningrad, Smolensk, and Gomel, both on the central front, and Dnieperopetrovsk and Odessa in the Ukraine.

Russia has acknowledged the fall of both Smolensk and Gomel to the Germans but the communique indicated the Red army still had its lines in those general areas.

Both Leningrad, where the Red army commander has appealed for a civilian army and where redoubts have been thrown up for street fighting, and Odessa are working continually on defense measures.

City May Be Kiev

Front-line Russian dispatches last night said the Germans were driven far back after standing for more than a month in the outskirts of "K."

The city was not identified except by the initial. (It might be Kiev.)

This account was published in Izvestia, the official government newspaper, which also printed a radio telephone conversation between its editors and the secretary of the Communist Party of besieged Odessa.

succession followed by two more.

"I turned and saw Laval stumbling along and holding his side with Legionnaires all around him.

"I called my car quickly and rushed Laval to the municipal hospital. In the other car we put Deat, who never stopped protesting: 'It's nothing, it's nothing.'"

Other reports said that when Laval was reeling toward De Brinon's car a crowd shouted:

"Death to him! Death to him!"

Laval was struck four times, some reports said. The most serious wounds were in the region of the throat and just over the heart.

Deat Struck Near Throat

Deat was struck near the throat and one bullet lodged in an intestine. It was not until early today that physicians dared to operate upon Deat, the man who is known throughout France as a pro-German pacifist and who penned the "Why Die for Danzig?" article just before the war broke.

Surgeons sent by German authorities operated upon Laval and, although in a weakened condition, the former premier and one-time heir to Marshal Petain's Vichy throne was able to telephone his wife.

Mme. Laval left her Chateldon estate near Vichy at once for Versailles.

The other two men wounded were identified as Col. Durvy, commander of the barracks, and a legionnaire named Basset.

Collette, a native of Calvados, a Normandy department, was said to have hidden beneath a balcony biding his time until Laval, Deat and the others left the speaker's platform to pass near him en route to the door.

The setting of the shooting was not far from where Allied leaders signed the Versailles Peace Treaty, June 28, 1919, stripping Germany politically, militarily and economically.

Laval had delivered a pep talk to the anti-Soviet volunteers, who have been promsed good pay and new uniforms, with red, white and blue arm bands, stamped with the word "France."

Laval has had no official status since Marshal Petain ousted him as Vice-Premier in Vichy last December supposely for going over the Marshal's head in dealing with German collaborators.

Power Behind the Scenes

But he nevertheless has been in constant touch with German ocupation authorities in an influential behind-the-scenes capacity.

Deat, a former Air Minister who moved steadily to the right since his rise as a pacifist left-wing orator, sat beside Laval. He is editor of the reconstituted Paris newspaper L'Oeuvre and has prodded the Vichy regime constantly for not moving fast enough along the road to a "new order" with Germany.

At a time when Britain and France were trying to present a psychological as well as military front against Germany in the dispute with Poland over Danzig, Deat startled the two countries with his article: "Why Die For Danzig?"

Britain and France should "begin negotiating and not firing" at once, he wrote.

Deat and Laval are close friends of Otto Abetz, German ambassador to Paris. When Laval was ousted in Vichy and for a time was under surveillance there, Abetz immediately went to Vichy, flanked by his own German bodyguards.

MARCEL DEAT

Abetz talked with Petain, then Laval. Together Laval and Abetz journeyed back to Paris, and Laval has been a frequent contact man since then although Vichy never gave him his old job back.

Laval was Marshal Petain's representative when the French National Assembly voted to approve a Fascist-type government in July, 1940, after the armistice. He also was the aged marshal's right-hand man when former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud were imprisoned on "war guilt" charges. In an interview Laval said democracy in France was dead, that Germany was France's hope.

Recruiting for "Crusade"

Deat has remained in Paris most of the time, and he formed the National Popular Party as a means of rallying all Frenchmen who demanded uncompromising collaboration with Germany.

Both men have been aiding German authorities in the quest for recruits to fight in the "crusade" against Russia.

How many men have been recruited is not known, but the time limit for enlistment, originally set for August 30, has been extended until September 8.

Terrorism and sabotage in the occupied zone have marred the German-French program. The German military, working with Paris police, rounded up thousands of "Jews and Communists" in Paris.

The assassination of a German officer in a Paris subway caused the occupation authorities to decree that French hostages would be shot in any number chosen by the Germans should the violence and sabotage continue.

In Vichy it was even suggested that British parachutists might be responsible for the wave of sabotage and unrest.

(London officials merely smiled and would not comment on this report. The British have instituted a "V For Victory" campaign which they said had swept France and all conquered countries. Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French fighting Germany, recently appealed to young Frenchmen to stop trying to escape to join his ranks. Many have been arrested.)

ported to have been seized.

A Hungarian communique said that Hungarian troops had aided the Germans in crossing the half mile-wide Dnieper at "several points" after crushing the resistance of the Red Army which "threw all its available reserves into the battle in an effort to check the allied attack."

Several Russian counter-attacks on the east bank where the German-Hungarian forces are driving toward the rich industrial basin of the Don and the Caucasus were said to have been quickly crushed.

One unofficial report indicated that one German force had crossed the Dnieper around Chernigkov, 80 miles north of Kiev and 60 miles south of Gomel.

On the northern front, D. N. B. told of strong pushes upon Leningrad including smashing bombing attacks that blasted railroads and other communications.

Leningrad itself was said to be under "intensive bombing."

The Nazi claims boosted far above the 5 million mark the Russians' reported losses in 67 days of struggle.

Highlighting the victory announcements were these official claims:

1. Destruction of the "bulk" of the Soviet Twenty-second Army in the capture of the town of Velikie Luki, 170 miles west of Moscow, on the main railroad line from Riga, where 40,000 Russians were killed and 30,000 others captured in a vast encirclement carried out by Gen. Ritter von Leeb's northern army group striking eastward toward the Volga, 90 miles away, in an effort to cut Leningrad off from Moscow.

2. Capture of Borislav, on the west bank of the Dnieper near its estuary, where German forces, storming across heavily mined aproaches to the town with bayonets and grenades, broke Russian resistance "street by street," destroyed five Russian battalions, captured 1500 prisoners and "left the streets littered with dead."

3. The sinking of 15 Russian gunboats sent up the lower Dnieper to repulse the German assault and bombard Nazi positions. The gunboats were said to have been sunk by artillery and machine-gun fire.

Freighters Sunk

4. Destruction of three Russian freighters which sank after trying to break through a mine field in the Gulf of Finland, as well as another 3000-ton Russian ship shelled from ashore and set afire. A small Russian warship which attempted to go to the aid of the burning ship was said to have been blasted with direct shell hits.

5. Finnish troops pushing down the Karelian Isthmus upon Leningrad captured several islands in the Finnish gulf, as well as eight Soviet guns, a tug and a motorboat.

6. German bombers ranging over the Gulf of Finland sank four Russian transports totaling 9000 tons, damaged four others and scored bomb hits on one Russian destroyer and a flotilla leader. East of Fisherman's Peninsula on the Arctic coast near Murmansk Luftwaffe bombers were said to have bombed and "heavily hit" four other Russian destroyers.

7. The "annihilation" of two Soviet rifle corps and one tank corps near Uman, south of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev which the Germans have not yet captured but which they claimed is being drawn into an inescapable iron ring.

8. Heavy bombings of Russian concentrations east of Kiev and important Russian railroads around Moscow and Leningrad.

German official spokesmen denied tonight that Col. Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd Von Rundstedt, commander in chief of the German armies smashing into the Ukraine, had been killed in action.

"Gen. Rundstedt is enjoying good health and sends his greetings," they said.

(The British radio quoted the Moscow radio as reporting the death of Rundstedt, saying a captured German officer had disclosed it.)

"The factories are working full blast and producing even better than usual because of the high spirit of the workers," the secretary said.

He declared women had replaced men who went to the front and that the city transportation system was working to capacity, stores were doing a brisk trade and street crowds were lively.

"The morale of the population is firm, with concentration on defense," he said. "All have risen as one against the enemy."

(Last week a German aviator who flew over Odessa said it was "worse than Dunkerque" and that confusion was so great he saw tanks and trucks mow down street crowds and crunch over the bodies.)

At the opposite end of the front, Leningrad reported it was carrying on with the slogan:

"More production with fewer workers."

As an indication that Russia expects a long war, it was announced that the nation's schools would open September 1 with 11,000,000 new textbooks issued, 80,000 new teachers appointed, and a military training program to be stressed.

Leaflets Dropped on Nazis

S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, said the Red air force had dropped millions of leaflets behind the German, Finnish and Rumanian lines, each containing a pass which would admit the bearer to the Russian lines if he wished to desert the invaders.

Lozovsky commented that this sort of thing was not enough to break the German military machine, which he described as weakening but still relatively powerful. He said, however, that "the more blows the German army takes from us and the more losses it bears, the harder it is for the German people to experience Hitler's bloody adventures and the faster will be the disintegration of the front and rear of the German army and the faster will be the rout of Hitler's Germany."

The President's Day

By International News Service

HAPPY FIFTY-SECOND: The parade was late in getting under way yesterday as the President took time out after the regular morning staff huddle to congratulate and rib Steve Early on his fifty-second birthday. From the President to his faithful retaining wall and spokesman: A handsome gold gimmick which shall remain nameless at the request of the modest Early.

SAY IT AGAIN: After waiting around for the President to slap Steve's back for the last time and trek over to his office, Mark Ethridge, chairman of the Young Committee on Fair Employment Practices in Defense, was finally ushered in, asked the President to specifically direct all Government and defense agencies not to discriminate against Negroes in defense employment.

CHAPTER II, VERSE 2: Back again to discuss the proposed War Department Building came Budgeter Harold Smith, Brig. Gen. Brehon Sommervell, Army Architect George Bergstrom and the President's Uncle, Fred Delano, of the Park and Planning Commission. After a half hour of discussion the War Department was still a castle in the air, hovering hopefully over the Arlington site. The President stuck by his guns, turned down both plan and site.

The War Department still felt they should have their 35-million-dollar building and four million square feet next to the Arlington Cemetery.

DIPLOMATS: Breckenridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, came over, talked a while with the President about the problem of immigrants here with close relatives in occupied countries. After Long, came Fred A. Sterling, Minister to Sweden, home on leave, for 15 minutes of reporting conditions in Sweden.

MORE PROBLEMS: Col. Sosthenes Behn, president of International Telegraph & Telephone, had problems too, dumped them at the President's feet, too. Col. Behn is somewhat upset over his I. T. & T. because much of the property is on foreign soil, partially backed by foreign capital.

TIME OUT: First breather for the President came with lunch time and with lunch came Postmaster General Frank Walker, a genial, witty Irishman much liked by Roosevelt. The afternoon wore on with the President up to the hubs in paper work, phone calls and dictation. Midafternoon came a Presidential proclamation and executive order putting ships carrying strategic materials in dock ahead of others and clearing them first, and extending export licensing control over military items.

port of Tallinn but that thus far the Germans had not entered the capital "because it is very difficult to take a burning city."

Estonia, smallest of the three Baltic states, was absorbed by Russia in 1940 along with Latvia and Lithuania.

The German forces, sweeping up both sides of Lake Peipus, swerved eastward to the south of Tallinn, passing it by for the time being and pushed on to Kingisepp and beyond in the western drive on Leningrad.

A Russian garrison has held out at Tallin, however, under almost constant German aerial bombardment, receiving its supplies by sea.

There were reports yesterday that German artillery had been brought within range and was shelling Tallinn.

Federal Workers In Canada Voted Living-Cost Bonus

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 27 (INS).—Federal employes receiving less than $2,100 per year will be paid a cost-of-living bonus under an order-in-council made public tonight.

A flat rate of 25 cents per week for each 1 per cent increase in living costs since outbreak of war will be paid to all members of the public service receiving $100 monthly or over; and to every householder whose total compensation is less than that sum. Every Federal employe receiving $108 per month who is not the head of a household will receive a bonus of 1 per cent of his total compensation for each rise of 1 per cent in the cost of living.

Cost of living in Canada has increased 11 per cent since war started.

Hull Is in Dark On De Gaulle Offer Of African Bases

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said yesterday he had no knowledge of a reported offer by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader, to lease three bases near Dakar in West Africa to the United States for use as naval bases. He said he had never heard of such an offer.

De Gaullists Willing

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Free French headquarters said today that the followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle would be disposed to collaborate with the United States in case of a request for the use of African bases now in their hands.

Treasury Official Assails Job Snobs

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (AP).—Job snobs in Washington are slowing the Nation's defense program, reports Harford Powell, director of information of the United States Treasury Department.

"Civil service employes who regard red tape as lovingly as any woman regards a new ruby necklace, and who are jealous of the experts brought in from business and industry to help in national defense . . . have the power to delay decisions and harass the activities of the dollar a year men," Powell told several hundred businessmen at a conference at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Japan Cautions U. S. on Gas for Reds

80,000 Nazis Lost at Gomel, Russians Say

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 27.—Germany lost 80,000 killed and wounded soldiers before the Nazis occupied the city of Gomel on the central front, the army newspaper Red Star said today in the first detailed story of that battle.

The account was written by Maj. Gen. I. Berezovsky, who participated in the defense of Gomel.

"The Germans paid the heaviest price for the city," the general wrote, but when they entered Gomel the "orchards were appleless, stores were empty, warehouses grainless and not a single living soul were in its dwellings."

German material losses were said to have been about 300 tanks, several hundred field guns, 100 planes and 1000 vehicles.

The General wrote:

The Germans first attempted to break through to Gomel in July but were repulsed with heavy losses by the Red army counterattack which recaptured Zhlobin and Rogachev.

After a month of further preparations, the Germans threw against Gomel the seventeenth and the 121st Infantry divisions, parts of the Twenty-first Infantry division and remnants of the First Cavalry division reinforced by several tank battalions, a considerable number of armored cars, cannon and 200 planes hands off all trade between Russia and the United States.

Hands Off Ships, Hull Warns Japan

Russian Foreign Comisar Vyacheslaff Molotoff, after listening to the representations made to him by the Japanese Ambassador, Lieut. Gen. Yoshitsugu Talekawa, replied that the Soviet government saw no ground for Japanese anxiety.

Adding double strength to this Soviet warning, Secretary of State Hull yesterday let Japan know that the United States would insist on freedom of the seas in the Pacific Ocean until that historic policy is revoked. He made the forthright statement in answer to a press conference question.

Hull set the stage for a formal rejection of the Japanese protest. He conferred separately with the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Nomura, and with the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky.

Following these conferences, Hull crossed the street to the White House for a late afternoon talk with President Roosevelt.

Nomura, a long-time advocate of United States-Japanese friendship, was questioned about the explosive issue when he arrived at the State Department, but refused to discuss it.

He repeated sentiments that he expressed last Saturday, that he hopes "this as well as other problems will be settled."

Nomura, however, made this significant general comment:

"These days there are many things that we cannot get from your country."

A Fact That Rankles

He was referring to a fact that rankles Japan especially, that the United States now ships supplies to Russia that are denied to Japan.

As Nomura spoke, at least two tankers were en route to Vladivostok with aviation gasoline. One supply ship has already arrived.

From the Japanese viewpoint, the situation was exceedingly embarrassing.

Japan is linked to Russia by a friendship pact providing that each party shall remain neutral if the other is attacked by a third power. Some quarters suggested that the United States might remind Japan of that pact, telling the Nipponese that their own friendship agreement with Russia removes any basis for a protest against the munitions shipments.

The alternatives facing Japan were either to back down, thus perhaps losing face in the Orient, or to use force to prevent the shipments to Vladivostok and thus risk a war with the United States and Russia.

The Japanese Ambassador had told Molotov in Moscow that the shipments through waters close to Japanese territory were creating an "extremely delicate and difficult" situation for Japan.

Molotov's defiant reply included this reassurance, a reminder of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact:

"Atthe same time, the Soviet government confirms that goods purchased by the Soviet Union in the United States are destined in the first place for the satisfaction of the growing needs of the U. S. S. R. in the west in connection with the defensive war imposed upon the Soviet Union, as well as for agricultural needs in the Soviet Far East."

Japan is in a geographical position to lock the gate to Vladivostok, if she decides to use force. Her islands dominate the narrow passages that lead from the Pacific into the Sea of Japan on the route to Vladivostok.

The crisis was expected to come to a head when the tankers, now en route, enter the Sea of Japan. Those known to be en route now left California August 16 and 17. The normal sailing time to Vladivostok is 20 days, thus they should be entering the Sea of Japan early next week.

Official quarters in Washington left no doubt that the Untied States is determined to "deliver the goods" to Russia, despite Japan.

It was indicated that this country proposes to use all available routes to get goods into Russia. In addition to Vladivostok, there is the northern route to Murmansk and Archangel, and the desert route across Iran from the Persian Gulf.

In this connection, it was revealed that Russia will seek short-term RFC loans to finance its purchases of war materials here. Need for the loans is occasioned by difficulties in transporting gold and materials here from Russia to pay for the supplies, it was said. The difficulty was characterized as only temporary.

The Japanese press took an extremely grave view of the presentations against the American shipments to Russia.

Kokumin, Hochi, Nichi, Asahi and other leading newspapers, according to the Associated Press, joined in attacks upon President Roosevelt, accusing him of "war mongering."

The Japanese opposition to the "war shipments" was based, at least in the newspaper columns, on these points:

That a "munitions line" to Russia would violate Japanese "neutrality" in the European war; that the United States itself has set a precedent for action by Japan to "keep war out of the Orient"; that the United States sends supplies to Russia which it denies to Japan; that the United States challenges the position of Japan as "guardian of the peace" in East Asia.

Premier Prince Konoye and Foreign Minister Toyoda were received in audiences by Emperor Hirohito during the day.

Newspapers hinted that Japan would take "other measures" but did not disclose their nature.

'Representations' To Russia Also Raise Direct Issue

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 27.—Raising a direct issue with the United States and Russia, the Japanese government has made formal representations in both Washington and Moscow against shipment of high octane gasoline from America to the Soviet Union through Vladivostok, it was officially announced today.

The representations, which the Domei News Agency calls a protest and which are banner headlined in the press, follow a vehement press campaign in which such shipments were denounced as a violation of Japanese territorial waters and repeated statements by Koh Ishii, spokesman for the cabinet information board, that Japan views such shipments with "grave concern."

But whether Japan will really make oil shipments to Vladivostok a case for a showdown in the Pacific remains to be seen

Emperor Sees Ministers

The Emperor today received in audience both Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda.

In any case official quarters characterized the diplomatic step as a representation rather than a protest and explained that it was based on the practical situation rather than on legal grounds.

As Ishii has repeatedly stated, the Japanese government admits, in contradiction to the press claims, that legally both the Soya and Tsugaru Straits, through which the oil ships presumably must pass, are open waters which any ship has the right to navigate. The inviolability of the Soya Straits in particular was guaranteed by the peace treaty of Portsmouth, and though the Japanese Government has repeatedly advanced the argument that old treaties must be interpreted in the light of new situations, it never has stretched the argument to the point of declaring the straits closed.

But the Japanese government contends the situation cannot be viewed from the legal standpoint alone, and that shipments of aviation fuel to Russia under the very nose of Japan, which has just been denied a like accommodation, involves Japan's national prestige. With the Japanese this counts more than a mere legal issue.

Moreover, Japan holds such shipments have an undesirable effect on peace and order in the Far East, in which Japan is a stabilizing force.

The press has always stressed that the fuel may be used not only against Germany but also against Japan, in case Russia should join the "ABCD" (American, British, Chungking and Dutch East Indies), alliance against Japan.

According to press estimates 10 million gallons of high octane gasoline, loaded on three American and two Russian tankers, has already left the United States en route to Vladivostok, and one American ship loaded with war materials is supposed to have reached that port already.

Sidelights of the War

2 R.A.F. Crews, 6 Civilians Killed as Plane Dives Through Station After Mid-Air Crash

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 27.—Six civilians and the crews of two R. A. F. planes (the specific number of service casualties cannot be revealed), were killed and 26 persons were injured, 17 of them seriously, when the two planes collided in midair over Blackpool, the popular west coast resort town today.

One of the planes plummeting in a corkscrew dive exploded and scattered fragments over a radius of nearly a mile before it crashed through the roof of the central station. All the civilian injuries occurred in the station.

The tail of the second plane broke off and narrowly missed the promenade tier from which thousands of persons witnessed the accident and saw the pilot's body hurtle into the sea.

A member of the crew of the second plane attempted to bail out at a low altitude but his parachute failed to open. Of the civilians killed, one was a policeman and two were women.

A Neat Trick

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—The London newspapers discovered today that an intrepid English farmer is growing 1½ acres of sweet corn, which will go on sale for cob eating at 15 cents per ear, and one writer undertook to explain it this way:

"Corn is a favorite food in America where it is grown largely in the Southern States. It is also regarded as a great delicacy by Anglo-Indians throughout the East.

"The cob is boiled for 15 minutes and served like a potato in its jacket. The leaves are removed, butter or margarine is spread over the corn and it is sprinkled with pepper and salt.

"Then, holding it at the ends, you nibble the corn like a rabbit."

Rams Nazi Planes

Moscow, Aug. 27 (AP).—A young Soviet flier named Kharitonov, recently acclaimed hero of the Soviet Union for bringing down a German plane by ramming it with his own fighter, was reported today to have downed a second German plane by the same method.

(The dispatch did not indicate whether Kharitonov survived the second ramming.)

War on Japan Would Be Folly, Wheeler Says

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of the Congressional nonintervention-ist blac, charged last night that if the United States goes to war with Japan it will do so to preserve "the British domination of Asia rather than help the United States."

He said in an interview that, while there is no sentiment in this country for war with Japan, "there are some within the Administration who apparently have been anxious for war for some time."

Prime Minister Churchill's radio speech on Sunday, he added, "indicates quite clearly to me that he expects hostilities to break out between the United States and Japan." He said "it is laughable to hear Churchill say" that Britain would stand beside this country, and continued:

"After all it is England that has the vital interest in Asia. It is England that has dominated Shanghai for years and every American businessman in Shanghai knows this.

Calls Roosevelt "Isolationist"

"It is England that controls the Chinese city of HongKong. It is England that has vital interests in the Malay States and it is England that has 400,000,000 people in India, the most poverty-stricken country that I have visited in all the world."

Criticizing the administration's aid-to-Russia program in the light of its denunciation of the Soviet Union for its attack on Finland, Roumania and the Baltic States, Wheeler termed President Roosevelt and his cabinet "the greatest isolationists in America today."

"Talk about Lindbergh and myself being isolationists," he said. "The President and his Cabinet are isolating us from every country on the face of the earth by making enemies of all of them except England and in the long run her friendship is of doubtful character—unless we hurry and send our Navy and another A. E. F."

He said the "masses of the people" repeatedly have demonstrated that they will not follow Secretaries Knox and Stimson "and the rest of the warmakers in Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet."

"There is no sentiment in this country for war with Japan, or that we ally ourselves with Russia, and very little sentiment that we should get into the European war," he said.

"While the American people as a whole hate Hitler and everything he stands for, they also hate Stalin and everything he stands for. They have no particular love for the Japanese nor for those who control China and there is no sympathy in this country with England's desire to keep the people of India in virtual slavery."

Wheeler said he could not conceive of either the United States or Japan "being foolish enough" to commit any acts against the other which would provide an excuse for the "war-makers" of either country to plunge them into war.

"Japan is one of our best customers for cotton and petroleum and we are one of her best customers" he said. "There is no reason why we should not live in peace with them."

Lindbergh Gets Space

Oklahoma City, Aug. 27 (AP).—A site accomodating 10,000 persons was assured today for speeches of Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, here Friday night, the America First Committee announced.

When the city council ordered cancellation of the municipal auditorium for Lindbergh's speech, State Chairman Herbert K. Hyde of the committee declared offers of rally sites crowded in on the committee.

The others agreed with him. The labor question, they said, was the basic trouble in the whole defense picture—basic because it involved a question of human relations. After all, they pointed out, production must be achieved by human beings.

If the industrialists appear to be biased, then the American people as a whole also are biased. The Gallup Poll has shown consistently that, when asked what is holding up defense production, those polled place the primary blame on "strikes in defense industries."

The industrialists, it should be pointed out, do not blame labor for all that is wrong with the defense program. They have many concrete ideas on the program as a whole. They think that President Roosevelt long ago should have delegated real authority to a No. 1 production chief, just as Woodrow Wilson delegated authority to Bernard M. Baruch in 1918. They think that a lot of other things should have been done.

Right now, however, these men have a job to do, and that job is to get the tools of war out as fast as they can, with such plant facilities as are available.

They Have A Job To Do—Fast

Notwithstanding all the obstructions, they say, the arms production program is "beginning to roll," and they say a sharp upturn will be noticeable by November. American industry, they say, is like a thoroughbred that can't altogether be held in check.

But even so, they add, the United States is producing far less than it is capable of producing with present plant capacity and tools—perhaps only 85 per cent of what it ought to be producing. Putting it in terms of guns, they say, only 85 are being turned out where the number ought to be 100.

WHAT THE NEW DEAL STATISTICIANS in Washington fail to tell the people, they say, is that a strike in one plant can tie up production in a dozen others, and that after every strike there is a period of demoralization and a consequent lag in production.

It is a melancholy circumstance, in the view of the industrialists, that there are no laws to curb local union leaders who precipitate unjustified strikes, and that the only solution the Administration seems to have is to call out the Army or to take over a plant.

"Let me give you some idea of what is going on in this country," said one important manufacturer. "Here, read this."

It was a newspaper account of new labor trouble on an old battleground, the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, which turns out aircraft parts. The C. I. O. had thrown a line of pickets around the plant; it was called a "dues inspection blockade."

The C. I. O. had nothing against the Aluminum Co. The pickets were maintaining their blockade to see that only workers who were members of the C. I. O., and who were paid up on their dues, were allowed to go through the factory gates. Company officials said 400 of the plant's 7500 employes were kept outside, thus slowing down work.

Is War a Signal For Left-Wing Organizers?

The master mind behind the blockade was a familiar figure. He was Al Balint, regional director of the National Association of Die Casting Workers, C. I. O. A few months ago, at a hearing before the Dies Committee, Balint was unmasked as an alien, a former convict and a Communist. He is still very much on the job as a C. I. O. official.

There was no Federal agency to which the Aluminum Co. could apply in this case. The blockade finally was broken up, after two days, by Sheriff Joseph M. Sweeney, of Cleveland, and 14 of his deputies.

The industrialists interviewed by The Post said that the National Labor Relations Board seemed to be completely oblivious of the fact that the United States was in danger. The board's "left-wing field agents," they said, looked upon the war as a signal to harass any plant that was not organized by the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L., regardless of how the workers themselves felt about it.

"The Army and the Navy wait in the lobby," said one industrialist, "while these agents of the social revolution are taking up our time. Washington pounds us on the back and begs us to produce. In the meantime, the National Labor Relations Board and other agencies do their utmost to close our doors."

President Roosevelt, in a speech last March in which he sought to convey to 132 million Americans the meaning of the Nation's huge defense program, said:

"Whether you are a steel worker or a stevedore, a machinist or a housewife, a farmer or a banker, a storekeeper or a manufacturer—to all of you it will mean sacrifice in behalf of your country and your liberties."

The industrialists agree that this sounded fine. But when, they ask, is the President going to tell the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. that he was talking to them as well as to the housewife, the banker and the manufacturer?

Tomorrow: Congress Dodges the Tax Issue.

resistance.

Subsidiary British thrusts eastward were declared to have occupied Gilan, a town 20 miles inside Iran, and Sar-I-Pul, 35 miles to the north of that point, in a continuing and uninterrupted advance.

The Soviet invaders, information from Moscow indicated, were loosing overwhelming power in roughly parallel offensives proceeding from Russian Armenia and from Russian Azerbaijan.

The first of these had overrun Tabriz, Iran's second city, and continued on to Turkmanchai; 50 miles southeast of Tabriz.

The second, moveing down near the coast of the Caspian Sea, was declared to have captured Dilman, only 100 miles short of Teheran, and in the process occupied the highway junction of Ardebil and the coastal town of Lissar.

The British were anxious for a quick settlement of the Iranian problem, among other things for its effect on Turkey, whose leaders were reported tonight to be concerned over rumors that Germany would ask them to eject all Russian and British engineers and technicians from Turkey.

Turks are said to fear that if they fail to comply, Germany would march into Turkey from Thrace and seize control of the Dardanelles and Turkey's long Black Sea coast.

Neutral diplomats expressed similar fears, although these men expect Germany to await the outcome of her campaign in the Ukraine.

If the Germans reach Russia's Caucasus before winter, according to informed quarters, Turkey and Iran would be doomed to become battlegrounds on which the Germans would battle Russia and Britain for the Middle East's oil and the gateway to the Orient.

Admiral Killed

The British continued to consolidate control of Iran's great Western oil supplies, air-borne troops seizing at Haft Kel the northern end of a major pipeline whose Southern terminus at Abadan on the Persian Gulf already was in British hands.

Iran's minute navy was reported substantially wiped out in a brush in the gulf with British warships in which Iranian Admiral Bayendor was killed, two Iranian sloops were sunk and four gunboats captured.

At least six of Iran's handful of warplanes—estimated to total 13 at the beginning of the invasion—were said to have been knocked out.

Gone, too, or substantially so, was the country's control of its railroad and highway communications.

All this, said neutral observers here, was believed to have made Reza Shah Parhlavi realize that he must come to terms.

"We believe that the Detective Bureau should be reorganized with a view to improving its efficiency. We believe that the Police Department at present is undermanned."

OPACS to Study Sugar Price Problem Today

By the Associated Press

Problems resulting from the establishment of a $3.50 per 100 pounds price ceiling on sugar will be discussed here this afternoon by cane and beet refiners and officials of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

OPACS officials said all phases in the price situation in refined markets would be considered.

The meeting is an attempt to clarify the outlook for the domestic and foreign sugar industry. Wartime developments—including the price fixing order and a threatened shortage of ships to carry Philippine sugar to the mainland—have confused the sugar situation.

'Penny Milk' Assured D. C. If Consumption Rises 270%

approved a milk price increase for producers?

Was it sheer coincidence, or otherwise, that the approved increase—40 cents a hundredweight on fluid milk and 20 cents on milk to be processed as cream—is exactly the same as the raise which the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association demanded of Washington dairies just a month ago, but without success?

Impossible Task

Since 8,700 half-pints of milk were served daily, without charge, last spring in the 39 public elementary schools which Dr. Ballou urged for participation in a "penny program," and it would be impossible to increase consumption 270 per cent because the 39 have a total enrollment of only 15,156, is it the intention to penalize the community which has a WPA-sponsored free school lunch program?

What relationship is there, if any, between the candid opposition of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association to expansion of surplus milk distribution in Washington, comparable with what is taking place in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities, and the Agricultural Department's dilatory, equivocal tactics here?

(Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, expressed hope in a letter to Secretary Wickard on August 14 that an end might come soon "to the oft recurring suspicion that this Milk Association can do pretty much as it pleases with your subordinates in the Department of Agriculture.")

In connection with the parenthetical paragraph, District Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday indorsed the principle of a bill introduced recently by Schulte which would enlarge the Capital's milkshed. This would be done by permitting milk producers in distant States to ship cream here for sale provided it passed health tests of the United States Public Health Service.

Mrs. Doyle Comments

Such an opening up of the market would, among other things, increase surpluses and thereby facilitate the extension of this excess milk to relief and low-income families, as well as to undernourished school children, with the aid of Federal subsidization.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, last night expressed hope that the sudden 270 per cent obstacle will not kill chances for a penny project in the schools, under which impoverished boys and girls would receive a half-pint each day, with the District government paying 1 cent a bottle and Agriculture assuming the remainder of the cost.

Incidentally, the yardstick adopted August 14 by Wickard has one point that says: "The school milk program cannot be put into effect in any area, school or institution if the normal consumption of milk is at a level which precludes an increase in consumption by more than 50 per cent."

Isn't it a long way from 50 per cent to 270 per cent?

His proclamation affecting the Philippines placed under export control all military equipment, munitions and component parts, machinery, tools or materials or supplies necessary for their manufacture, servicing or operation, which had not been made subject to control by previous proclamations.

The practical effect, said a White House announcement, would be to "limit the exportation from the Philippine Islands of the materials to which reference is made, but to permit them to flow freely from the United States.'"

General licenses would be issued permitting exportation of the newly added materials from the United States, but not from the Philippines, the announcement said.

The general license will not be enjoyed by firms on the blacklist of South American firms with Axis connections.

It was learned that the proclamation had been issued at the request of Francis B. Sayre, High Commissioner in the Philippines. The effect will be to conserve supplies of food and raw materials needed in the Philippines which otherwise might be exported to Japan.

Aggressive Defense Shown In Maneuvers

By Richard C. Hottelet
United Press Staff Writer

With Second Army in Arkansas, Aug. 27.—The Seventh Corps, split into two opposing forces, tonight demonstrated the principle of a dynamic attack-defense.

For the first time in this Army's maneuvers, there were no simulated divisions. Actual forces faced each other in combat with tear gas, "armored rations" and the defense of a railroad line included.

A Red force of the Thirty-fifth and Twenty-seventh Divisions, plus the Seventy-fifth Field Artillery Brigade, was given the mission of breaking through a Blue defense of only the Thirty-third Division, to cut the Missouri Pacific Railroad between Gurdon and Camden.

To do so, the Reds sought to hold the Blues by frontal attack while strong combat teams encircled either flank in an eastward drive to the railroad. Toward evening the Blue attack-defense strategy was ordered.

Simply, it is a "striking defense" by inferior numbers to knock the advancing enemy off balance, and splinter his concentrated blow by compelling him to redistribute his units.

The plan has been employed with telling effect in the present European war. Outnumbered German advance elements have held their positions until the main body moved up not by digging in for a passive defense, but by striking at the enemy to keep him disorganized.

Scout Patrol Tells How It Is Captured

With the Second Army in Arkansas, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Fifty-eighth Field Artillery Brigade message center received this communication from a scouting patrol:

"Red troops about 200 yards to our front. Advancing."

A few minutes later:

"Red troops now 100 yards to our front. Still advancing."

And shortly thereafter:

"Red troops now on top of us.

"Signed . . .

"P. S. We are now captured."

Generals Praise Stamina of Troops

By the Associated Press

With the Third Army in Southwest Louisiana, Aug. 27.—The Third Army called an abrupt halt today to a simulated invasion of Louisiana by way of the Gulf Coast after learning in quick fashion lessons it would need to know in repelling a real enemy onslaught.

Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger, commanding the Third Army's more than a quarter million troops, stopped the maneuvers after defending soldiers were completely surrounded in an enemy pincer attack by invaders who had successfully "landed" on the Louisiana Gulf Coast and pushed northward.

The generals leading the troops in the field were warm in praise of the stamina shown by the rapidly toughening soldiers, most of them in khaki less than a year.

'Lost Battalion' Shows Up on Coast

Centralia, Wash., Aug. 27 (AP).—The plight of a "lost battalion" stood out today as one of the more memorable highlights of the West Coast's greatest war games, completed after a week of far-flung action.

The most footsore and weary unit among the nearly 100,000 troops probably was the Second Battalion of the 185th Infantry, Fortieth Division.

Cold, drenched, hungry and exhausted, they came out of the wilds of Southern Pacific County after harrowing experiences that included, a member of the marching detachment said, eating of wild berries and an occasional crawfish from a meandering gully stream.

The member of the detachment who told of the grueling hike, close to 72 hours in all with food rations for only 48 hours, said the unit had been sent out on a flanking movement up the deep river against a force of the mythical Pacific Coast invader.

Battle's Roar or Baby's Cry All the Same to Air Flivvers

(Editor's Note: The flivver or "grasshopper" plane is making an appearance in the Texas, Louisiana and Tennessee Army maneuvers—running errands, carrying umpires and landing in any available open space. William T. Piper, known as aircraft's Henry Ford, tells for The Post special news service of the uses to which the little machines could be put in wartime.)

By William T. Piper

Lock Haven, Pa., Aug. 27 (AP).—The other day something happened to bolster my contention that small, light airplanes—known popularly as flivver planes—are an almost untapped means of quick transportation.

A young mother, visiting Lock Haven's airport, suddenly remembered that it was her baby's feeding time.

The baby was 22 miles away, 40 minutes by automobile along a winding mountain road.

"I've got it!" said one of our pilots. "I'll fly you over.

In eight minutes as the crow flies, hopping over the intervening mountain ridges, the young woman had been landed in the front yard of the summer resort cabin where the baby had been left in care of a maid.

All Over in 15 Minutes

In 15 minutes more the feeding was completed and the baby was asleep. The mother was back at the airport in less total elapsed time than it would have taken her to reach the cabin by road.

Because small airplanes in the $1000 to $2000 class are a ready means of transportation, they are being used for the first time in the history of the United States Army in maneuvers.

They are easy to fly, they land practically anywhere and they establish quick lines of communication.

During the Texas maneuvers this summer one of the commanding officers, harassed by clogged roads, called to his aide, "Radio the fort and tell them to send me a grasshopper."

The radio was clogged, too. Messages were moving slowly.

"What's a grasshopper, sir?" asked the aide.

"Never mind," said his superior, "Just tell them to send me one."

Presently a flivver plane landed in front of the office.

Thirty minutes later a radio message arrived from the fort saying the plane, dubbed a grasshopper by the Army, had taken off and would report for duty presently.

Much in Demand

Flivvers, with their 65 or 75 horsepower engines, have been so much in demand during the maneuvers that the game umpires, who use them most, have had a hard time laying hands on them. Regular Army pilots, accustomed to flying engines of 1000 horsepower and more, keep coming around and borrowing them.

When a flivver turns up missing, nine chances out of 10 an Army pilot is out pleasure-hopping in it.

The flivvers are used to direct traffic, to carry messages, to check on camouflage and to spot the results of artillery fire.

The ground arms of the Army are fond of the machines.

We have heard much talk of late about a separate air force. Most of us laymen are not well enough acquainted with the subject to pass judgment on it. But one thing is evident: all branches of the Army need air transportation, under their own control.

Frank, 18, Wants To Be a Soldier, And May Be, Too

New York, Aug. 27. (INS)—Eighteen-year old Frank Mancini may be allowed to enlist in the Army—if only he stops going around impersonating soldiers.

Frank, a dishwasher, appeared in General Sessions Court today for sentencing as a result of his arrest August 4 for wearing a military policeman's uniform. He explained he did it to impress some of his girl friends.

But Frank walked into court wearing the same uniform that led to his difficulties. And three justices looked at him sternly and asked whether he was still trying to be a funny man and what was the idea. Frank said he wanted to be a soldier, had written the Army about enlisting—and his landlady had locked up his clothes.

The court put him on probation for three years and asked the Legal Aid Society to see what could be done about getting Frank into the Army—provided he gets his civilian clothes back on again.

Steel Workers Won't Stop For Labor Holiday

Chicago, Aug. 27 (INS).—There will be no cessation of the thunderous clatter and roar of the steel mills this Labor Day week-end.

Nearly 60,000 steelworkers in the Chicago area will forego their traditional holiday to continue the production of the metal vital to the national defense program, a survey revealed tonight.

"It is no longer a question of how much steel can be provided to industry, but how soon," J. L. Perry, president of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, said.

"Delay in the production of steel means delay in national defense.

Some 46,000 employes in the three big Carnegie-Illinois plants in Gary, Ind., and South Chicago, Ill., will be paid time and one-half for their Labor Day work.

Mosby, member of Battery F, 54th Coast Artillery, is from Texas. No details of the insubordination, assault or break charges were given.

OPM Puts Teeth In Priorities Rule

Acts to Force Manufacturers To Accept Defense Orders

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The OPM yesterday issued sweeping regulations forcing American manufacturers to accept defense orders and thus, for the first time, make the priorities system mean what the word implies.

The order, issued by Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr., requires all producers to accept defense contracts even if such acceptance will prevent or delay deliveries on civilian orders or defense orders with lower priority ratings.

Hitherto, manufacturers who voluntarily accepted priority business were required to fill the orders ahead of other contracts, but—significantly—they were not compelled to take the defense business in the first instance.

This anomalous situation resulted in several cases of manufacturers refusing to take orders for steel from freight car builders and farm machinery makers, which carried priority ratings, but at the same time filling steel orders for nondefense industries, such as auto manufacturers.

In another approach to the iron and steel problem, the OPM and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply yesterday issued a joint warning that the strictest enforcement of the price schedules on iron and steel scrap would be initiated on Tuesday.

The threat of sanctions against violators of the OPACS' price ceilings was made by OPACS Administrator Leon Henderson, OPM Chief Knudsen and other OPM officials at a meeting of scrap dealers and brokers and scrap consumers.

Purpose of the strict enforcement, Henderson said, was to insure and to increase the flow of scrap, which might otherwise be hoarded in the expectation of higher prices. He indicated that enforcement of the order had not been pursued with all the vigor possible and that numerous violations had taken place.

A. D. Whiteside, OPM iron and steel chief, told the gathering that a mandatory priority order on the scrap could be expected within a few days. The order will require the setting aside of emergency pools of a specified percentage of scrap produced in order to meet urgent needs.

The possibility of a Nation-wide iron and steel scrap collection campaign was hinted at by another OPM official, R. C. Allen. He said that the Agriculture Department was instructing county agents to urge farmers to sell cast-off and rusting farm machinery and scrap now lying around their farmyards.

Another important feature of the yesterday's priority regulations disclosed that in the category of "defense orders," and hence subject to priority treatment, were contracts for materials to be delivered to Great Britain and all its dominions and possessions, Belgium, China, Greece, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Russia and Yugoslavia—all nations which have been attacked by Germany.

How the new regulation is to be enforced was not made clear. However, it was believed that the OPM could deny allocations of materials and transportation facilities to violators.

Army Ordnance Group Urges Arms 'Czar'; Commends Military Personnel n Editorial

Copyright by New York Times

The Army Ordnance Association yesterday officially advocated immediate appointment of a single, directing head for the arms program.

Through an editorial in the new issue of Army Ordnance, official publication of the association, it listed this lack as the first weakness in the defense program.

"There is still no one administrator of defense production," the journal stated. "Yet the job continues to grow too fast for anything but single, undivided attention with full authority."

Many organizations and informed individuals have taken this stand since the inception of the program, maintaining that successive creation of boards and bureaus, headed by the Office of Production Management have demonstrated the ultimate weakness of any set-up in which officials have only final authority to make recommendations to the President.

Extraordinary importance was attached to the fact that the ordnance association took this stand, however, because of the fact that it is a non-partisan organization composed of 6000 executives of private industry and army engineers. It was founded in 1919 for the primary purpose of fostering a preparedness program that would eliminate the waste and inefficiency that characterized preparedness for American participation in the first World War.

Editorial Lists 10 Points

The editorial in which appointment of a single directing head for the defense program has advocated, listed 10 points each on the "credit" side and the "debit" side of the arms program.

"1. Our military armament leadership reveals vision and experience. The herculean effort is in the hands of trained officers who know the job from A to Z, have the fearlessness of their convictions and the determination for sound, speedy results, OPM gives inspiring support.

"2. Industrial cooperation — on the part of management and labor —has been of a piece with its opposite military file. In the main, the team works well. Small profits—in some cases as low as one twenty-fifth of 1 per cent—are the rule.

"3. The ordnance manufacturing arsenals have proved their weight in gold. They are operating at record production. Their facilities are modernized, their technicians are of inestimable help toward educating private industry, the morale of their employes is of the highest.

Exceeds Expectations

"4. The ordnance district system of centralized control with decentralized operation, organized 23 years ago, has exceeded all expectations for volume of work, caliber of product, and sound administration. Competitive bids wherever possible have sustained low prices.

"5. Supply and maintenance of military armament in the field is well organized and functions smoothly. Ordnance soldiers are being trained in the care and repair of equipment on a scale equaling the finest vocational schools in the land. Discipline is excellent.

"6. Industrial-mobilization plans, sound from the start, have been adhered to. There has been no panicky decision, no haphazard judgment, no scuttling of principle for expediency, no favorites to play.

"7. Armament engineering, working in close cooperation with industry and science, has produced standard designs of new fighting equipment in every instance equal, and in many cases superior, to that of any other country.

"8. Facilities for new production, particularly in the difficult classes of artillery ammunition and small-arms ammunition, are being built—or have been built—on a vast scale with no delay as far as ordnance administrative action is concerned.

Well Organized

"9. Inspection of the gigantic quantities of armament soon to come out of the production lines, and of the great amounts already produced, is well organized and in hands well qualified to cope with this tremendous task.

"10. Finally, ordnance production is on the way in ever-increasing volume. The trend is decidedly favorable despite handicaps. Teamwork is the dominant note. Most obstacles to speedier progress involve factors beyond the military province. The obligation is national; the effort must be too."

On the "debit side" the picture was described as follows:

"1. There is still no one administrator of defense production. Yet the job continues to grow too fast for anything but single, undivided attention with full authority.

"2. Defense strikes, now somewhat lessened, have been a disgraceful blot on the defense record. They should be outlawed once and for all in order that the vast majority of willing hands many do their share in defense production.

"3. Except in the Army and Navy, the industrial mobilization plan has been given only lip service by many who should know its provisions and follow its doctrines. A national emergency is no time for experimentation; least of all is it the occasion for half-baked ideas that put social niceties ahead of the common defense.

Delays Assailed

"4. Delay in applying the Baruch plan for a ceiling on all prices has added millions to the cost of national defense and points the way to monetary inflation which may defeat the very purpose of the defense effort. The Baruch plan is workable. It should be put in the hands of men who can make it work—before it is too late.

"5. The vertical type of organization in the Office of Production Management at long last points the way to speedy and effective cooperative measures between industry and Government. The delay was costly.

"6. Constantly changing requirements, now piled high, have prevented an orderly approach to scheduled production. The time has come to fix the objective.

"7. The super-organization for defense is entirely too large and unwieldy. Without disparaging one iota the spendid work being done by experts in many lines, the old adage that too many cooks spoil the broth still applies.

"8. The cost of the combined military and naval effort, staggering as it is, demands that every precaution for the prevention of waste, the economical use of Government funds and Government property, and the scrupulous regard for quality of product be exerted at all times. There are evidences that this homely doctrine is not always followed.

"9. Training of skilled mechanics got off to a slow start. Future needs of our national defense indicate that this type of training must receive more concerted attention on the part of the Government and industry.

"10. There is no realization on the part of our people as a whole of the full meaning of an all-out defense effort. Until there is such realization, much stress will be at cross-purposes and the selfish interests of various groups will continue to be given consideration over the national-defense needs."

Hillman Announces Survey To Avert Priorities Slump

Surveys of industrial plants and communities liable to be hit by "priorities unemployment"—the shutting down of plants through scarcity of raw materials—with the aim of obtaining defense subcontracts to keep the affected factories operating, was announced yesterday by OPM Chief Sidney Hillman.

Plants and communities faced with shutdowns will be certified to the War and Navy Departments, it was indicated, so that special consideration can be given to converting the facilities to defense work and occupying them with defense subcontracts which would carry priority orders for materials.

On other labor fronts, storm clouds appeared to be clearing yesterday.

Navy Secretary Knox reported a decision would be made "in a very short time" on a plan of operation and clarification of employe relations in the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. yards, occupied by the Navy after an 18-day strike.

Purchases Considered

Plans under consideration, the Secretary told a press conference, range from outright Government purchases to renting. Possibilities also include operations under a new corporation, or under the Defense Plant Corporation, or restoration of the Kearny, N. J., yards to its former owners or other private concerns.

In Detroit an A. F. of L. union won a collective bargaining election from a rival C. I. O. organization after a strike last week which tied up the city's street car and bus facilities for five days.

An offical count of ballots in a special election to settle claims for bargaining rights showed:

A. F. of L. Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Operators, 3076.

C. I. O. State, County and Municipal Workers of America, 1925.

C. I. O. leaders declared, however, that the election "is not going to settle anything," and that they would continue organizing efforts.

In New York the board of transportation announced wage increases of six million dollars a year affecting most of the city's transit system employes in a move designed to iron out a dispute of long standing with the C. I. O. Transport Workers Union.

Instead, the new pay schedules provoked a new clash with T. W. U. President Michael Quill who said they mean about 7 cents an hour increase for some workers and as little as 2 cents for others. Quill also charged Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia had broken a promise to allow the union to consult with the board before the action was taken.

Of the 31,780 transit employes, 25,741 will benefit by the pay increase while 2,400 others will have their hours reduced.

The C. I. O. Utility Workers' Organizing Committee at the Warren (Ohio) power station of the Ohio Public Service Co. voted to strike at 10 p. m. next Wednesday.

The workers wired President Roosevelt and Sidney Hillman, of the Office of Production Management, of their decision, and asked the Government to take over the power plant until the dispute, which involves higher pay and exclusive bargaining rights, is settled. Wage scales and demands have not been disclosed.

Discrimination Hit

Locally, the six-man OPM committee on fair employment practice made a White House call during which it recommended to President Roosevelt that he direct all Federal agencies and departments to eliminate discrimination against Negroes in the hiring of Government employes.

Mark Ethridge, Louisville, Ky., publisher who is chairman of the committee, said the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission had shown fine cooperation by placing a no-discrimination clause in all defense contracts let since June 27, date of an executive order urging an end to racial discrimination.

Sergeant Kills Two, Injures 4 in Flight

Manila, (Thursday), Aug. 28 (AP).—A United States Army staff sergeant who was not an air pilot crashed a Martin bomber today, killing two Filipino civilians and injuring three others in an attempted takeoff on a flight which army officials said was unauthorized.

The plane destroyed four native shacks occupied by Nichols Field laborers. The big bomber was wrecked, the sergeant injured.

SEC Revokes Allender Co.'s Registration

The Securties and Exchange Commission yesterday revoked the over-the-counter registration of Allender Co., Inc., of New York, for alleged "wilful and flagrant violations of the antifraud provisions" of section 17 (A) of the Securities Act of 1933; section 15(C) (1) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the commission's rule X-15C1-2, adopted under the 1934 Act.

The action culminates proceedings ordered by the SEC last February to determine whether the firm's broker and dealer registration should be suspended or revoked. Counsel for the SEC Trading and Exchange Division, in presenting the case, had charged:

"That respondent engaged in fraudulent practices in the sale of securities to its customers by the use of false and misleading representations, by the taking of large secret profits which purporting to act as the customers' agent in such transactions, and by charging its uninformed customers prices having no reasonable relation to the then prevailing market prices for such securities."

Light Armor May Be Worn By U. S. Soldiers

Cleveland, Aug. 27 (AP).—Lightweight armor for individual American soldiers is the subject of experiments now being conducted secretly in foundries and forge shops, W. H. Eisenman, secretary of the American Society for Metals, said tonight.

In a radio interview (WGAR), Eisenman said experiments which opened at the end of the last war have continued.

"Contrary to the general impression," Eisenman said, 'armor was not discarded because it proved vulnerable to firearm charges. Rather, it was the speed of war's pattern that forced the change. Soldiers could not move quickly enough from one field position to another when impeded by heavy armor.

"Our present day alloys can and do protect men from rifle bullets. Americans have developed a plate steel visor for a helmet capable of resisting fire from an automatic revolver at 800 foot seconds," Eisenman said.

Airline Official Enters War Work

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 27 (AP).—D. B. Colyer, retiring vice president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, will serve in Washington as the American representative of the Canadian steel controller, F. H. Kilbourn, it was made known today at Munitions Minister C. D. Howe's office. Colyer retires from T. C. A. September 1.

Fingerprinting of Everyone In U. S. Urged for Defense

By International News Service

A special American mission sent to England to study civilian defense yesterday recommended that "the entire population" of the United States should be fingerprinted for "identification of casualties."

Without mentioning the possibility of an invasion of this continent or of possible bombing raids on the United States, the mission, in its report to Civilian Defense Director F. H. LaGuardia, said:

"One central casualty clearing bureau should be established for each local defense authority or municipality under control of the police for identifying and recording the injured and dead."

The mission, which left New York by Clipper on July 12 and returned 11 days ago, also recommended that necessary civilian defense personnel, including police and firemen, should be exempted from military service under the draft law.

Members of the commission said that "many British subjects expressed their appreciation for what the United States is contributing to the war."

New proposals recommended in the report included:

"Assignment of a special attache representing the American OCD at the United States Embassy in London; provisions for paid, full-time employes necessary for a skeleton civilian defense setup; exemption of policemen and firemen from military service; erection of a national testing and experimental research laboratory "dealing exclusively with problems of civilian defense"; making of "complete plans for building of shelters in vulnerable areas;" plans for evacuation or protection of children in danger zones; earmarking of buildings that could be requisitioned in emergencies for civilian defense purposes; detailed plans for air-raid signals, and provisions for "the duplicating and safe storing of vital records."

Members of the American Mission that made the study in London are Ctpt. Donald S. Leonard, of the Michigan State police; Harry H. Prince, New York Housing Authority architect; Glen C. Richards, secretary of the Detroit department of public works; Maj. Frank M. Roessing, Pittsburgh director of public works; Arthur W. Wallander, New York City, deputy police inspector, and Dr. Huntington Williams, Baltimore commissioner of health.

Planes Slash Foe's Territory Day and Night

By International News Service

London, (Thursday), Aug. 28.—After a heavy daylight attack on northern France, British bombers slashed again at the German occupied territory during the night and early today.

Searchlight and gun flashes were seen to light the sky on the coast around Dunkirk and Calais, and the rumbles of muffled explosions was heard along the English coast.

Starting at sunrise, an endless procession of British planes paraded across the Channel in a steady stream and blasted Germany's continental war machine after "heavier-than-ordinary" night raids laid waste military targets in Cologne, Le Havre, Boulogne, industrial targets in western Germany and airdromes in northern France.

A minimum of 10 German planes were shot down during the morning alone, according to an air ministry announcement.

Eight British planes were admitted lost.

Nazis Claim 10 Planes

Berlin, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Nazi spokesmen said tonight that German fighter planes downed 10 British planes over the Channel coast today, while antiaircraft batteries accounted for another in that area and a twelfth over Helgoland Bight.

Bombing planes were reported by the official news agency to have carried out a destructive raid Tuesday night on the air field at Ismailia on the Suez Canal. It said thousands of pounds of bombs fell among hangars, runways and barracks, "causing great damage" and starting many fires.

The high command claimed that 23 British planes were downed Tuesday in attacks on Helgoland Bight and the Channel coast.

British bombing raids on several towns in western and southwestern Germany during the night were acknowledged. They were reported particularly severe at Cologne.

The high command said German planes raided Alexandria, Britain's eastern Mediterranean naval base, Monday night and scored bomb hits on harbor works and railroads "with great destruction."

Safe Passage For a Leg

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

British limb makers fit out an artificial limb for legless Wing Commander Douglas Bader, who broke his set of legs when he bailed out over enemy territory. The Germans offered safe conduct for fliers who would bring over a new set and the R. A. F. last week dropped a spare limb for Bader

American Bags 2 Nazis, Shot Battling Third

By International News Service

London, Aug. 27.—William Robert Dunn, of Houston, Tex., a pilot in one of the two American Eagle Squadrons of the Royal Air Force, shot down two German Messerschmitt fighters today to become high-scorer among the American volunteer fliers, but was wounded in battle with a third Messerschmitt.

Although bleeding in the foot where he was struck by a piece of cannon shell, Dunn nevertheless managed to bring his damaged Hurricane fighter back across the English Channel to his home base and tonight lay in a hospital, hurt but happy.

Chalked up to his credit were five German planes he has shot down—more than any other American Eagle pilot. But his total of Luftwaffe victims was actually seven. For he had shot down two German bombers with a Lewis gun while he was a member of a Canadian infantry unit stationed in southeast England last year.

Both of the Eagle squadrons participated this afternoon in the second of two R. A. F. daylight sweeps across the Channel. Dunn, however, experienced trouble with his oxygen apparatus shortly after climbing into the upper reaches of the sky. The young Texan therefore flew lower than the rest of his squadron.

Returing alone from his sweep over France, Dunn was attacked from behind by a Messerschmitt-109, but the German pilot overshot his mark. Dunn pulled up the nose of his Hurricane and gave the Messerschmitt a good burst of fire. The German flier baled out as his plane spun down to its doom.

Just then a second Messerschmitt dived down on Dunn. The American flier once more pulled the nose of his machine up and let go a short but well-aimed burst. In a split second the Messerschmitt was wrapped in flames and plummeting down to earth.

The third Messerschmitt to lunge at Dunn was luckier than its two predecessors. It scored a hit on the Hurricane's fuselage, smashing the radio telephone apparatus. A piece of shell tearing through the fuselage hit Dunn's foot.

For a moment the Texan thought he would have to bale out over hostile territory. But his engine was still running and he decided to make a try for it back across the Channel. Weakened by his wound, he managed to land on an airdrome in southeast England.

Defend America Group Urges U. S. Control Atlantic

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—In a statement declaring that the battle of the Atlantic was far from won, the committee to defend America declared tonight that Americans were being lulled into a false optimism by "periodic decreases in the sinking of Allied shipping by German raiders."

"A thorough test has demonstated that use of the United States Navy for 'patrol' service is not enough," the committee said. "Our naval vessels must be used for convoys, with all the shooting implications that go with convoys. . . .

"The time has come for the United States to use its naval and air forces to take over the Atlantic, with orders to shoot on sight German naval and aircraft, of all kinds."

Navy Won't Ship Men's Families to Hawaii

Honolulu, Aug. 26. (AP)—The Navy announced today it no longer would provide passage for dependents of Navy men transferred to Hawaii. The action was taken because of the acute housing situation and high rents—in some cases $100 a month for a one bedroom house.

The army issued a similar regulation last month.

Leaders Knew Power of Reds, Nazis Told

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The fact that sections of the German public are speculating whether Nazi leaders have not underestimated the strenth and staying power of Soviet Russia is admitted and an attempt to put an end to the conjecture is made by the Schwarze Korps, organ of Heinrich Himmler, the head of the SS Black Guards.

In an article titled "Did we guess wrong?" the paper writes:

"At the beginning of the war there were actually people who thought it would be over in three weeks. If one answered them by pointing out that our soldiers stood against the mightily armed nation of 190 million covering an enormous area in which there were only the poorest of transport facilities, they would say: But after three weeks a revolution will break out in Russia."

The article, which covers the paper's entire front page and half of its second page, proceeds to attack this viewpoint, stating "an internal revolution in Russia would be pointless, for then there would soon be nothing left to revolutionize. It is not in the dynamics of national socialism to let others draw its chestnuts out of the fire for it. National socialism is itself a revolution and no other can exist beside it.

"Bolshevism will not fall due to any imponderable causes but alone in the crucible of the better—the German—revolution into which is has madly hurled itself.

"Soviet Russia offers the best example of the fact that people infected and befogged by democracy can only with the greatest difficulty rise against their ruling professional revolutionaries."

Pounding its point with the additional example of America, the articles asked the rhetorical question: "Does any one believe that 'the people' of the United States any time in the foreseeable future will overthrow Roosevelt and the gamblers who are driving them into a military, political and economic game of chance?"

Running down the scale of European examples, the article lashes out with particular energy at the people of Greece, who, it states, "have never hesitated at throwing up the barricades when a King was to be overthrown and a republic set up or when a republic was to be overthrown and a King installed. But when their monarch began sacrificing people and state for interests of his foreign paymasters they stayed at home."

District Boy, 15, Broadcasts With Quiz Kids

A 15-year-old Washington boy and a 13-year-old Richmond girl joined the erudite Quiz Kids in a broadcast from the Mayflower Hotel last night, and acquitted themselves creditably. They were Melvin Silver, of 5411 Fourth Street Northwest, and Edna Heenan, 13, of Richmond.

Melvin, a junior at Roosevelt High School, has appeared with the Kids once before in Chicago. His fund of information, according to his father, Sol Z. Silver, comes from a habit he has had for years of reading all the magazines, newspapers and books he could get his hands on.

The Kids had just returned from a two days' visit at Fort Meade. With their corps of announcers, technicians and parents, they left Washington for Chicago last night.

James Roosevelt Joins Information Staff of Donovan

Capt. James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, has joined the staff of Col. William J. Donovan, coordinator of information.

An official said yesterday that Capt. Roosevelt had no special title in his new job, which was that of a military adviser and liason man between the Information Office and other branches of Government.

The President's son returned from a hasty trip around the world as a military observer on June 11 with information which he said he was taking to his superiors in the Marine Corps.

The Office of Coordinator of Information was established by executive order on July 11 to "collect and analyze all information and data, which may bear upon national security."

Betty Cordon Is Elected 76th Successor to Brenda

DEBUTANTES' CHOICE—By a vote of 120 debutantes last night at New York, Betty Cordon, a blonde from Raleigh, N. C., was named the Glamour Girl of 1941. She is 5 feet 1½ inches tall and weighs 100 pounds

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 27.—Step right this way, men, and meet Miss Glamourpuss of 1941-42. Almost 5 feet 2 with eyes of blue, Betty Cordon—blonde debutante—was officially elected the season's successor of Mrs. Shipwreck Kelly, nee Brenda Frazier, at a cocktail rout and pretzel party at the Stork Club this eve'n tide.

It is unofficially estimated that Miss Cordon is the seventy-sixth debutante in the last three years to have been elected glamour girl successor to Mrs. Kelly.

The election of Miss Cordon, 18, by popular ballot at the Stork Club is striking proof that democracy and press-agentry still live. The latest claimant to the glamour crown was elected by a gathering of 1941-42 debutantes and their boy friends, kindly corralled by the club's press agent.

"I'm very excited," cried Miss Cordon happily when the ballots were counted and the tally formally announced by one of Manhattan's most prominent men-about-town, Peter Arno.

"I didn't expect it and I do not think I am the glamour type," she explained with becoming modesty.

Her father, Robert W. Cordon, is a vice president of the Manufacturers Trust Co., one of New York's largest financial institutions.

Light hearted, carefree and hung with orchids, Miss Cordon came to the party from a business engagement wherein she had turned a neat penny by posing in an advertisement indorsing a national product.

"I don't think I can possibly follow in the footsteps of Brenda Frazier," she cried breathlessly following the election, as droves of photographers and flash-bulbs encircled her. "My goodness, I couldn't keep up with her. I just couldn't stay out night after night after night all night!"

Miss Cordon is heading for a double-decker debut. On September 12, she will make her preliminary bow at the debutante ball at Raleigh, S. C. and January 1, she will be presented at a large dinner party before the Annual Debutante Ball in New York.

Miss Glamour Girl of 1941-42 likes tall men, but doesn't care whether they're light or dark. It's personality that counts, says she. And she does not think that money counts. She would rather sit at home and play backgammon with old personality plus than go to the most costly night club with a wet smack.

Neither one of the two gals most generally regarded as the glamour kids of 1941-42 Anne Bullitt and Gloria Vanderbilt, put in an appearance tonight.

New Zealand Dealing Firmly With Strikes, Premier Asserts

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Aug. 27.—Peter Fraser, prime minister of the Laborite government of New Zealand and leader of the Labor Party in that land of social pioneering, told reporters here today that "workers ought not to strike under any circumstances when war is on." He added that the few strikes in New Zealand since that country entered war have been dealt with "firmly."

The Scotch-born head of the far-away New Zealand Islands spent a busy day in New York today. He is returned by way of the United States and Canada from conferences with Prime Minister Churchill. He conferred Tuesday with President Roosevelt.

For more than an hour Fraser talked with newspapermen at his Roosevelt Hotel suite, reiterating the confidence and determination of his people to win the war and discussing life in this laboratory of "social experimentation" out in the Pacific. New Zealand sponsored social reform before the New Deal was known.

"Our outlook on the war is this," he explained. "We have placed the whole of our resources, manpower and wealth, at the disposal of the Allies. We are prepared to forego anything necessary to win. We don't think there is anything to be gained necessarily by giving up our social gains. However, if any industry is handicapped by our 40-hour week then we adjust that situation and arrange for a 44-hour or a 48-hour week. We have a tribunal there to consider such problems and the hours can be extended if they need to be. Thus, the unions have given up privileges they have fought for for years to help in the war effort. The impact of the war is different on different industries and we try to consider every case by the rule of common sense.

"The workers ought not to strike under any circumstances when war is on. We have a labor government and they understand that. The trouble makers were quite active until Hitler attacked Moscow but they were dealt with firmly."

He told of a strike organized on a railroad. He said the strikers were forbidden to have outdoor meetings, the newspapers were forbidden to print anything about the strike and Parliament was not permitted to debate the strike publicly. All open sessions of Parliament are carried on the radio.

Fraser added "we can't imagine for a moment that if the hour of threatened destruction came to us that the people of any democratic country, including the United States, would stand complacently by and see that happen." He was accompanied by Frank Livingstone, minister of lands who has been dealing with the United States on defense aid through the lend-lease act. Fraser expressed appreciation of this aid.

Peru, Ecuador Clash Reported

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 27 (AP).—A skirmish between Peruvian and Ecuadorean troops at Zumba in a disputed frontier zone was reported today in dispatches to the newspaper El Telegrafo.

A Peruvian detachment was reported to have taken the town, then been driven out the following night. Zumba is a small town inhabited by gold-panners

(The Peru-Ecuador border war was to have ended three weeks ago, but sporadic fighting has been reported since.)

Pennsylvania G. O. P. Nominates Gilette

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 27 (INS).—Republican delegates from Pennsylvania's Fifteenth Congressional District today selected Wilson Gilette, of Towanda, as their nominee for the Congressional seat made vacant by the death recently of A. C. Rutherford, Republican.

Democrats, meeting in Tunkhannock, selected District Attorney George E. Wagner, of Danville, as their Congressional nominee.

Ethiopian Post In Grave Peril, Rome Admits

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Aug. 27.—Uolchefit, the Italian advance post north of Gondar in Ethiopia, which has withstood unnumerable attacks from the British imperial forces, is now in grave danger, today's war bulletin indicates.

"Overwhelming British forces" have launched what the communique called "a violent attack," and it is not claimed that the enemy was driven off.

All around the Gondar sector, continues the bulletin, there have been "sharp encounters of our troops and strong enemy units." So the British may be making their decisive effort to wipe out the last remaining center of resistance in Italian East Africa.

Photographs in today's newspapers show Gen. Ugo Cavallero, chief of the general staff at the Tobruk sector. That is a reminder that within a month the weather will again become cool enough for fighting in North Africa.

Tripoli, Bengasi Bombed

Cairo, Aug. 27 (AP).—Masses of debris were hurled high in the air by a particularly violent explosion and fires flamed near the fort and power station of Tripoli, Libya, the British Middle East R. A. F. command reported tonight, in raids Monday night upon Axis bases.

Bengasi also was a British target and several bombs were reported dropped there on "railway sidings and the enemy encampment." Ships and gasoline supplies were hit at Bardia, the R. A. F. said. Transport concentrations near Rasuenna were declared to have been heavily damaged by South African Air Force fliers yesterday.

One Axis vessel was left sinking and another was damaged by a direct hit in a heavy bombing attack by British fliers yesterday on German-Italian craft in the central Mediterranean, it was announced.

The exact location and tonnage of the ships were not stated.

Raiding Italian planes were chased from British-occupied Malta to Sicily. A communique said, where three were shot down. Several other Italian fighters were listed as badly damaged in that action and an S-89 was declared to have been shot down by R. A. F. fighters off Famagusta, Cyprus.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Here comes the Parade...

IT'S A MARCH TO THE WASHINGTON POST!

THERE'S a Parade IN The Post and a parade TO The Post.

The first Parade is the new, 32-page, Sunday supplement, added last week to The Washington Post.

The second parade is of Washingtonians flocking to newsstands for copies of the big, eleven-section Sunday Post with Parade added . . . jamming The Post's telephone trunk wires with orders.

The first Parade is responsible for the second. Because this new idea in Sunday supplements, patterned after the popular picture magazines, is a sensation!

Parade was the talk of the newspaper world before its first appearance in The Washington Post. Parade was so different, such a break from old newspaper traditions, so lively and up-to-date and pictorial. Newspaper people buzzed with gossip about this excitingly modern supplement.

And Parade is the talk of Washington, today!

"Wasn't that front cover cute of the little boy on roller skates!" "Did you read that article about the R. A. F. fliers? I didn't realize they were here." "That was quite a story about the Du Ponts' party." "I got a bang out of the kids at the zoo." "Did you ever see such action pictures?" "I'd like a piece of that bet the movie people are making on this Janis Carter, she's a honey."

"Did you see that action shot of Whirlaway on the back cover? It was wonderful!"

Don't miss Parade this Sunday! Join the parade to Parade! Step along to The Washington Post March! Phone your subscription to NAtional 4200 and do it today!

British Warned Huge U. S. Aid Is Not Certain

By James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London, Aug. 27.—A stern warning against the complacency of a section of the British public that feels United States deliveries of planes, tanks and other supplies, will win the war for Britain, is contained in a striking letter printed in this morning's issue of the Times.

The letter also offered an explanation of the limited powers actually held by President Roosevelt, who is looked on in this country as the savior of Britain.

The letter was written by Philip Hewitt-Myring, known to be an experienced interpreter of affairs in both Britain and the United States. His views struck the editor of the Times so forcibly they were printed as the leading letter on the editorial page.

The striking thing about the letter is that it reflects the views of a great many persons, including Americans living here as well as Britons who know the United States extremely well. Hewitt-Myring formerly worked on the London News Chronicle and was at one time connected with the London bureau of the Associated Press.

Hits at "Delusion"

The importance of the letter is in its being printed at a time when there is an unusual lull in German attacks on Britain by air. In this connection Prime Minister Churchill and other officials have been telling people not to be fooled by thinking the lull means the danger of invasion is past. Moreover, the letter comes directly on the heels of the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conference and the eight-point declaration, which many in Britain interpret as pledging ultimate political intervention in European affairs by the United States if not immediate military intervention.

Hewitt-Myring's letter points out that due to the profound ignorance of the English public about the United States Constitution, there is an almost universal "delusion" in this country that all it has to do is hold on until United States aid reaches here in overwhelming force. He adds this quoted "delusion" is partly due to British public men and newspaper commentators.

He also points out that in this country there is a total misconception of the powers of a United States President, adding that leaders of opinion in this country "have spoken and written as if Roosevelt were a species of dictator whose every desire will be gratified by an enthusiastic Nation." The letter, under the caption "Fools' Paradise," continues:

"The importance of Congress is persistently underrated and when unpalatable facts emerge from the deliberations of that body ridiculous attempts are made to explain them away. One is told on one hand that the House of Representatives is lagging far behind public opinion in the matter of aid to Britain and another that its members who are shortly due for reelection are voting as they think their constituents would like them to vote—that is to say that they have their ears very close to the ground, indeed.

Faces Bitter Opposition

"What are facts?

"The facts are not only that the powers of an American President are strictly limited, but that Mr. Roosevelt in particular has to face the bitterest and most determined opposition from vast and important sections of the American community; that we are not at the moment getting aid from America on a scale that could be described even by the wildest stretch of imagination as 'overwhelming' and there is absolutly no guarantee that we will get it this year, next year, sometime or indeed—ever; that in brief, profoundly grateful as we are and will be for every airplane, gun or tank that America sends us, these deliveries should be viewed not as automatic imports on which we can depend to defeat Hitler, but rather as it were, bonuses which will, God willing, enable us to defeat him more easily and quickly.

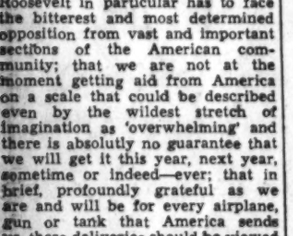

"To write thus is not to suggest the slightest hint of reproach against the American people. Our own dismal record of the years immediately before the war should prevent us from taking such an attitude even were it justified, and it is not justified. To any one who is acquainted with the American scene, the wonder is not that we have had so little support from our sister democracy so far, but that we have had so much. And for help that has been given us by individual Americans who have banded themselves into groups and organizations to assist us, no gratitude could be too high.

"From the fools' paradise, however, in which we have supposed that all we have to do is to keep Hitler at bay until American deliveries win the war for us, we must immediately depart."

Man Indicted in Threat To Harm Hedy Lamarr

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (AP).—Sidney McDonald Buchanan, 22, of Baltimore, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on a charge of sending threatening letters to Hedy Lamarr.

The indictment was based on allegations that Buchanan, arrested August 5, demanded $500 from the actress on the threat that he would "scar up your pretty face so you will never be on the screen again." His bail was set at $2500.

Rockefeller Urges Americas to Take World Leadership

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 27 (INS).—Pointing proudly to increased trade as well as cultural relations between the United States and Latin American countries, Nelson Rockefeller, United States Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, tonight urged the Americas to take the leadership in world affairs and to serve as "moderators" in this time of crisis.

Rockefeller, speaking on "Joint Responsibilities of the American Nations in the World Today," led a symposium of four South American experts meeting at the Institute of Human Relations.

Rockefeller declared that the absence of age-old hatreds among the American nations and the abundance of the material and cultural wealth of the two American continents made possible such a role for the American nations. He said it was "our duty" to accept "leadership" and to serve as "world moderators."

LaGuardia Calls for Civilian Defense Medical Service Set-up

By Robert F. Whitney
Copyright by New York Times

Immediate preparation to provide for emergency medical service for civilian casualties in case the United States is attacked was urged yesterday by the Office of Civilian Defense.

In the first of a series of pamphlets outlining medical provisions for civilian defense, designed for the organization of emergency medical field units, the OCD states that organization to provide medical service to casualties must be a fundamental part of the civilian defense program.

In a foreword to the pamphlet, which is entitled "Emergency Medical Service for Civilian Defense, Bulletin No. 1," Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, OCD director, quotes from a similar official bulletin issued in England, prior to the war, as follows:

"The need for (these measures) is not related to any belief that war is imminent. It arises from the fact that the risk of attack from the air, however remote it may be, is a risk that cannot be ignored, and because of preparations to minimize the consequences of attack from the air, cannot be improvised on the spur of the moment but must be made, if they are to be effective, in time of peace."

Urges Action at Once

Mayor LaGuardia concludes his preface by saying: "Whether or not we regard danger to the lives and property of our people as imminent, I would urge that immediate steps be taken to carry out these recommendations of the Office of Civilian Defense in every State along our seaboards and in industrial areas in the interior."

After outlining in diagram form the structure of emergency medical service, the bulletin gives a basic plan for the organization and expansion of hospital facilities and for the rapid expansion of nursing facilities through extensive training of adequate numbers of "volunteer nurses' aides" and other nursing auxiliaries.

The pamphlet prescribes the personnel of the emergency field unit divided into squads on call for each 12 hour shift, including physicians, nurses and nursing auxiliaries. The squads are designed for communities varying in population from 25,000, 50,000 and 100,000.

The bulletin describes the operation of these emergency field units as follows:

They respond promptly to the call of the control center and are dispatched from the nearest hospitals in ambulances or other vehicles. They establish casualty stations at certain predetermined sites in the vicinity of the disaster. For this purpose, the Chief of Emergency Medical Service will provide a spot map of the community on which is recorded the available sites for casualty stations. From such casualty stations, teams of one or more physicians, nurses and auxiliaries may be split off for the purpose of establishing one or more subsidiary first aid posts at other favorable sites.

"Rescue squads" and "stretcher teams" bring the injured out of the danger zone and conduct or transport them on stretchers to the casualty stations and first aid posts. The bulletin emphasizes the necessity for field drills of these units at least once each month.

The bulletin outlines an inventory to be made by the chief of emergency medical service of hospitals, convalescent homes and other institutions within a radius of 50 or more miles of each locality. These may be required in the event of an emergency so as to release hospital beds within the city. The first to be evacuated at times of crisis to a more distant, protected site would be the maternity and children's services and certain categories of the hospitalized sick. The injured would be evacuated as soon as possible to base hospitals situated outside the metropolitan area.

Provision is made for the training of 100 thousand volunteer nurses' aides, in collaboration with the American Red Cross, and for the training of greater numbers of registered nurses and nursing auxiliaries, in collaboration with the Federal Security Agency.

The pamphlet concludes with a description of first aid courses which have been revised by the Office of Civilian Defense in collaboration with the Red Cross.

IN THE NAME OF COMMON SENSE

We Ask You to Read This

THE next few weeks may decide your destiny—and you can decide what will happen in America in these weeks.

You can make people see the truth about the peril you face, that your family faces, that this whole nation faces. You can spread the truth from corner to corner of the country—can drown out the voices of the defeatists, the copperheads, the men who, regardless of their sincerity, "ought to be in German uniforms because they are winning more battles in Europe than the German generals."

Ask yourself this question—why was a measure which every competent military authority in the country declared is essential even to maintain the present strength of our army passed by only one vote in the House of Representatives? Why did we just escape an inevitable chaos by a whim of fate?

You know the answer. It's that while the enemies of a strong and free America are articulate, its friends are scattered, passive, silent. And while the "confusionists" do their work, amply supplied with funds, those who work for a free America need money to rally others around the cause, to show their colors, to make every Congressman and Senator know that the nation is in danger and is determined to take strong, courageous; common sense action now.

WHAT YOU CAN DO—The Committee to Defend America asks you, therefore, to help this work. On this page you will find the seven-point policy of the Committee, and what it is now doing to make that policy effective.

The Committee is not a debating society. It is organized to make every dollar you give count in presenting the truth about the danger we all are in to the American people—and to arouse action now.

WHY GIVE NOW—The next month, perhaps the next few days, promise to be critical for our common cause—the cause to which the Committee to Defend America is dedicated. The forces of defeatism and appeasement continue to menace our efforts to secure funds that shall be neither "too little" nor "too late". Every gift is welcome; confident of its future usefulness, the Committee is organized to make your help immediately effective—if you give now.

No matter how little you can spare we ask your support in the name of your own common sense. We are sure that you know a few dollars now will help avert the inevitably tragic consequences later which inertia and blindness now will surely bring. No price is too great to avert that. Won't you make some contribution to the cause of arousing America before it is too late?

Mail your contribution—check, cash or money order. Send it to us today.

WHAT THE COMMITTEE DOES

Major activities of the Committee include the following:

1. Enlistment of speakers and development of mass meetings and public demonstrations, etc., in cities throughout the country, and the scheduling of Committee speakers before club, business, farm, labor and consumer groups.
2. Coordination of nation-wide endeavors by means of field representatives, regional conferences, mail, telephone and telegraph.
3. Preparation and distribution of pamphlets, leaflets, broadsides, newspaper and magazine articles, etc., designed to acquaint all parts of the public with the facts of the present situation.
4. Preparation of advertisements dealing with situations of the moment for use of the chapters and for publication in key newspapers and magazines.
5. Constant research regarding the effect of international events on national security, and the implications of developments in the international field.

WHAT THE COMMITTEE STANDS FOR

1. Clean up the Atlantic by sinking on sight the German submarines, surface raiders, etc., that are destroying the freedom of the seas. There should be full participation in the Battle of the Atlantic. V for America should mean Victory in the Atlantic.
2. Immobilize Japan as an Axis partner by whatever arrangements are necessary with China, the Dutch East Indies, Britain in the Far East and Russia.
3. Occupy such bases in the Atlantic and Pacific as may be necessary for the defense of America.
4. Overwhelming industrial production to furnish the planes, tanks, ships, guns and food necessary to insure "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."
5. Remove every obstacle in the way of British recruitment in this country.
6. While reaffirming opposition to Communism as such, provide whatever assistance is possible to Russia in her resistance to Germany.
7. Develop the means for a permanent peace following the defeat of the Axis Powers based on the eight points of the President and Mr. Churchill.

Craven Is Himself Again In a Perky Comedy Role

"Village Green" an Amusing and Homey Play; Local Dancer Coming Home From Broadway; News Notes and Bits of Gossip of the Theater

THOSE VISITING BALTIMORE this week will find opportunity to while away a couple of innocent and amusing hours in the Maryland Theater, where the Olneys and Felix Jacoves are presenting Frank Craven in "Village Green."

FRANK CRAVEN

"Village Green" is the new comedy in three acts and four scenes by Carl Allensworth that is effecting the transition from the summer-time rostrums of opulent Westchester County, N. Y., where it was a hit as viewed from beneath the brims of its straw hat patrons, to the "big time," where it gives promise of a mild and unpretentious success.

Mr. Allensworth was concerned with none of the problems of a troubled world when he contrived "Village Green," but was content to confine his contemplations to the vexations that can plague the simple folk living their usually placid lives in the homey little village of North Oxford, N. H. He manages by some neatly articulated situations and nicely turned dialogue to shake North Oxford pretty thoroughly out of its tranquillity—but by familiar and time-tested devices. The characters in his charade are old friends of the theater's bucolic drama—the village lawyer and his shrewd but kindly and sympathetic wife; their 25-year-old, school-teacher daughter, who tangles her love affairs in desperation lest she be "left on the shelf"; the skinflint moneybags and political boss; the village ne'er-do-well, its rival clergy and so on down the list. Judge Peabody and his family emerge the happy beneficiaries of a series of rapidly mounting events that get a step or two ahead of their planning but are eagerly embraced for all that.

The play begins slowly, but progresses with cumulative movement, interest and amusement to a surprise tag-line that was thick with curtain calls Tuesday night, when we were not the only Capitalite in a large and laughing audience.

Although unsteady as yet—as of Tuesday night, that is—in both lines and business, the cast surrounding the gentle and drolly humorous Mr. Craven is a well-known and competent one. Among those in important roles are Laura Pierpont, as Mrs. Peabody; Perry Wilson, remembered as the tragic ingenue in the ill-judged "The Cream in the Well," John Craven, son of the star, as innocent cause of most of the trouble; Joseph Allen, the village character of guileless guilt; Matt Briggs, one of the recent mainstays of "The Male Animal," John Ravold, Frank Wilcox and numerous others. They at least happily distract the mind from the war.

Opportunity Knocks Again

In revolutionizing the modus operandi of the Washington Civic Theater, Director Leon Askin is up to his eyes in the considerable task of organizing two complete acting units of approximately 75 players each. To expedite this expansion, open tryouts will be held daily at Civic headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, beginning next Tuesday at 5 p. m., and continuing each evening thereafter from the same hour. For the first time in its history, the Civic Theater will conduct a 30-week season of continuous productions, occupying the Wardman Park Theater on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week, beginning in early October with "The American Way," by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. The two proposed acting groups will alternate, one playing while the other is rehearsing. Aspirants for all other branches of the theater also are invited to present themselves at the tryouts.

With Rose Franken's "Another Language" going into its first week of rehearsal, the Jewish Community Center Drama Workshop has issued a call for an experienced stage designer. Two sets must be constructed for the October 18 production of the play. Applications should be made to Jay Julien, phone HO-7333, or at the Center's rehearsal hall, September 2, at 8:30 p. m. . . . "The Mannerheim Line," Russian Red Army war film, will be given its first Washington showing at the Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md., for a 4-day run, beginning Sunday . . . Distinguished officers of the United States Navy and Marine Corps will be present at the celebration of "Navy Night," when "Dive Bomber," costarring Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray is accorded its Washington premiere Friday. Heading the list of official guests will be Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations . . . And now more than one of the Capital's most discriminating playgoers are belaboring this desk for not having acclaimed "The Wookey," first attraction—and I mean attraction—of the season at the National, as a greater play than Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night." I wouldn't be too sure they are right about that, but they certainly are hot . . . Baltimore will continue, for a space at least, to run neck-and-neck with the Capital. Next week, while Washington will be viewing Brock Pemberton's "Two Story House," at the National, the Maryland, over yonder, will be breaking out "The More the Merrier," a new farce by Frank Gabrielson and Irvin Pincus, produced by Otto L. Preminger and Norman Pincus. It is pointed away from Washington toward Broadway.

Local Boy Still Making Good

When Ed Wynn brings his Broadway hit, "Boys and Girls Together," to E Street, in the wake of "Two Story House," Walter Long will be a featured member of the cast. Walter is the former Capitol Theater usher who decided his feet were good for more than hiking up and down aisles and proceeded to do something about it. What he did was tap his way to Broadway where he is recognized as one of the best dancers of the day. His wife, Rhoda—and not too many of his Washington friends even knew he was married—also is a member of the Wynn company. It will be reunion week at the home of his parents, 2915 Connecticut Avenue, when the musical gets here. "Boys and Girls Together" is right.

And that reminds me. Keenan Wynn, son of Ed, is a member of the cast of that "The More the Merrier" we were talking about somewhere back there. He was last seen here in Max Gordon's "Out West It's Different"

Personal-Aside-to-the-Weatherman Note

Now that the season's opened, it's Monday night that should be cool.

Plays Dual Role in Refilmed Stevenson Thriller

SPENCER TRACY

as he will be seen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new picturization of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Both John Barrymore and Fredric March before him have starred before the cameras in this Robert Louis Stevenson classic, played on the stage by the late Richard Mansfield.

Columbia

"Charley's Aunt" with Jack Benny in "Charley's Aunt," no matter which way it's written means a couple of record-breakers for the price of one. With the radio comic in the starring role, the latest film version of the fabulous Brandon Thomas farce reopens this morning on the Columbia screen.

This casting of the paunchy gag master in the role of the harried Oxford student forced to impersonate someone else's aunt from Brazil, "where the nuts come from," may not delight some of us purists, but it's unbeatable box office and certain laughs to anyone who's never seen "Charley's Aunt" before. In the cast with jello-jowled Benny are Edmund Gwenn, currently starring at the National as "The Wookey;" James Ellison, playing Benny's most demanding classmate; Kay Francis, as the lady from South America, and Arlene Whelan and Anne Baxter as the fragile young things.

One Easy Lesson

How to win your wife back in one easy lesson is gaily explained in Ronald Colman's new starring vehicle for RKO-Radio, "My Life With Caroline." Anna Lee, British star, plays the feminine lead.

LEONARD LYONS, whose Broadway column appears regularly on this page, is on vacation until September 1. His pithy paragraphs will be resumed here on that date.

Nell O'Day Appears With W. C. Fields

Nell O'Day, whose option was picked up recently by Universal, goes into the W. C. Fields' starrer, "The Great Man," at the home studio as her first asignment under the new term ticket.

Miss O'Day, originally signed as Johnny Mack Brown's leading lady in Universal's Westerns, has essayed several additional feature roles in non-Westerns since her dress-up debut in "Back Street."

Comic Gangster

The role of a gangster with a comedy vocabulary in "Married Bachelor" goes to Sheldon Leonard. He joins a cast headed by Robert Young and Ruth Hussey, with Lee Bowman, Felix Bressart and Sam Levene featured.

Ranch 'Field Day' For Young Stars

Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and Ray McDonald had a thrill over the weekend when Richard Quine invited his coworkers in "Babes on Broadway" out to his mother's ranch in Los Sarranos, near Pomona. There his mother owns 11 horses, including four thoroughbred yearlings.

The youngsters had a five-hour ride as highlight of their day in the out-of-doors. For Ray, young New York dancer who has been here just three months, it marked his first experience on horseback.

He drove home on cushions, amidst withering wisecracks from his pals.

The Boys Down the Street Make Their Hits for Far Less

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 27.—Paramount now is in the midst of spending $150,000 to test prospective actors for a forthcoming movie. Down the street on poverty row the boys make ten complete movies for that kind of dough. Tests?

They haven't got time.

And that brings us today to the actors in "Tonto Basin Outlaws." Its cloudy and looks like rain, but Director Roy Luby is grinding away, anyhow. He's got six days flat to complete this movie, as compared to some of his competitors who think the'yre being rushed unless they have three months.

So Luby ignores the clouds. What if the film does seem a little lacking in shadows? There's so much action, with the villains chasing the 1 acros sthe sage-brush and the three heroes about to capture him, that nobody's going to notice the lack of sun.

The scenes all are being shot on the 2000-acre ranch of Ray Corrigan. Ranch? Anyhow, it's 2000 acres of rocks and hills and jack-rabbits which he bought six years ago. It wasn't good for anything except making movies. He's been renting it to manufacturers by the day ever since.

Landlord Corrigan simultaneously is one of the stars of "Tonto." So he's making producer George Weeks a special price. It's handy like. Corrigan, the one-time tree swinger double for Tarzan Weissmuller, can step out of bed, into his pants, and directly into the movie set.

His costars are John King and Max Terhune. King is the lad who made such a name for himself singing in Ben Bernie's band that Universal brought him to Hollywood. That studio made him the star of "The Road Back," one of those multimillion dollar fizzles of five years ago, and King never got to sing a note in the movies until he started strumming a guitar for Producer Weeks.

The Messrs. Corrigan, King and Terhune are known as "The Range Busters." This is their ninth picture together—all nine movies will have been completed in less than 60 days—and they now are in fifth place in the movie cowboy list. (G. Autry still is number one.)

It's not art, maybe, but its mighty profitable. Take Producer Weeks. For 10 years he was general manager of distribution for Paramount, with offices in New York, arguments all day long, and worries at night. Now he lives in a slick ranch house, never bothers with a necktie, and doesn't even have an office, except for a desk in his breakfast room.

Weeks said he was making his pictures complete for less than $30,000. He didn't say how much less, but best guess seems to be that each one of his epics actually costs around $17,000. To make 'em at that price all hands have to start at sun-up on a Monday and work until dark daily through Saturday.

That's movie making. And we don't want any cracks from the Messrs. Goldwyn, Mayer, Zanuck, et. al.

Reaches the Height of Fame!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 27. Charlotte Greenwood has written a book, "Never Too Tall," and it's a honey. It's as real and friendly as Charlotte, and not only is it filled with her gay, courageous outlook and the many amusing incidents of her colorful life that'll give you a lump in your throat while you're laughing out loud, but it's a thoroughly workmanlike job and would make a mighty good movie.

RAY BOLGER

There's an interesting story, too, in the circumstances which led to her writing the book. Some years ago, at the time of Rosamund Pinchot's tragic death, Charlotte, playing Chicago in one of her "Letty" shows, was interviewed by the press. A young reporter pointed out that Miss Pinchot had believed there was no future for her on the stage, due to her excessive height.

"Oh, no!" said Charlotte, "she was wrong! One's NEVER too tall—or too short or too fat or too thin! In our profession it's what you have inside of you to give that counts." "Why don't you write a book about that, Miss Greenwood?" he asked. "It might be a help to other tall women." Charlotte said, "Maybe some day I will." And now she has.

The "Navy Blues" Sextette leaves September 3 on a p. a. trip. They'll make 20 cities in 25 days, with two weeks at the Strand Theater in New York, when the picture opens there September 19. Girls will do a song and dance act written by Phil Silvers and Dudley Chambers.

Soon as he finishes "Street Girl," Ray Bolger leaves immediately for an entertainment tour of the Canadian army camps, then on to New York to discuss some shows, one of which would feature him in straight ballet dancing. Looks as if John Barrymore is headed back for his old and grand style of acting. He's hot for a serious role in a Broadway play this fall.

Joan Fontaine and Brian Aherne have been down to North Carolina to see "The Lost Colony" pageant given on Roanoke Island each summer . . . Li Ling Ai, the petite Chinese actress who acted as technical adviser to Ray Scott on his four-year tour of China in the making of "Ku Kan," is off for San Francisco on the first leg of a p. a. tour with the film. They'll cover Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

"Lydia," starring Merle Oberon, is done with exquisite taste and a fine feeling for dramatic values—one of the best pictures of the year. It's the story, told in flashbacks, of a woman and the four love affairs of her life. Don't miss it . . . Sam Goldwyn is all smiles now that his "Little Foxes" had the biggest opening in the history of New York's Music Hall. Special police had to be called out twice to handle the crush at the boxoffice.

Speaking of "Little Foxes," Bob Hope was so sold on Teresa Wright's work in it that he's asked Goldwyn to let her play the lead in "Treasure Chest" . . . Norma Shearer is huddling with Director Bob Leonard over her forthcoming picture . . . Hal Block, of the "Millions for Defense" show, is working on a short for the United States Signal Corps. The picture will be nationally released for the promotion and sale of Defense Bonds.

"Paris Calling" is the first picture with a setting in Nazi-occupied France, and it'll show the French gals giving the Nazi boys the go-by.

Charlie Smith, the young New Orleans actor who's playing "Dizzy" in the "Aldrich" series, is up to his ears in love with Betty George, of Santa Monica, but refuses to contemplate matrimony until he's outgrown his juvenile roles in pictures. Smart boy, Charles!

Kathryn Grayson established some kind of a record when she made four 12-inch recordings in six hours. She sang two arias from "Lucia," "Tales from the Vienna Woods," and "The Voice of Spring" . . . Little Roddy McDowall, of the "How Green Was My Valley" cast, says he has two burning ambitions. One is to keep working steadily in pictures—the other's to meet Bette Davis . . . Judy Garland's looking for an old house to remodel for her new home.

Palm Springs is a bit of heaven in winter, but the opposite in summer. Arthur Murray, who's opening a studio there this fall, had to go down last week for a couple of days to see about it. When he got back, he said, "They gave me a room with twin sand dunes, and hot and cold running lizards!"

Master of Dance

PAUL HAAKON, one of the stage's foremost dancers, who will coheadline the new revue, with Patricia Bowman, Washington ballerina, at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning today

It's No Fun Having Role With Dorothy

Four days ago, Abner Biberman began work as a jungle-born Malay native hardened against nature, in Dorothy Lamour's new picture, "Her Jungle Mate." The first day, playing his barefoot role, he stepped on a thorn and the company doctor had to remove it. The second day he fell over a roof and skinned his knees. The doctor fixed him up. The other day he cut his hand on a native knife and the doctor took three stitches on the wound. Now, he stubbed the big toe of his right foot so hard he sprained it severely.

Blunder Averted

Citizens who fought the location of an immense War Department Building between Arlington Memorial Bridge and the National Cemetery have won a very notable victory. It is a victory in four parts. First, a new and far more appropriate site for the structure has been selected at the behest of President Roosevelt. Secondly, the size of the project has been reduced by almost half, thus minimizing the danger of creating intolerable traffic congestion in its vicinity. Thirdly, the building will be used only temporarily as headquarters for the War Department, thus avoiding the issue of locating an executive department of the Government permanently outside of the Capital City. Fourthly, plans for the erection of permanent structures for the Army and Navy in the Northwest Triangle between Twenty-first Street and the Potomac will not be abandoned.

As one of the institutions which joined heartily in the fight against the erection of a monstrosity on the south shore of the Potomac, The Post hails this compromise as a triumph for rational planning. As we repeatedly pointed out, any building to house 40,000 employes in or near Washington would create a traffic nightmare. President Roosevelt has shown admirable judgment in ordering a scaling down of the War Department's overly-ambitious scheme, despite the pressure of the defense emergency. We had suggested, also, as long ago as August 13, that if immediate construction of the proposed eyesore were imperative, it be made a temporary rather than a permanent building. At least the proposed structure is to be only temporarily the home of the War Department.

President Roosevelt says the structure may be used after the emergency for the storage of old records. It is not improbable, however, that the Government may need such office space for many years to come. If the building is not to be razed after the emergency, therefore, time should be taken to make it a creditable structure. It will not be in the front yard of Arlington Cemetery. But it will occupy a conspicuous site just off Columbia Pike in an area that will be of more and more importance to the Nation's Capital as the years go by.

There can be no reasonable objection to location of the building in Arlington County. Of course, all major Federal structures in this area should be within the boundaries of the District. But Arlington County must necessarily become a part of the Capital of the future. Senator McCarran has already introduced a bill calling on Virginia to re-cede this area to the Federal Government and many legislators believe that the Act of Recession in 1846 was unconstitutional. Whether or not a satisfactory agreement with Virginia can be reached in the near future, the area across the Potomac will, in fact, be woven into the pattern of this expanding Capital. That is why it is so important to plan its orderly development while there is yet time to do so.

Truce In Iran?

Three day after their armies had been given marching orders the Russians were reported in possession of Tabriz, Iran's second city, and the British in complete control of the rich oil region in the southwest. This indicates that once having decided to move into Iran, the British and Russians moved swiftly, and that Iranian resistance was negligible. Indeed, reports from Teheran suggest that negotiations are now under way between the Iranian government on the one hand and the British and Russians on the other, with the purpose of bringing hostilities to an end. Iran, it is said, is now willing to extend guarantees that virtually all the Germans in her midst will be expelled, thus submitting to demands made by London and Moscow, the rejection of which by Riza Khan Pahlevi was followed by the occupation of Iranian areas by Anglo-Russian forces.

Should such an agreement come into force, and the odds seem to favor it, it would constitute a real triumph for the Allies. It would mean that at relatively little cost and without creating a new fighting front they had accomplished their purpose of eliminating a potential German fifth column in Iran and preventing that country from being taken over by Hitler through a coup d'etat engineered from within. An Anglo-Russian-Iranian agreement would also be a severe blow to the prestige of the Third Reich in the Near and Middle East. It may be more than a coincidence, in this connection, that far-reaching claims of victory in the Russian fighting are being made by the German high command at this time. It is possible that these victories are as notable as the Germans claim they are. It is not unlikely, however, that the victories are being blown up to several times their importance to offset the first-class defeat Germany has suffered in Iran.

Lend-Lease Lies

There are some rumors which are so absurd that they gather only dignity and some suspicion that there may be something in them when they are merely denied. This kind of rumor was typified by the report of a peace proffer which Ambassador Winant was supposed to have brought back to Washington in his portfolio. President Roosevelt in that case made a positive charge against the rumor mongers as poison carriers. He used the same positive technique in dealing with some of the rumors which have recently been circulated about British misuse of lend-lease funds.

For instance, there is the report of wining and dining in a Washington restaurant by British officials on lend-lease money. The report is ridiculous on its face. Yet it must have gained wide currency for the President to take notice of it. Perhaps one reason for the circulation of this canard is that the tale was repeated in the Congressional Record. Even though the Record is a channel for information and misinformation of all sorts, nevertheless some people still think of it as a fount. But the dissemination of this particular fantasy was doubtless more the studied work of saboteurs who have never taken kindly to the aid-to-Britain program than the whispering of the merely credulous. The President therefore minced no words in his castigation yesterday, when, disdaining a denial, he positively branded the report as a "plain dirty falsehood."

More credible than the restaurant tale are the reports of British selling to Argentina of lend-lease steel and the unnecessary British acquisition of American oil tankers. Yet the President also dubbed these stories as distortions. The plain fact of lend-lease history so far is that precious little—too little—material has been sent to fighting Britain. Actually there has not been enough time for steel to be transported, processed and sent to Argentina in the form of finished goods.

However, if this problem of the re-export of lend-lease steel to Argentina has not arisen, doubtless a general problem is bound to arise out of British re-exports. Britain must export in order to buy war materials. And Britain must buy war materials all over the world. The problem of the relation between lend-lease buying and necessary exports on the part of the British may be stated in terms of a specific instance: cotton. Sales or transfers of lend-lease supplies by Britain are seemingly forbidden under the lend-lease law. Does that mean that Britain would not be permitted to export textiles if the raw material happened in part to be composed of lend-lease cotton? That problem surely calls for some clarification, since Britain, which uses a mixture of raw cotton, would be seriously injured by any such ruling. Aside from this point, however, it is clearly to our interest to maintain Britain as a "going concern," provided that we do not subsidize any whipsawing of our own commercial interests.

That the British are providing American officials with all the checks that may be required for purposes of overseeing the use of lend-lease material is amply attested in official circles in Washington. The oil tanker question is a case in point. In London there are representatives of the Maritime Commission, the Oil Administrator and the Navy, able men all, and Americans first. Each of them has been afforded access to all the information in British possession, and the details, moreover, are supplied direct to the Administration. The story about the unnecessary taking of our oil tankers gives off the implication that it is the British who "take" the tankers. In point of fact, all that the British do is to make known their requirements, and the decision to part with the tankers is an American decision. Obviously there would be no release of tankers if the need were not known by, let alone explained to, our own authorities.

Naturally they cannot publicize the data, since these data are military secrets. And this is the handicap that has been turned into an opportunity for the amateurs to play fast and loose with their own estimates of ownership and losses and needs in the oil tanker situation. One example of the current figuring is sufficient to show how lacking in knowledgability it is. A number is given as the maximum for the tankers required to "feed Britain." However no allowance is made for tankers required for the maintenance of the navy, for refueling at bunkering stations over Britain's far-flung battle line, or for supplies in other theaters of war. As the President said, these amateur compilations do not hold water, and he is one man who knows. To bandy around such reports as the President so witheringly nailed yesterday is to accuse not only him but the entire Administration of childish incompetence, to say the least.

Advice To Debtors

In a statement explaining the purposes of the recently announced installment-credit regulations Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, appeals to the people to reduce their debts or liquidate them while their incomes are at high levels. One might accord with general practice and hence be superfluous. But the records prove the contrary. Instead of shrinking when pay rolls expand and people have more money to spend, debts contracted to finance consumer purchases actually rise at such times. For example, during the twenties, when the country was enjoying prosperity, the volume of consumer credit of all types nearly doubled, only to contract severely at the onset of depression. Now we are experiencing another rapid expansion of borrowing that has brought the volume of outstanding consumer credit to an all-time high.

Even if there were no defense emergency to worry about, it is evident that something ought to be done to control this type of borrowing. For it aggravates the up and down swings of the business cycle by adding to current purchasing power when business is booming and withdrawing it when the need for price-supporting buying is greatest. However, the immediately compelling reason for putting a curb upon installment credit is the necessity of diverting more of our resources in labor, capital and materials to the production of defense equipment. As Mr. Eccles points out, the regulation of installment buying is not intended to restrict production; it is simply an effort to cut down demand for certain goods of which there are (or will be) shortages for civilian use. The prior claims of the defense program make it absolutely necessary for civilians to do without some of the things they would like to buy, whether installment credit is regulated or not. The purpose of regulation is to discourage consumers from indulging in installment buying on a lavish scale and thus combat inflation. That is why Price Administrator Henderson is desirous of extending and tightening controls over consumer credit. Probably his wish will be granted, for Mr. Eccles has announced that the present regulations are subject to change "as economic conditions require a further dampening of buying power in order to safeguard the interests of consumers and the public generally."

Gathering Climax

Well, ladies and gentlemen, that epochal four-game series at Ebbets Field between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals that was to make or break the universe, is now ended with honors easy at two games each. This seems to leave the situation at the top of the National League precisely where it was at the end of last week, except that the season is so many days nearer its close. Thus the first 5-cent fare World's Series since 1937 and the first Brooklyn pennant since the joyful year of 1920 seems more and more likely, though by no means certain. The Cardinals, despite the serious loss of Messrs. Slaughter and Moore, seem disposed to fight it out to the very last pitch. Meanwhile the whilom world's champion Cincinnati Reds have apparently awakened, though somewhat belatedly to be sure, to the fact that the 1941 baseball season is on, and up to yesterday had taken 15 out of their last 17 games. But on all these matters you are doubtless even better informed than we because, as we write, the two important Wednesday night games—between the Giants and Cardinals at the Polo Grounds and the Reds and Dodgers at Ebbets Field—have not even begun.

However, it seems to us that if the fates have any sporting blood in them, they will let Mr. McPhail's boys have their pennant and the World's Series to boot. For, quite aside from their technical accomplishments, which are not inconsiderable, they deserve it on more exalted, and if we may say so, more valid grounds. In this dark and bloody age the Dodgers are perhaps the only group of peaceable individuals who are able to compete on even terms with the Luftwaffe, the Warmacht, the R. A. F., the OPM and the Red army for the attention of the world. Indeed, we are not sure that the people on the other side of the North River are aware of any other world crisis than the crisis in the National League.

BEAUTY ONCE SHARED

Close fast the door upon the lovely night,
Until the high, full, summer moon shall pass;
Shut out old apple trees in silvered grass
And muted paths where heliotrope gleams white.

Forget the lemon lily and pale phlox,
The rosy, bending lithrum, ghostly sweet,
Where shadowed lawn and shadowed orchard meet;

Forget the glow of opened hollyhocks.
Light all the lamps and keep them blazing high,
And call the neighbors in with laughing talk;
Forget the mystery of the garden walk,
Beneath the tender, sad, moon-ridden sky.
For well I know, being a woman grown,
Beauty once shared cannot be borne alone.

Lady Astor Objects

Had I given the interview as reported in your paper July 27, your sarcastic criticism would have been right, but it was a complete travesty of what I said or thought.

NANCY ASTOR.

Editor's Note: The interview was quoted from a London dispatch to the North American Newspaper Alliance which appeared in a New York newspaper, July 26.

Expensive Vacation

Nine weeks ago Adolf Hitler by his invasion of Russia presented the United States with perhaps the most magnificent opportunity ever offered a nation. In those nine weeks we could have won the Battle of the Atlantic and established the freedom of the seas in fact instead of on paper. We could have eliminated Japan from the war, either by her acceptance of our ultimatum to withdraw within her own borders, relying on our pledge that she would receive a just settlement of her claims in the peace treaty, or else by a crushing defeat by our Navy and Air Force.

How has the United States reacted to this challenge? The President has carried on his war of golden oratory and astute politics, the Republican Party has worked both secretly and openly for the 1944 election, the pro-Nazis and the isolationists, alike in method though differing in aims, have had a rewarding and successful summer, the realists who understand that victory cannot be won by empty promises and defensive warfare have been paralyzed by despair and a sense of futility and the rest of Americans have taken a prosperous and carefree vacation.

Well, I hope we have enjoyed it, for it is the most expensive vacation ever taken by any people since the beginning of history.

Labor Day Gas

To say that I was shocked when I read today of the Petroleum Conservation Committee's action with regard to a Labor Day's supply of gasoline is to put it very mildly. How can anyone in a responsible position be so stupid as to plan to waste in a few days a good share of the gasoline they tell us is barely enough for everyday needs for the whole month of September?

Is this a way to encourage the conscientious to continue to "save one-third?" the selfish, the thoughtless will "joy-ride" for three days, and the workers will walk to work later in the month. This is robbing Peter to give Paul a Roman holiday, and if Coordinators Ickes and Davies expect cooperation in their plans for conservation in the future, it seems to me they might take some action to stop this silly plan.

Voice From The Past

Guess who wrote this: "The plan, in my opinion, ought to be a fleet of Great Britain and an Army of the United States, and a government for the liberated territory agreeable to both the cooperators, about which there will be no difficulty. To arrange the plan a competent authority from Great Britain to some person here is the best expedient. Your presence here in that case will be extremely essential. We are raising an army of about —— men."

Bomb Targets

What a shock it must have been to Hitler when he learned that the 35 million dollar bomb target, that was to be located like a big box quite convenient to the military cemetery, is not to be erected. That big box, that would contain all the secret plans and files with all knowledge of our war moves and power, and with its 40,000 officers and coworkers, would have been a target well worth risking his great bombing planes to hit the bull's eye. And how glad we should be to think that single target plan is abandoned.

Why should we not build our Government buildings on the high ground, where on natural foundations they would stand, dry and safe. Why not select the splendid site on Capitol Hill, east of the Capitol? If all the old buildings were removed from the squares of the south side of East Capitol Street, from the Folger Gallery to the west end of Lincoln Park Northeast and on from the east end of Lincoln Park to the Armory (that wonderful new building now nearing completion, beyond Twentieth Street Northeast). What a grand line of beautiful buildings (not boxes) we could build there. It will be claimed that the cost of this grand site would be too great, but it could not be half as costly as would be the destruction of the big box, and all it contained, by one of Hitler's big bombs.

This plan of having twenty bomb targets instead of one might be given some practical thought; and the thought of building temporary buildings (that will soon have to be replaced) would, in the end be far more costly than the permanent buildings—if they are built now on high and solid ground. Thoughtless Or Selfish

It appears to me that there are altogether too many either thoughtless or utterly selfish or violently unpatriotic motorists on the road.

Saturday I drove to Fort Meade to bring my son home for week-end leave and, notwithstanding the fact that he is a soldier in the uniform of the United States, he did not contaminate my car at all.

On the way from Laurel to Meade, a distance of seven or eight miles, there must have been several hundred soldiers trying to thumb rides. I met at least five cars capable of carrying five or six people each, and each occupied only by the driver. Each of these cars was duly solicited by the boys along the side of the road. The way those cars brushed by them, you would have thought the boys had leprosy or smallpox or were thugs attempting a holdup.

There was one boy with a good sized grip. He, like the others, tried to get a ride but was equally unsuccessful. On my return with a full car he was still trying to get some place with his baggage and the cars were still brushing by.

That is a lovely spirit for citizens to show to the boys who have been taken from their homes and usual avocations and are devoting their time to preparing themselves to defend their country.

Judges In Politics

I am distressed at the spectacle of our Supreme Court judges going out to make political speeches. Recently Justice Murphy spoke to a big crowd of Catholics. I approve of what Justice Murphy said, but is it right for a judge to use such language? Justice Roberts also went on the soap-box circuit stumping at a New York rally.

I would destroy Hitler if I had the power, but I don't believe men who are paid by the taxpayers should be allowed to run loose on political speeches. Where will it end?

Ukrainian Drama

Today as over and over again the name of Ukraine appears in every paper of the world press. "The Russian army in Ukraine, the German onslaught on Ukraine, the power of the Red army in Ukraine, Ukraine halts the German advance," etc., etc., but hardly ever a word about the 40 million Ukrainians inhabiting that war ridden land. A series of articles by Mr. Andre Visson appeared recently in The Washington Post under the general heading "Ukrainian Drama." Unfortunately the author of these articles described the German-Ukrainian relations alone, and failed to present the Ukrainian drama in its full magnitude.

Mr. Visson would have done justice to the Ukrainian movement and helped the public to understand the Ukrainian problem if he would have explained that Ukrainian aspirations for liberation are demands for a democratic way of life, for a right to live one's own life and culture, and that Ukrainian Nazis are as distasteful to liberal Ukrainians as any other Nazis to any other people. The modern Ukrainian movement evolved in the first half of the nineteenth century, alongside and as part of Ukrainian renaissance. The Ukrainian problem existed and will undoubtedly exist irrespective of the ambitions of Germany and it will remain unsolved as long as imperialism and totalitarian aggression will prevail in Europe, preventing various minorities from self-determination.

For a second time in one generation terrible world war battles are being fought in Ukraine. In both wars Ukrainians are only subjects and mostly forced actors in other nations' struggles for the produce and contents of Ukraine's fertile soil.

The joint declaration of peace aims as presented by President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill on August 14, heralds, therefore, a great and only hope for a satisfactory peace for all nations, inasmuch as article 3 states that the United States and England "respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live, and they wish to see sovereign rights restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them." The right of all peoples must also include Ukrainians, and I feel the necessity of stressing the following:

1. Ukraine's short-lived independence as it existed after the first World War was won by Ukrainian efforts.

2. Ukraine's democratic government was recognized by the Allies (France and England have sent their representatives to Kiev in December, 1917); and Ukraine's independence was proclaimed in January, 1918, that is four months before the German army of occupation dispersed the free, democratically chosen parliament and forced upon Ukraine a man (Gen. Scoropadsky) under whose control Germany hoped to be able to exploit Ukraine to the utmost. By forcing a reactionary government of landlords on Ukraine —Germany added to the confusion existing all over eastern Europe after the war and revolution and thus paved the way for the Moscow bolsheviks.

3. The Ukrainian movement is older and independent in its origin from the schemes of the politicians of the Third Reich or any other German government.

4. To discuss the liberation of Ukraine merely as a German plot would be like referring to Finland as a German puppet state and invention, and not as a national territory with its own life and independence. We, who live in democratic countries could better help the cause of freedom if we would appreciate the fact that one cannot do away with national and political problems simply by neglecting their existence because Germany is trying to utilize them to her advantage.

The Post Impressionist

A Thing Of Beauty

The Old Lady rapped softly at my office door and then, in the manner of one who knows she is welcome, entered without waiting for an answer and settled herself in the big leather chair. "Good morning," she chirped brightly, "I just stopped in to chat a bit. It's my birthday," she went on confidentially, "and I thought you might have something for me." She smiled expectantly as she fingered the stopper in the bottle of polish she carried.

The Old Lady always carries a bottle of furniture polish no matter where she goes. It is as characteristic of her as the high, black, buttoned shoes, the ancient black silk pocketbook with its frayed drawstring, the shabby jacket with patches of brown fur at the collar the purple velour hat of so many seasons past. Under this latter her thin gray hair parts in the center and twists into two tight braids which are drawn severely back from her face and secured behind with a large yellow comb. It was raining on the streets below, this morning, and her clothes were wet—soggy in fact—and the purple hat drooped folornly.

"Well, well," I inquired, as she sat beaming upon me, "And how many years does this make for you?"

"It's just 70 even, ma'm," the little Old Lady answered with childlike pride.

The Old Lady has been around the building as long as I can remember. She is as much a part of it as Brisco, the happy-go-lucky colored porter, who whistles with enviable gusto as he sweeps the halls and stairways, or May, the elevator girl, who has a pleasant word for unpleasant people on bad Monday mornings. The Old Lady just goes with the building like meringue on lemon pie. She seems to belong there, and everyone takes it for granted that she will always be there.

She picks up odd bits of money now and then by polishing pieces of office furniture, using her own privately concocted brand of polish which she brews over a gas stove in her attic room. The bottles are large and formidable looking, and bear labels which pronounce her "the sole manufacturer of the finest furniture polish in America." The Old Lady says that her polish is good for cleaning automobiles, fine leather furniture, typewriters and enamel, and when you give her the go-ahead signal she gets down on her knees with a length of cheesecloth and a bottle of polish and rubs briskly until, as she says, you can see your face in a chair leg. No one has ever contradicted the Old Lady.

Occasionally some amateur photographer pays her a few dollars to pose for a picture. Last winter when the Leica exhibit was held at the Mayflower Hotel a beautiful enlargement of the Old Lady in her lace collar hung in the lobby for a week. She made daily trips down to see it and to point out to visitors that she had posed for the picture, and that it had appeared in two national magazines. Sometimes she would take off the purple hat and turn her head so that they could see more surely that the braids were the same, and then she would awe them by breaking the important news that her picture had also hung in New York City.

Once in a great while some kindly individual is moved to invent a small chore for her in order that she might earn a few extra pennies. Somehow she manages to keep body and soul together. I often wonder how. I wondered on this particular morning as I recalled the rainy streets below. "Great scott," I demanded, "haven't you an umbrella?"

"Oh, no, ma'am," came the quick reply. "What with the rent, and a little something so eat, and——"

"Yes, yes, I know," I interrupted impatiently, "but you must have an umbrella. In such weather. It's preposterous! Here, now, take this $2 bill. Go out and get yourself an umbrella right away. A good sturdy one. My birthday present to you."

"Oh, thank you, ma'm," the Old Lady thrilled as she carefully opened her bag, deposited the money in its mysterious depths, and as carefully drew the strings around it. "And God bless you," she added, as she slipped quietly out the door.

A few mornings later there came the familiar tap tap at my office door and the Old Lady entered. "Good morning," she began, "I just stopped in to chat a bit. I happened to be down this way, and I thought——" It was raining again on the streets below and the purple hat was droopier than ever and trickled an occasional drop of water onto the arm of the big leather chair.

"Good Lord!" I exploded, "where is your umbrella? I told you to buy yourself an umbrella. What did you do with the money I gave you?"

The Old Lady's face was like that of a guilty child. She lowered her head and her fingers worked silently for a few moments with the strings of her little bag. And then, "I bought a cake plate," she offered timidly.

I wondered whether I had heard correctly. "A cake plate?" I repeated in bewilderment. "A cake plate? Good Lord! I told you to buy an umbrella. A cake plate! Why, any old thing will do to put cake on. Surely you already had some sort of cake plate."

"Oh, yes, ma'am. Yes, indeed. I have a whole shelf of cake plates. I collect cake plates." The Old Lady raised glowing eyes to mine. "But I never had one with a handle in the middle."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Locking Our Back Door

LIPPMANN

THERE was nothing in Mr. Churchill's speech or in Mr. Hull's press interview which can give the Japanese militarists any reason to think they can safely advance any further. This is not the summer of 1940 when Britain stood alone and at bay in Europe, when China stood alone in Asia, when America was unprepared, and Soviet Russia was bound to Germany. This is the summer of 1941, and the balance of power has turned decisively against Japan. Whereas a year ago we felt constrained to buy time by a policy of concessions and retreats, we are now in a position to insure our security in the Pacific by positive and, if need be, by decisive action.

WE are able now to talk with Tokyo on the basis of a new situation. An American military mission under Brigadier General John Magruder is on its way to China. American supplies are on their way to Siberia. Manila, Hongkong, Singapore have been heavily reinforced. Japan is separated from her Axis partners in Europe by the great Russian wedge and by the improved British position resulting from the conquest of Ethiopia and the occupation of Syria, Irak and Iran. The naval position in the North Atlantic has been greatly improved, and similar improvements will no doubt be assured in the South Atlantic.

IN spite of a certain amount of obstruction and uniformed political confusion at home, the American position in the world as a whole has been made better than it was a year ago. It is so much better that the opportunity now exists to make sure that Japan will not, because she cannot, stab us in the back or even compel us to continue to leave the Western Hemisphere unguarded in the Atlantic because we must stand guard in the Pacific.

OUR conversations with Japan will, let us hope, continue. But if they do continue, it will be because we are now able to speak the language which the Japanese militarists understand. They will understand us in China, that we intend not only to continue supporting free China but that our military mission will determine how airplanes and other weapons can most effectively be made available and then used. The Japanese have chosen to have a great war in China: It will certainly serve the American interest to make sure that this Chinese war which the Japanese picked for themselves proves to be a bigger war than they bargained for. The valor of the Chinese and the toughness of their national spirit have been proved beyond all doubt. The Japanese will understand, even though they hear contrary voices raised in this country, why an increased support to China is an obvious measure in the defense of the vital interests of the United States.

They will understand, too, as diplomats and professional soldiers why the United States will send supplies to Russia by way of Siberia. It is of immense importance to us that there should remain firmly established and strongly armed an independent Russian government in Siberia. We do not wish Hitler, or some Russian Quisling or Darlan, as our nearest neighbor in Alaska. We do not wish Japan for a neighbor in Alaska. We prefer Russia, which has no offensive navy in the Pacific and no policy and no means of expansion in the Pacific. Finally, as long as Japan has a government which is invading China, encircling the Philippines and threatening the great sources of essential American supplies in the South Pacific, we should be very foolish indeed if we did not appreciate the value of the Russian army, the Russian air force and the Russian navy in Siberia.

THE Japanese diplomats and militarists will understand also that two can play at the game they have been playing this last year, and that now our turn has come. We have not forgotten that in the most desperate days last year, when Britain was threatened with destruction and we had to think how we could protect the Western Hemisphere single-handed, Japan made an alliance with Hitler which was avowedly aimed at us. It will now take something more than polite words from Tokyo to make the American people believe that Japan would not stab them in the back if ever the opportunity arose.

Therefore, now that our situation has improved—now that we are intrinsically much, stronger and now that there exists in the Pacific a coalition of Chinese, Russians, British, Dutch and Americans—it is our turn to say that Japan shall advance no further and that this constant menace must be reduced. The time to reduce the Japanese threat is now and in the next few months—before Japan's partners in Europe can gather themselves together for another great offensive in the West. The means by which this can be done is to consolidate and reinforce the coalition of Pacific powers—China, Russia, the Netherlands, Britain and America. They have a combined force, provided it is combined, which—if it is not sufficient to deter Japan—is sufficient to defeat Japan.

Thus in one way or in another—the ultimate choice depending upon Japan—we can and must find a way to put an end to the threat of a two-ocean war.

Fighting Chinese

The Philosophers

The following is an excerpted article which was written by Brig. Gen. John Magruder, newly appointed head of the United States Military Mission to China, and appeared in Foreign Affairs in April, 1931.

THE CHINESE proudly call themselves pacifists and assert this title as a proof of the superiority of their civilization. Their long spells of civil warfare do not daunt their assertion, and indeed this has nothing incongruous in it.

The Chinese are actually more pacifist than many so-called pacifists in the West, most of whom would in extremis defend peace by force, no matter how inconsistent such conduct appeared. In general, the Chinese will not resort to violence in defense of any principle, let alone the principle of peace. Nevertheless, they are not so pacifist that they will not fight courageously when they are involved in a vital personal or material interest. Even then, unlike Western peoples, they will seek to impress their will by indirect methods, ceaselessly persistent and infinitely patient. A favorable decision promptly and abruptly reached is less pleasing to the Chinese than a decision obtained after circumlocution. I would therefore call the Chinese practical pacifists.

A glance at Chinese history is proof of the characteristic flavor of Chinese pacifism. The early wars of China were practically all defensive, and passively defensive at that. The few aggressive wars filled in political vacuums created in neighboring countries by internal dissension. These aggressions followed intrigues started by the Chinese, and the military feature of the conquest consisted only of an expedition of occupation. Such wars required no great military skill, and developed none. Thus the Chinese have no military history worthy of scientific study. They tend to discontinue all military preparation during the intervals between enforced combat. The only military traditions which have grown up are those which surround legendary characters whose glory lay in miraculous performance rather than human martial accomplishment.

THIS basic truth of the reality of the Chinese pacifism thus applies no less to present-day China than to traditional China. Of never-ending pride among the people is the status of the soldier at the bottom of the traditional social scale. Scholars, farmers, artisans and merchants range above him in that order. This contempt for the military caste remains in marked contrast with Japanese reverence for the fighting man. Though of recent years there has been a gradual shifting of power from civil to military officials, the ingrained distaste for the profession of arms persists. And although the unification of the country is still not thoroughly effected, there is a well-defined struggle in Nationalist government circles at Nanking to reassert the Chinese ideal of debasing the soldier.

It is true that many sons of prominent families are undergoing the modicum of training necessary to enter the army. They do so with hesitancy and ill-disguised contempt for the calling. Their object is to use the military establishment as the base from which to make ascent to their real goal; an honorable civil and administrative post. Very seldom, if ever, do sons of influential families accept minor commands with a view to learning the military profession. They inevitably gravitate to semipolitical staff positions in order to avoid the rough atmosphere of troops and to be closer to the administrative milieu in which they are really at home.

THE absence of any relish for combat among the Chinese is evidenced by their general antipathy for vigorous games and sports. Chinese children dislike rough forms of play. They engage in games requiring physical exertion only when urged to do so. In modern schools I have seen a large circle of children stand throughout a whole recess while a football was knocked about. The ball never reached certain children, but, instead of dashing after it, they stood by patiently, showing the discipline and docility which in later years manifests itself in place of initiative and physical aggressiveness.

Neither youths nor adults hunt or fish for pleasure. Chinese men avoid any unnecessary exertion and enjoy only such tests of skill as are not combined with the exercise of physical vigor. Horseback riding for pleasure is engaged in only by the Mohammedans in the west, who generally have strains of alien blood. Save for the crudest forms of transport, horses receive no training at all. Cavalry is only mounted infantry. I have never heard of or seen riding instruction which aimed at anything more than overcoming the hazards of sticking on.

AT heart the Chinese believe that the continuance of their race, that sacred and instinctive urge which grips them so strangely, will not be accomplished by the exercise of military qualities. Their confident faith in their destiny seems to lie in their one-mindedness, patience, and persistence. It is expressed in a locust-like mass momentum and propagation.

The very qualities which make cohesive and continuous military effort impossible to the Chinese appear to render them impregnable in passive resistance. Through the centuries the potential force of the Chinese has remained intact while the directionless resort to arms by more martial and virile peoples has destroyed or weakened them in rapid succession. This is why Chinese statesmen and youthful unprofessional Chinese generals smile contemptuously at the perfection of Western militarism. Their lack of emulation is due to their feeling that it cannot improve upon the superiority of Chinese racial persistency. It may be pardoned China's leaders if they pretend to imitate and even to better Western military spirit and practice. A useful purpose is something served because the West is apt to accept make-believe as reality. This was demonstrated during the operations against Soviet Russia along the Chinese Eastern Railway. But Moscow and Tokyo knew better.

WILL Chinese biological evolution tend backward toward more primitive forms? In other words, will China witness the growth of a martial spirit? This is speculation; but if martial spirit does grow, the development will be a slow process. It will not necessarily be a concomitant of the present rapid social and political change in national character. Given money, equipment and training there is no doubt that a first-class fighting machine can be made of, say, 20,000 Bulgars or Turks. The same cannot be said of 20,000 Chinese without numerous qualifications. The difference has nothing to do with physical stamina, courage, or intelligence. It is spiritual, or possibly intellectual, and may be loosely summed up in those racial qualities which create a natural antipathy for joining battle with an enemy instead of a relish for combat. Eagles grow in time from the puniest eaglets, but in spite of the fondest hopes and the most patient training, doves snap ineffectually at hawks and never find pleasure in it. I have never heard of a Chinese militarist, even of the feudalist type, who did not prefer philosophic conversation to "soldier talk," who at heart was not a man of peace.

Far East Forecast

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, jr., and Miles W. Vaughn

The Lineup If Japan Fights U. S.

Editor's Note: A forecast of the pattern into which a Japanese-American war probably would fall, if such a struggle should come, is given in the following dispatch by two veteran observers of the Far Eastern scene.

War between Japan and the United States, if it comes, almost certainly immediately would become a part of the great world struggle between the Axis and anti-Axis nations.

A Far Eastern struggle presumably would see this alignment:

Axis; Japan, Manchukuo, the Japanese-sponsored Nanking government of China and possibly French Indo-China, supported by Germany, Italy and the other Axis nations.

Anti-Axis: United States, Britain, Russia, the Chungking government of China, and presumably all Britain's allies including the Netherlands Indies, India, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The major contestants, however, would be the United States and Japan for only these two nations have available naval and air strength sufficient to conduct a real Pacific Ocean war. The United States, indeed, hardly could throw its full strength into the conflict so long as present aid to Britain, including the United States naval patrol in the Atlantic, is maintained.

It should be borne in mind that economic and political phases of the struggle already have started, that informal staff talks have been held by both the Axis and anti-Axis groups, and that the role of each of the potential participants has been roughly determined. These roles appear to shape up as follows:

Axis Group

Japan: The Japanese navy, air force and army would have to do the bulk of the fighting for the Axis side. Just how capably they would perform is uncertain as no reliable figures of Nippon's military strength are available. Of immediate advantage to the Japanese would be the fact that her armed forces have been in active service, actually fighting against China, for more than four years. The Japanese, too, would be fighting in a region with which they are intimately familiar and from scores of bases—land, sea and air—which they have developed. They would be at disadvantage, however, in that they still face millions of hostile Chinese and would have to fight on all fronts at once since they now are surrounded by potential enemies.

Manchukuo: With a population estimated at more than 35 million, this has been a virtual part of military Japan since 1934. It has been carefully developed by Japan's powerful Kwantung army, has an excellent network of strategic railways and a considerable number of war industries. It is one of the great food producing areas of the world. It role would be to provide support behind the lines: not fighting man-power.

Nanking: This Japanese-sponsored regime still is in a state of being organized and exists only because of Japanese support. For the present it would appear Nanking would be, in most respects, a handicap rather than an asset to Japan in a major war.

Indo-China Strategic

French Indo-China: Furnishes strategic land, sea and air bases dominating the western side of the South China Sea and close to Britain's great base in Singapore. It also produces quantities of rubber, rice and other raw materials for Japan.

Germany, Italy and the other Axis nations, would be of greatest service to Japan if they succeeded in defeating Russia, thus removing the Soviet menace from Japan's northern flank.

A realistic examination of the whole Axis position in the Far East indicates that it depends in large measure on the outcome of the Russo-German struggle. If Germany wins that war soon and pushes Russia out of the picture the Axis position is strong. If a Japanese-American war starts while Russia still is a strong military power in the Far East intact, the Axis position is weak. That fact explains, in part the decision of Washington and London to give Russia all the military assistance they possibly can.

Thus the following potential roles of the potential British-American anti-Axis coalition against Japan must be judged in the light of the outcome of the Russo-German struggle.

Anti-Axis Group

United States and Britain.—Most observers believe that Japan under no condition will declare war on either Britain or the United States. Equally it is believed that if the two Western nations should declare war on Japan the Japanese probably would take the offensive at once in an effort to reduce Singapore, cripple American defenses in Guam and the Philippines, occupy Thailand and open the way to the oil fields of the Netherlands East Indies, which the Japanese must have to withstand a long struggle.

Simultaneously the Japanese probably would have to strike against Russia in an effort to gain control of Soviet Far Eastern bases which might be used against them.

British-American strategy, it would appear, would be to start immediate offensive operations on their own behalf. The strong British Imperial army and air force now stationed in Singapore-Malay and Burma would strike at Japanese positions in Indo-China by land and air, while the United States Navy struck from the sea and Russian and American air forces began bombing attacks on Japan proper from Soviet land bases in Siberia and American bases on the Aleutian Islands and on naval aircraft carriers.

Russia's Role

Russia: Soviet land and air forces would attack Japanese positions in Manchukuo, a considerable number of Russian submarines based on Vladivostok would attack Japanese shipping in the Japan Sea, and Russian planes would bomb the great industrial areas around Tokyo and Osaka.

China: The Chinese role would be to keep as many as possible of Japan's troops engaged and to start major offensives toward Peiping-Tientsin, Hankow-Shanghai, and Canton with a view to expelling all Japanese forces from China proper. An American military mission to Chungking already has been appointed.

The Netherlands Indies probably would be expected to do little but defend its own territory. Australia and India already have contributed the bulk of the British Empire forces stationed in southeast Asia and probably would send more. Canada's role would be one of general cooperation with the general British-American effort.

On That Chicago Bank

(John M. (100 Per Cent) Nichols, president of a Chicago bank, has closed it, returning all money to depositors, and declaring that as a result of Administration policies, there is no chance of investing money safely and profitably.—News item.)

Dear Mr. Nichols:

I think there is something in what you say, but you have the wrong idea about a bank today. You are old-fashioned. You still think of a bank as a financial institution which can make a little something for depositors. A bank today is a memorial to better days, a testimonial to happier times, a reminder of American traditions and, as such, it is needed more than ever.

A properly run bank used to be a place where a man could watch his savings multiply. Things like compound interest were mentioned. One heard talk of 4 and 5 per cent. But this encouraged a materialistic spirit. It made a depositor selfish and money-minded, though happy. But now all is changed.

A bank today is like a storage warehouse, a refrigeration plant, an edifice with something of the calm and quiet of a great library or art gallery. A man don't think of interest on his money when he enters a bank. He takes his dough there for storage, just as he would take a fur coat somewhere to keep it from the moths.

There is something about the atmosphere of a bank today that is restful and good for the nerves. It is so quiet there!

It is one of the few places left where a man can go to get away from it all, secure from disturbance. Money is almost the last thing he thinks about in a bank these days. He may put in or take out, but it is a strangely unexciting routine.

He sits and watches the vice presidents, pensive, resigned and a little sad as they move slowly here and there in the shadows. Once they flew about excitedly. They were hard on the nerves. But today they are almost as comforting as groups of clergymen in a great cathedral. Now and then a depositor catches a glimpse of a bank president, and he seems strangely like a bishop.

You can contact these officials these days and positively no waiting. In fact they are glad to see you, once they discover you are not somebody from another Federal commission. They will talk about money if you insist. But they would rather talk about something else. Art, literature, Hell-za-Poppin, vitamins, 75-cent lunches, the best way to take stains out of a tie . . . anything but money.

Mr. Nichols, you should put in benches and cozy chairs. You should install movie shorts and serve coffee and sandwiches. And why not put in an orchestra or a pipe organ? The people are still fond of banks and want to visit them. In fact the bank is regarded as one of their old friends. They hate to see one go. And so do I.

Unioneer Dodges Witness Stand

PEGLER

I go back to the preaching of William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, and call attention to his repeated demands that the law-enforcement agencies of the national, State and local governments proceed vigorously against crooks in the unions under his jurisdiction. I shall now reveal the hypocrisy of this position in presenting for your study an obvious conspiracy to mock the authority of the Government of the United States from which unions of the A. F. of L. derive a special license to persecute and rob millions of workers and to extort money from employing companies whose ownership represents the investments of millions of citizens.

As most of us know, George Browne, the gangster president of the stage and movie employes' craft unions, and Willie Bioff, his criminal colleague in the same racket, are under indictment here in New York charged with extorting $550,000 from the very employers with whom they carried on negotiations ostensibly in behalf of the workers. This union is a development of the old Capone-Nitti mob of bootleggers, murderers and free-style criminals, but, nevertheless, its general counsel is Joe Padway, who is also general counsel of the A. F. of L. in Washington and one of Green's confidential associates.

BOTH Green and Padway extolled Browne when the fact that he was a common Chicago gangster was well known, and Meyer Lewis, who was Green's regional agent on the Pacific Coast, went so far as to send an official vote of confidence to Bioff when that evil parasite was entering jail to serve time for living on the earnings of a stable of streetwalkers.

Browne and Bioff were to have gone to trial in the Federal Court on August 18, but the Government had to ask for a postponement until September 8 because the FBI had been unable to find Nick Circella, alias Dean, a stick-up man and habitual criminal of the Chicago area who occupies, by Browne's appointment, a position parallel to that of Bioff. Dean is a well-known dive-keeper in Chicago, operating a low but pretentious dump called the Colony Club, which is frequented by all the best drunkards of the gold coast and corn belt. His ownership of the joint is masked because his criminal record disqualifies him as a licensee, but he is the head man, nevertheless. And lest it be thought that I am speaking from hearsay in describing this joint as a joint, I may say that I, personally, have been solicited by a captain of waiters there on behalf of the prostitutes who sit for company in the shadows and that I have seen the tables in the playroom where the gambling is done when the heat is off.

THE COLONY CLUB is a dump under criminal ownership and assurance of this fact may impart a special thrill to the radio audience the next time the announcer's mooing notes advise the unseen multitude that they are listening to music by one of Jimmy Petrillo's union orchestras from the beautiful and exclusive Colony Club on Chicago's famous gold coast.

This Circella, or Dean, has been wanted as a witness in the trial of Browne and Bioff and without his testimony the case might be lost, but he has disappeared from his dump and from all his familiar underworld hangouts and the FBI has been unable to find him. It is not customary for Circella, or Dean, to disappear at this time of the year and he usually can be found without difficulty at any season, either in Chicago or with the rest of the criminal scum in Miami, Fla., during the hibernating period of the union racketeers, such as Umbrella Mike Boyle, Browne and Max Pollack, alias Caldwell, lately caught robbing a clerk's union under an A. F. of L. charter.

Candidly, Circella is on the lam and yet William Green, with a membership of four million according to his claim, has made no appeal to his organization to dig up key witnesses in the prosecution of men charged with preying on labor and thus discrediting the union cause. I specifically refrain from charging Green with participation in the conspiracy, but submit, nevertheless, that the existence of a conspiracy among Browne, Bioff and Dean, to hamper a prosecutor performing his duty according to Green's oft-repeated demands, is too apparent to permit of any doubt.

NEITHER am I prepared to believe that the FBI is exerting itself fully, because this failure does not consist with the reputation of the FBI or with J. Edgar Hoover's boastful personal and departmental publicity. The Department of Justice is seriously infected with politics and there are political interests which would suffer serious embarrassment if Dean were turned up and the whole story was told of the union relations and the politics of the movie industry.

That consideration aside, however, we still have Green exhorting prosecutors to punish union racketeers, while a notorious powerful criminal holding official credentials from one of his unions is hidden lest he be forced to reveal the vicious history of the union governed by Gangster Browne, who sits with Green as a member of the executive council of the A. F. of L.

Revival of Brittany Turns Clock Back to 18th Century

The revival of Brittany as an administrative unit, just announced by the Vichy government, appears to turn the clock back 150 years—to the era preceding the French Revolution—in a region that has special up-to-date significance in the Battle of the Atlantic, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"The new-old province of Brittany (Bretagne), whose name came with King Arthur's refugee people from England 15 centuries ago, and whose sea-going fisherfolk helped develop French Canada, is an ancient granite peninsula at the northwesternmost corner of occupied France," says the bulletin. "Now the rockbound western coast of this legend-haunted province lends Nazi invaders their most convenient Atlantic ports, the ready-made naval bases lying nearest to Germany.

"Brest, a first-class French naval base at the westernmost extension of France, and the smaller port of Lorient to the south have been listed as bases for German submarine and surface raider attacks on Atlantic commerce. The convenience of Brest to Atlantic sea lanes was established when it served as chief debarkation point for the A. E. F. during the World War. St. Nazaire, at the mouth of the important Loire River to the south, contains the shipyards that launched the giant Ile de France and the Normandie, and has also been a center for manufacturing airplanes. The inland port of Nantes, up the Loire from St. Nazaire, is Brittany's largest city.

"These vital Atlantic bases owe some of their recent improvements to Germany's World War defeat, since the war reparations plan provided German materials to build Nantes' floating dock, for instance, and plant expansions at the St. Nazaire shipyards.

"In addition to this formidable alignment of Atlantic bases on the west, the north coast of Brittany also supplies a row of small English Channel ports barely a hundred miles from England—St. Malo, Dinan, St. Brieuc, Morlaix and Roscoff. It was from St. Malo, in 1535, that the Breton sailor Jacques Cartier set out to explore Canada's coast.

"The name of Brittany as a governmental unit disappeared from French maps after the revolution. Brittany then was carved into the departments of Ille-et-Vilaine, Morbihan, Cotes-du-Nord, Finistere, and Loire, Inferieure. Reversing that process, the five departments are now reunited into a single province of 13,640 square miles, with more than three million inhabitants. Rennes, the ancient seat of the Dukes of Brittany and a modern market town dominating traffic through the Vilaine Valley, is the provincial capital.

"In its roughly triangular area Brittany includes some of France's most picturesque scenery and resort towns. The eleventh century church and thirteenth century castle crowning the pinnacle of Mont St. Michel are internationally famous for architectural and historical interest. The prehistoric stone monuments of a vanished race—the cromlechs, menhirs, and dolmens that form 'the Stonehenges of France'—draw visitors to such old provincial towns as Carnac, Col and Locmariaquer.

"Breton fishermen from the coastal towns sail for sardines to the Bay of Biscay, and voyage for cod to the waters around Iceland and Newfoundland. Herds grazing on the high heathlands of the interior and market gardens in the river valleys allow Brittany to ship butter, potatoes, cauliflowers, and other vegetables in normal times across the Channel to England."

10 Billion Federal Tax Urged As Alternative to Inflation

Copyright by New York Times

A Federal tax yield of 10 billion dollars, or about three times the $3,509,000,000 estimated yield from the tax bill now before Congress, was called for yesterday by the National Economy League as the only alternative to inflation or a "totalitarian" system of complete price control.

The recommendation was contained in a study by Willard D. Arant, research director of the league, and Dr. Harvey L. Lutz, professor of public finance at Princeton University, entitled, "Taxation vs. Inflation."

The tax yield required to avoid inflation could be reduced to $8,500,000,000 through economies in nondefense expenditures, the study showed.

Disagreeing with Secretary Morgenthau's plan to raise two-thirds of the budget by taxation and one-third by borrowing, the experts declared the present tax program "is only the First World War tax system with the dust brushed off.

"Excessive reliance on conventional taxes," the report said, "prevented the consideration of methods that would be more effective, but if we limit taxation today to the methods used in the First World War, we shall be making as great a mistake as it would be to put Gen. Pershing's 1918 Army, equipped as it was then, into the field against Hitler's 1941 mechanized divisions."

The league's experts added that "at the present rate of spending, bearing in mind the extra-budgetary operations of Governmental corporations, a failure to cover more than two-thirds of the budget by taxes is an invitation to inflation."

"The extent to which the Federal credit is employed outside the budget has been too little recognized by the public, and this fact makes their operations especially insidious as an inflationary influence," they added.

Russo-German War Is 'Very Private,' Knox Comments

Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday characterized the struggle between Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany as "a very private war."

He made the comment when he was asked at a press conference whether he was planning to send additional Naval Attaches to the United States Embassy in Moscow.

Knox said he knew of no plans for sending additional observers to Moscow and pointed out that no American attaches had yet been given a chance to go to the Russian battlefields.

Safety Drive Being Mapped To Aid Defense

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The National Safety Council, acting on a request by President Roosevelt, planned today to mobilize an army of safety-minded citizens for a campaign to halt accidents hampering the defense program.

The council urged governors, mayors and public officials to take emergency action, asked 100 labor unions, engineering societies, civic clubs and other Nation-wide organizations to join the movement and called upon its own membership of 5000 community safety bodies, industrial corporations and governmental departments to revitalize their safety efforts.

It also repeated Mr. Roosevelt's call for every American to enlist in the drive. The President recently reported a rapid rise in the toll of accidents of all kinds and directed the council to lead a concerted move to assure maximum safety and efficiency.

The council filled in this statistical background:

Deaths and injuries of workers in traffic accidents alone in the first seven months of 1941 resulted in the loss of man hours of work sufficient to build 20,000 fighter planes or 50,000 light tanks.

During 1940, occupational accidents resulted in 17,000 deaths, 60,000 permanent disabilities and 1,450,000 temporary injuries in the United States.

The council announced that the upward trend in motor vehicle fatalities remained unbroken. The number of traffic deaths in the first seven months of 1941 was placed at 20,080—including 9,500 workers. In July alone 3,290 persons lost their lives on streets and highways.

In prospect, the council warned, was an all-time high total of 40,000 traffic deaths for the year—unless the brakes of caution are applied forthwith.

'Fancy' Cotton Socks Tried Out by Wallace

Vice President Wallce proudly exhibited yesterday a pair of cotton socks designed for men who are used to silk hose.

Black, and trimly ribbed, the socks he was wearing had the glossy appearance and fine texture of silk.

Mansfield, New Chief of Detectives, to Miss Kids

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

WHEN Richard E. (Dick) Mansfield is sworn in as chief of detectives this morning he will take his oath with a certain reluctance—for, he said yesterday, "my kids can't come with me."

"My kids" are the hundreds of Northeast children who grew to love the white-haired commander of the Ninth Precinct during his nine years at the station.

"What's going to happen to my kids when I go uptown?" he asked. "Do you know that since I have been at No. 9, not a single child going to or from school has been killed by an automobile?

"That's an enviable record. And one of the first things I intend to do when my successor is announced, is to ask him to keep an eye on my gang."

THERE was huskiness in the throat of the veteran policeman, and it wasn't hard for one familiar with the jovial precinct commander to visualize his thoughts at the moment.

He could see the group of pleasant-faced youngsters on the steps of his precinct station house, waiting for his appearance. He could see them tagging after him as he walked along H Street Northeast, the business district of his precinct.

They were not boisterous or worrisome, though they may have wrangled over possession of his hands as he strolled along. He was the "mayor" of Northeast, and as such had the confidence of the community.

"My kids" spent most days playing in front of No. 9, waiting for the few moments when the police official would leave his work and set up the crowd to ice cream at the corner store.

AND it wasn't just tolerance which kept them quiet and orderly when Mansfield told them of the dangers of playing in the streets or disobeying their parents, as he did on many occasions and in many places as part of a well-thoughtout program of safety education.

They liked to listen and they learned, because Capt. Dick was their friend.

At 10 a. m. today, Mansfield will receive the oath of office as chief of detectives and he said he is "very pleased that the Commissioners accepted me for the job."

"The Detective Bureau is not Greek to me," he said last night. "I was a detective sergeant and a lieutenant there for ten years. I will take it slowly and I am sure I will have the confidence and cooperation of all the men."

Mansfield, 51, was appointed to the force in 1911. After serving as a bicycle and motorcycle patrolman, he was promoted to detective sergeant in 1922. After eight years in plain clothes, he was made a lieutenant, and after two years a desk lieutenant in the Detective Bureau, he was placed in command of the Ninth Precinct in 1932.

He is married and lives at Cheverly, Md.

HARVEY G. CALLAHAN, promoted yesterday from captain to inspector, will assume his new duties as executive officer of the Police Department this morning.

Callahan

Smith

And experts say there is not a better qualified man in the department to fill the post.

Callahan has a wide knowledge of the inner workings of the force, having served most of his 20-odd years in the department in administrative positions.

He has been director of the Metropolitan Police School, assistant to the executive officer and chief and property clerk, in addition to being commander of the First Precinct.

CAPT. MILTON D. SMITH, former commander of the Traffic Division, is regarded as one of the most efficient officers of police. He has served all of his years in uniform as a traffic officer and has attended the Maryland University Traffic School.

Battalion of Arborists Wages Hains Point Campaign

By George W. Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

ADVANCING fearlessly behind a screen of uprooted trees and several batteries of motorized tree-moving apparatus, a battalion of arborists dug in at Hains Point yesterday for a two-hour tree-transplanting campaign marked by only minor casualties.

The engagement occurred at the outdoor maneuver, or field demonstration stage, of the seventeenth National Shade Tree Conference, where approximately 400 veteran tree campaigners are operating from a base headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel.

The "over the top" signal at 2:30 p. m. yesterday found several hundred of the arborists already mobilized in the Hains Point sector, where trees and tree-moving apparatus were established around gaping craters in the terrain.

THESE, an investigation ascertained, were not shell holes but the future resting places of the several trees whose transplanting was the campaign's primary objective.

Action came quickly.

As an official gave orders and a description of the proceedings over a public address system, workmen pushed a four-wheeled tree-mover, resembling a miniature 75-millimeter battery, up to the edge of a sizable hole. The tree-mover carried a 20-foot spruce, and as the officials worked levers the spruce was freed from the mechanism and slid into the crater.

There were few repercussions from this maneuver, but shortly afterward one of the afternoon's minor casualties occurred.

EMPLOYING a heavy-caliber six-wheel tree-mover, arborists deployed around a 100-foot piece of foliage described officially as the Ginghko salisbury, or Chinese maiden hair tree.

Once again the tree-moving battery was wheeled to the edge of a crater, then workmen stretched a cable from the battery to another tree to aid in its emplacement.

The zero-hour silence was broken suddenly by a loud report and exclamations that might have come from a wounded soldier.

The heavy cable had snapped and the freed end had whipped by a group of arborists, grazing one of them and tearing a hole in his trousers.

"HEAVENS," exclaimed William J. Aylor, delegate from Bryn Mawr, Pa., "did you see that? Was that thing tight? I'd just touched the thing, and bang, it just missed me. I mean it grazed me."

Officials called a halt in the tree-moving maneuver and directed the attention of the arborists to the tree-spraying or anti-insect phase of the campaign.

To the accompanying boom of powerful gasoline engines, men armed with spray guns advanced on a 1000-foot weeping willow.

TRIGGERS were pressed and the streams of chemical spray geysered up and over the towering willow. Spectators beat a strategic retreat as insects offered only token resistance to the fury of the arborist drive.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'Tripe!' Says Woman, Speaking of Correspondent's Theory That Love-Hunger Makes Girl Sick at Stomach During Her 'Selectee' Beau's Infrequent Visits

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I haven't the slightest desire to see myself in print, but I would like to offer a bit of encouragement to the girl who wrote you on August 21, about her spells of nervous tension, attendant on seeing her "selectee" beau, when he is home from camp. And, also, I want to say "Tripe!" to the woman who wrote, under date of August 24, that the girl's condition is due to repressed passion!

I can understand perfectly the girl's reactions in the circumstances, as I have suffered all my life from the same sensations. My first "spell" overtook me at the age of 8, and I respectfully insist that "passion" had nothing to do with it. I had been promised a trip, to which I looked forward with such excitement that when the time arrived, I was too ill to go. Fifteen minutes after the party had left me behind, I was cured. The tension was relieved and I was perfectly normal.

With varying degrees of illness, brought on by varying causes, I have experienced the same sensations hundreds of times since. I am now nearly 40 and I will admit that there have been times when "passion" may have had something to do with it. But there have been many more times when it was just the excitement of anticipating some unusually pleasant social event.

In recent years I have learned to control these attacks by using almost exactly the method you outlined, Miss Haworth. I had to work it out myself, because I was always told by doctors that it was simply "imagination." Now, I know that I must eat carefully and slowly in preparation for some special occasion; that I must get as much rest as possible beforehand; and that I must drink orange juice to keep going until the crisis is over. I am not employed by any fruit company and have no connection of any kind with one. I have simply learned that orange juice will carry me through a situation such as "G. M." outlines. When it is over, I eat a hearty meal and then I am as good as new.

Another suggestion you made, which I consider vitally important, and which I urge upon "G. M." is this: Get as much social experience as you can; and then you can take your dates with your best beau more calmly. Additional social experience need not detract from the glamour of these important occasions. It will simply make "G. M." more nonchalant and relaxed.

If "G. M." really tries, she can talk herself out of her agitation. I have ruined many important occasions by being too jittery and ill to have the good time I had planned. I have also saved the day, more than once, by walking up to a mirror, looking myself in the eye, and actually saying out loud: "Now, look here, Salome, don't be a fool. You are not ill. You have eaten nothing to make you ill. There is nothing in the world wrong with you but excitement. Now be your age and forget yourself and have a good time; or tomorrow you will be so mad at yourself that you'll feel like cutting your throat." Silly, isn't it? But it works.

Pass this on to "G. M.," won't you? She has a rough road to travel, but she can get herself straightened out and under control if she tries hard enough. And marriage isn't an essential part of the cure; because in marriage, as well as out of it, she will always have to meet some social situations independently of "her man's" support. Sincerely,

W. S. V.

Says Human Selfishness Causes World's Woes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The longer I read your column (and I read it daily), the more I realize that most of the trouble in the world is caused by human selfishness. The latest reminder is the story, published in your column of August 24, of the young wife whose "wonderful mother and equally fine mother-in-law" heap praise on her for devoting all her time to her husband and three small children, while spending most of their time taking trips, going to shows, etc. She asks how to "persuade them to show a little mercy on her," by staying with the babies occasionally, so that she may have a "date" with her husband—which she hasn't had for two years!

A scathing indictment of selfishness, surely, on the part of those two grandmothers! But I once observed a similar case in my neighborhood. A young mother of two, living in her mother-in-law's home, taught school on the side to help her husband support the family. She bought the groceries and did most of the cooking, but she never could go out at night, because her mother-in-law neatly sidestepped any responsibility for looking after the children.

On the other hand, I am the grandmother of four youngsters, who are my daughter's children. I live in her home, and gladly tend the children while she goes out several nights a week with her husband—to movies, to the homes of friends for dinner, etc. Also, I take care of the children when their parents go on trips; do all the family mending; make most of the children's clothes; hear their lessons; read to them, enter into their games and doctor their bruises. Yet I make no claim to being either a "wonderful mother or fine mother-in-law." I am simply a sympathetic grandmother, who wants to be helpful.

I wonder if the young wife has ever asked either grandmother to stay with the children occasionally? If she were to say gaily to both that she and her husband had "cooked up a job for them;" that they were about to be drafted, one night a week, to look after the children so that the parents could have a free evening—I believe both mothers would accede to the plan. Each would be ashamed to decline, fearing the other mother might consent, thus proving herself to be the better grandmother. Sincerely,

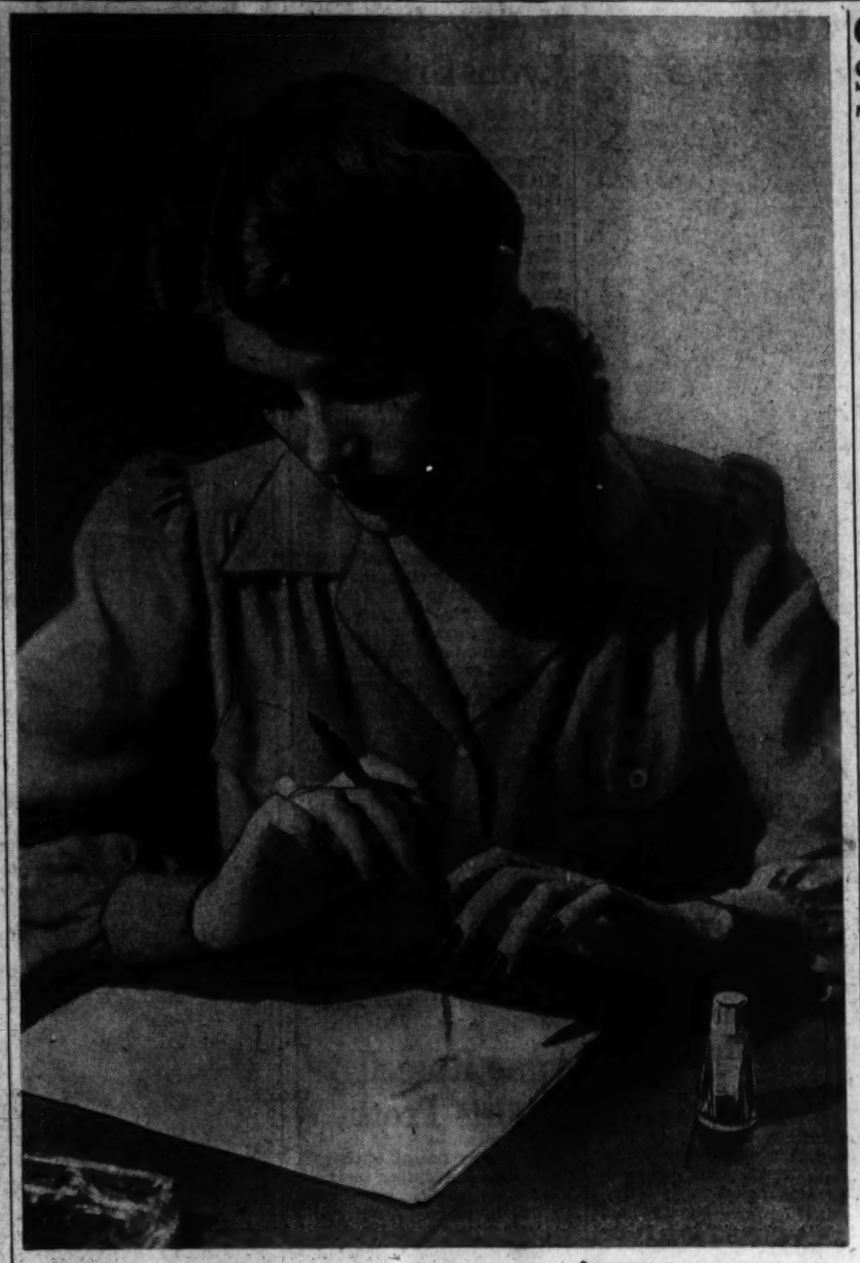

AVERAGE GRANDMOTHER.

Out of East Comes Light on Design

The word "Oriental" takes in a lot of territory. Usually it's used to include, decoratively speaking, the Near East as well as the Far East. In many ways it might be said that Oriental influences, particularly the Chinese, have probably had as much influence on the development of European design as the classic. For the trading ships that brought beautiful fabrics, porcelains and lacquers back from the East were the inspiration of European craftsmen for hundreds of years.

It was the search for a shorter route to these treasures that led to the discovery of America. From China and Japan came, most importantly, fabrics, porcelains and lacquer. India sent exotic metal work, some furniture and wonderful cotton fabrics as her contributions to our decorative vernacular.

Outfitted Down to Her Fingertips

It's not only her wardrobe the college girl should be thinking about these days—the appearance of her nails becomes doubly important when her hands are set off by long winter sleeves and there is no more tan for camouflage. Hockey-sticks, typewriters, and the occasional hair-pulling prophesy a hard college year for her nails in battling those twin torments, peel and chip. But she has an ally on the market now in Seal-Fast, a quick-drying product to brush over the polish. It hardens the enamel but won't change the shade—which, incidentally, shouldn't be any harsh theatrical red this year, but a softer, dustier tone, such as Rhubarb Pink or Fireweed.

Design Dress As Career

ONLY yesterday a career in dress design seemed remote and not so promising for an American girl, for Europe was the fashion center. Now America sets the styles. Your career as designer may start right on Main Street—in your own home!

With home lessons, you may find yourself creating smart dresses for yourself and your friends, fashions smart enough to give you the entree in a well-paying profession.

Knowing what lines flatter the figure, what colors and fabrics to use effectively, you can work out your idea in simple steps.

You may first make a sketch of your fashion. Then you drape, pin and cut out a basic muslin pattern for half your gown on a dress form.

On this beautifully fitting muslin pattern you next work out details with the help of colored threads and pins. You may have to experiment a little to see which lines look best.

War Fails to Kill Interest in Frills Of Homemaking

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

There is something very reassuring about the letters that come to our desk—from women in all parts of the country. They remind us that life goes on, in some of the world at least, in its peaceful, reasonable way.

Mrs. F. J. M. writes (1), "We have been given a round occasional table that has a central scenic motif in soft pastel colors with the remaining part in gilt. We are planning to cut this table down to a coffee table size and have all but the scenic refinished. We would so much appreciate your advice as to just what color to refinish it. Would pale green or a mahogany color be best or have you a better suggestion? We have a few antiques; the other furniture is mostly eighteenth century reproductions. Our rug is a soft rose with burgundy, green, tan and peacock blue. It is a sunny room. What color would you like the walls and draperies? (2) We would like help, also, with a peasant room. I have removed the finish from some furniture and would like to paint some colorful design on it. Can an inexperienced hand do this work?"

(1) We are wondering whether it wouldn't be nice to leave your table in gilt finish if it is in good condition. This would be quite harmonious with your eighteenth century reproductions and your antique. If the gold finish is nice we believe you would like it when you get used to the idea. Gilt furniture is turning up in style again, you know. But if it must be done over a light antiqued blue would be lovely. Why not do your walls and draperies in a very pale pink-beige, using the same shades for any new upholstery needed. The contrasting colors you already have will be good accents. (2) About the furniture you are interested in decorating with peasant motifs—an inexperienced hand could do very nice decorating if you are willing to take a great deal of pains. We have sent you bulletin on patterns for peasant designs. You can also find motifs from wall-paper, story books and other such places. If you are uncertain of yourself you might try pasting wall paper motifs on the furniture. This can be done by shellacking the surface to be decorated, sticking the cut-out design on the shellac, letting the shellac serve as glue, and when it is dry shellac over the design.

Good Cooking Sells Nutrition To Family

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S GOOD appetizing food that sells good nutrition to the family. Food so good you eat it for the sheer joy of eating—not because it is "good for you." That's the opinion of Uncle Sam's nutritionists as expressed in the "Market Basket." It isn't necessarily expensive food that makes eating fun, but meals that are skillfully planned, well-cooked and attractively served. Cheerful table conversation, comradeship and laughter are the other ingredients suggested, for without these the best-planned assortment of food does not add up to well-being.

The "Market Basket" passes along a number of tips for the homemaker. Perhaps you use all of the pointers given and, in that case, you will enjoy reading them just to find out that you have been doing for years all the things the experts advise.

Color, temperature and texture are important in every meal. Combine the rich brown of a savory pot roast with the orange of carrots—the golden hue of ripe peaches with the deep purple of blackberries—the bright red of tomatoes on cool salad greens.

Variety in texture is important. Don't have all foods soft, like a souffle with the main course and a dessert with a custard base; nor all crisp foods, like cole slaw with corn on the cob and celery. It's better to have interesting contrasts: crunchy toast with soup; crisp salad with baked beans. Too many watery vegetables at one meal are not appealing, like summer squash with succotash. Two starchy vegetables should not be served at the same meal, like potatoes with lima beans. Grilled tomato with lima beans would be a better combination.

Temperature Important

And, of course, all hot foods should be served piping hot, and cold foods really cold.

In the opinion of Uncle Sam's experts, nothing can do so much to get the family really interested in eating as good cooking.

There is an art in cooking vegetables, and properly cooked vegetables not only retain their food values but sell the family on their use. Here are some of the basic rules:

When cooking vegetables, use very little water, cook quickly for a short time only and do not add soda. We all realize that vegetables that are cooked for a long time in a large quantity of water taste like nothing on earth! Use the liquids in which the vegetables are cooked—it makes soups, sauces and gravies delicious.

Lumps in gravy and sauces can spoil the meal. It's so easy to avoid by blending the starchy material with a bit of liquid, then carefully stirring this into the rest of the mixture. Or in making the gravy or white sauce, cook the flour with the fat to add flavor. Then gradually add the cold liquid and stir until the blend is perfect.

High Heat Toughens Meat

High temperatures have a tendency to toughen protein foods, so meats, eggs, cheese and milk should all be cooked at low to moderate temperatures all through the cooking period. There's a special way to make cheaper, tougher cuts of meat tender. Brown the less tender cut in hot fat, then cook slowly with added liquid in a covered pan. The steam formed by adding water and keeping the lid on the pan is just what is needed to soften tough connective tissue. Or, tough meat may be ground or chopped, then it can be cooked the same as tender meat.

As every expert cook knows, good nutrition and good food are one and the same thing—and when the meals look appetizing and taste delicious, you don't have to "sell" nutrition to the family.

The Peplum Problem

WITH PEPLUM dresses the high style silhouette on the fashion front, a woman with generous sized hips asked The Post Fashion Editor if any kind of a peplum is suitable for women of her build.

In answer to this query, reference might be made to an eminent stylist who says that peplums call attention to hips—and woe be unto over-sized ones! Since hips are emphasized by peplums, the larger woman should shy away from them—at lease the full and double tiered varieties.

On the other hand, extra fullness about the hips—if controlled—may have a slenderizing effect. The two-piece dress with hip encirclement is one way of giving the appearance of a peplum. The long, slender tunic treatment is another means of avoiding emphasis at the hipline. Both of these styles have a slimming, sheath-like effect.

The most successful way of camouflaging large hips, and still giving the feeling of a new style, is by benefit of drapery. Grecian drapery, which carries the eye toward the center of the dress, is an excellent device. The so-called pegtop drape with extra ripples of material down the front of the dress brings the focal point of interest to the centerline. The important thing a woman should take note of, however, is that fashion does not necessarily decree a peplum for the best dressed woman.

Schoolgirls' Skirts

RECENTLY a high school freshman, disgusted at never being able to keep her skirts up on her hips, asked whether there is such a garment as a girl's skirt available in junior sizes.

Investigation on this question revealed there were now available in Washington a whole raft of junior fashions from skirts to date-time dresses, designed by a group of young girls from Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri. Although minor subjects are required at this school, most of the coeds major in designing.

Even the professor is a designer in his own right. The girls learn the art from draping directly on their colleagues. They know how to put a tuck here and a little fullness there, so that a miniature waist really fits. Their youthful touches show the mind of a teenage at work.

What Color Gloves?

SINCE many women will soon be doning spring coats and left-over fall wraps to tide them over until new autumn outfits are purchased, the question of accessories arises. One reader wants to know what colors will be most popular for gloves, bags and other items so that she may brighten her costumes for the present.

Gloves will be one of the most colorful accessories you will wear this season—according to glove buyers. Brilliant desert colors and berry tones are slated to be the rage. There are old wines and purple tones, Osage shades, olive greens, rust and tile colors, Kona red and bright red. Color enthusiasts say there is nothing more beautiful than brown with a rich touch of green. With black and gray, red and wine are suggested—and sometimes green and gray. When combining these colors to spruce up a coat or ensemble, remember that only two articles should match—such as gloves and bag or hat.

'Cynette' Allen Plans Her Debut at Yuletide

Larz Anderson Mansion and Fort Myer Discussed as Setting for Coming-Out Tea

By Carolyn Bell

A dash of French will enliven the All-American bouquet of buds this season, when "Cynette" Allen, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry T. Allen, makes her debut during the Christmas holidays.

This latest addition to the debutante set is vivid and dark and possesses all the vivacity of her French mother, the former Juliette du Souzy. Although her real name is Jocelyn, she has been known as Cynette all her life—which in French means "little Jocelyn." Plans for the debut-tea have not been completed but the family has definitely decided on this holiday season. The lovely Larz Anderson mansion on Massachusetts avenue—now the property of the Society of the Cincinnati—has been discussed as a possible setting. Then again the Allens may decide to have their daughter presented at Fort Myer where the Colonel is now stationed. They have attractive quarters on the post, with one of the best views in Washingon. Their house is situated just behind the flag site and overlooks the Potomac with the twinkling lights of the Capital on the far side.

As she is still a student, Cynette plans to combine studies with debutante festivities this season. An excellent rider, she takes a daily canter over the paths at Fort Myer, where she has her own horse stabled. The bud takes after her father in this respect, for the library of their own home is lined with silver cups and plaques he has won at various horse shows. He exhibited at the Olympic games in Antwerp and has shown horses in competition with the British and the French.

Romance Blossomed During Last War

Their's was a war romance that flowered during the last World War. The dashing young Lieut. Allen met Mlle. du Souzy in France and shortly thereafter the couple were married at the du Souzys ancestral home, Chateau de Gedrolles in the east of France. At that time Lieut. Allen was stationed with the Eighth Corps of which his father, Gen. Henry T. Allen was in command. Later Gen. Allen was in command of the American forces in Germany.

After the Armistice, Lieut. Allen and his bride lived in Germany from 1919 to 1923, during the time the army of occupation was there. Since then the Allens have led a rather typical Army life with posts at Fort Riley, Rochester, N. Y. and Washington. They have recently returned from several weeks at Ocean City, Md., where they enjoyed the ocean spray, sun and sand.

Plans to Exhibit Dog At National Kennel Show

Mrs. Allen has recently acquired a miniture schnauzer called "Midgett" with which she hopes to win a blue ribbon. She plans to exhibit the pup at the National Capital Kennel Show in October at the Meadow Brook show grounds.

Cynette has quite a cosmopolitan background to her credit, having spent about every other year abroad with her mother. She speaks French like a native and is now attending the Convent of Sacred Heart. Aside from being an excellent horsewoman she plays tennis and swims.

Army's Tank Killers Live Up to Name

Newly-formed Outfit Demonstrates Power in Mimic War at Fort Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Aug. 27.—In a dust-ridden and smoky demonstration here today the Army took the wraps from its newest combat unit, a battalion designed to seek out tanks and destroy them.

The Provisional GHQ Tank Destroyer Battalion, formed quietly from the Ninety-third Antitank Battalion, consists of 900 officers and men. In addition to its basic antitank troops, it includes 10 light tanks for reconnaissance, from the Seventieth Tank Battalion, and a battery of eight 37 millimeter antiaircraft guns from the Seventy-fourth Coast Artillery.

Concerned with antitank defense since its organization last September, the Ninety-third has exchanged its 37 millimeter guns, towed behind trucks, for new weapons mounted on their carriers. Its chief reliance will be on 75 millimeter guns, 36 of which, mounted on half-track armored vehicles, will be distributed among its three firing batteries. In addition it will have 18 guns of 37 millimeter mounted on jeeps.

Besides the 75's on half tracks and the 37's on jeeps, the Army uncovered a new type vehicle in its "swamp buggy," a high-wheeled, short-coupled carrier armed with a 37 gun. This new engine of destruction carries three men, who fire the gun from their seats.

In today's demonstration, a half-hundred newspapermen and Army officers saw the new destroyers sent into action against a platoon of five tanks. From the hill on which they stood, the spectators saw a jeep of the reconnaissance battery receive a report of approaching tanks from a motorcycle scout and relay it by radio to the battalion command.

Off to their left, they saw the antiaircraft battery wheel into position, and advance elements of the destroyer come down a little farm road and across their front. The destroyers bounced over the rough ground and up a hill on the right, where they ran into advance elements of the attacking tanks.

Tanks Wiped Out

Back they scuttled, to take up concealed positions along the route the tanks were expected to follow, while battalion headquarters was advised by radio of what they had found. They lay under cover while five tanks rattled over the crest of the hill they had just left, and fanned out across the field. Both jeeps opened first and the tanks wheeled and wallowed over to flank them.

Then the 75's burst from hiding in the woods, their big guns blazing and blanketing the field in blue smoke. Both jeeps were knocked out, but the big 75s came on, blazing away at the tanks until all of them were stopped. The 75's went on ahead over the hill.

As they disappeared, the full force of the battalion came, 75's and 37's, waddling across the field to find the main body of the tanks before they could come down on the defending infantry. From over the hill came the thunder and smoke and dust of battle.

The Army emphasized that the provisional destroyer is tentative and experimental. Its final form and tactical employment and those of other such units will depend on results of current experiments.

Theft Laid to Last Barrow Brother

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 27 (U.P.).—L. C. Barrow, last of the notorious Barrow brothers who terrorized the Southwest in the early 1930's, was hunted here tonight by police on a charge of stealing a dozen cans of caviar from a grocery store. Two women, one of whom said she was Barrow's wife, were held in connection with the theft, while Barrow and a man identified as Kelly Rhine were believed to be at large somewhere in the city, after eluding police who stopped their car to question them.

Both Barrow and Rhine were said to have long police records in Texas and Oklahoma. Barrow's famous outlaw brothers, Clyde and Buck, were killed in gunfights with police in 1934. Clyde and Bonnie Parker, his cigar-smoking sweetheart, were killed in Louisiana, and Buck was killed in Iowa.

Vice President Wallace addressed a group of Latin-American students in Spanish yesterday and then swung into English to say that "this hemisphere is the last refuge of liberty."

The Vice President greeted in his office in the Capitol about 50 post-graduate students from Chile, Ecuador, Venezuela and Peru who have been studying this summer at the University of Michigan.

"It is up to us," said Wallace, "to make economic democracy work, as well as political democracy. No democracy has done a first class job in the economic field. We hope that our minds will grow as fast as the changes that will come and that law can grow as fast."

Herman Harnecker, Chilean engineer, replied to Wallace's speech, pointing to the need for hemispheric solidarity and thanking Government officials for the hospitality shown the party in the Capital.

Earlier in the day, the South American group visited George Washington's tomb. The party will go to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis today. They will sail for South America from New York on September 12.

New York, Aug. 27 (A.P.).—Ignace Jan Paderewski, former premier of Poland, whose magic fingers thrilled millions of music lovers during his career as concert pianist, left a total estate, personal and real, of $41,000 when he died June 29, papers filed today in Surrogate's Court showed.

Application for letters of administration of the estate were filed in behalf of Mme. Antonina Wilkonska, sister of the pianist and sole distributee of his estate. Mme. Wilkonska advised the court she was unable to find any will left by her brother, a widower.

Tribute Paid to Summerlin

Reports have been received at the State Department of exceptional demonstrations of esteem accorded to Capt. George T. Summerlin, chief of the Division of Protocol, during a recent visit to Chile. Capt. Summerlin returned to Washington Monday after his first visit to Santiago, the Chilean capital, since 1917. In the latter year he finished a three-year stay there, first as secretary of the Legation and later as secretary of the Embassy.

Correspondents in Santiago told of expressions of esteem and affection for Capt. Summerlin from scores of his friends in official and private life, as one of the most popular foreign diplomats ever accredited to the Chilean capital.

A testimonial luncheon was given for him at the noted Union Club by a number of high civilian and military officials of the Chilean government. And a distinguished company attended a dinner given for Capt. Summerlin by the United States Ambassador, Claude G. Bowers. He was also guest of honor at a reception given by the Chile-American Society.

It was reported that several of Capt. Summerlin's friends were "interested and amused" to discover that the chief of protocol and highest authority on diplomatic etiquette, in charge of introducing royalty and ambassadors at the White House, still insisted on rolling his own cigarettes. It is a habit formed when he was a cavalry officer in the United States Army.

Barbara Hutton, Cary Grant Deny They Plan to Wed

Mexico City, Aug. 27 (A.P.).—Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton, who arrived here separately a few days ago, said today they were "vacationing in Mexico with friends," and emphasized that they had no marriage plans.

"Rumors that we will marry are untrue," said Miss Hutton, Woolworth heiress whose divorce from Count Cort Haugwitz-Reventlow of Denmark became final last March 1. "I plan to be here about three weeks but n olonger, as I am already anxious to return to New York to see my baby."

Interviewed independently, the actor said:

"Honestly, on the square, there is nothing to reports that Miss Hutton and I will marry."

Curb Strikes, Veterans Ask Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—The veterans of Foreign Wars urged President Roosevelt today to outlaw jurisdictional strikes in National Defense industries and recommended that draft-age workers who participate in such strikes lose their deferment and be called into military service.

Another resolution asked President Roosevelt "to dispense" with the services of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins because she "has demonstrated her lack of ability to handle the position she holds." The resolution was offered by the Department of Florida and similar resolutions were advanced by State units of Colorado, Virginia and Maryland.

Gen. Hines Speaks

Delegates to the forty-second national encampment took the antistrike action after hearing Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator ,declare that "every means must be employed" to stop delays in defense production caused by strikes and walkouts.

The resolution, introduced by L. G. Taggart, of California, chairman of the V. F. W. committee on national defense, recommended:

"That the President utilize existing authority for the settlement of differences between employers and employes in such manner as will protect their rights and prevent stoppage of work directly or indirectly affecting defense production; that during the period of emergency, all jurisdictional strikes shall be considered un-American and outlawde; and that any person who has been granted occupational deferment from military service and who shall participate in a strike . . . affecting defense production shall lose his deferment and immediately be called into military service."

"Bad Advice" Blamed

Declaring that strikes on defense projects must be "the result of bad advice," Hines told the delegates "Even in times of emergency I do not believe that any of us want to deprive workment in defense plants of what normally would be their rights.

"But they do not have—and never have had—in time of national emergency the right to strike against their Government."

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, said "Something must be done" about the nmber of men rejected by the Army for physical defects.

"Either they will have to be inducted into the Army regardless of physical condition and be rehabilitated there, or the States will have to make some arrangements for doing it," he said.

Gets Reno Divorce

Mrs. Evadna Lewis Quigley yesterday won a divorce from George M. Quigley, jr., of Washington, on grounds of cruelty, in Reno, Nev., the Associated Press reported.

St. Mark's Seeks To Merge With Other Lutherans

The Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, yesterday announced appointment of a special committee to map plans for a merger with some other Lutheran congregation.

Further widening of Independence Avenue has necessitated plans for razing St. Mark's, Eighth and Independence Avenue Southwest, and Marvin Methodist Church, Tenth and Independence Avenue. Marvin will hold its final service as an organized body on September 28.

The St. Mark's merger committee is headed by Austin M. Cooper, Sunday School superintendent, and includes Councilmen W. W. Wilson and C. P. Suther; J. H. Gross, of the Men's Brotherhood; Mrs. C. A. Leimbach, teacher of the Alpha Bible Class; Mrs. Perry Leishears, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Miss Clara Borjes, primary department superintendent.

Liquor Price Hearing Set Sept. 5

A public hearing on the recent request by the Beverage Industry Committee and the Retail Liquor Dealers Association for price-fixing regulations will be held September 5 before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in the District Building.

The renewed request for price-fixing was based on remarks made by the recent grand jury after its investigation of the liquor trade here.

War Center Site Depends On Roosevelt

Army.

Delano said:

"The President told Somervell: 'of course, you understand that I am Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and I want the Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy near me so I can reach them quickly.' He said it jokingly and he laughed as he said it."

Because of the difference of opinion, start of construction has been suspended pending a final decision by the President, other sources disclosed.

These other qualified officials had little doubt, however, that the President's ultimate decision would follow the desire he expressed at a press conference Tuesday: namely, to build the Army offices, scaled down almost one-half in size, on the quartermaster site.

President Roosevelt has often made personal inspection trips to sites of public buildings and public works in and around the District. He inspected the National Airport several times while it was under construction.

Conference Is Lengthy

The four officials were in the White House an hour and a half. After conferring a short time with the President, they adjourned to a nearby room, at his suggestion, to try to compromise their differences.

When they finally left the White House, Gen. Somervell had not yet been brought into agreement with the President's point of view.

Delano told reporters at the White House that Somervell was insisting on the original site and size for the building, and Somervell said that was correct.

The entire project was "up in the air," according to Delano. Both Delano and Bergstrom carried with them to the conference large packages of blueprints and plans. The discussion between the President and Somervell evidently delayed a decision on what kind of building to erect.

While the War Department wanted a building of four million square feet to go on the Memorial Bridge end of the old Experimental Farm, in Arlington, the President said he wanted a building of 2¼ million square feet to go on the Quartermaster site, which is north of Columbia Pike near the Washington-Richmond Highway.

Bergstrom was identified by Somervell as president of the American Institute of Architects, and employed by the War Department as architect for the office building.

Building Suggested For Old Records

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday commended President Roosevelt's plan that the proposed new War Department Building in Arlington be used after the emergency for the millions of rarely used Government records at the end of the present emergency.

For nearly 15 years Representative Cochran has been urging such a repository, basing his arguments on surveys made by the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments. The surveys revealed that if space now being used for inactive files could be taken over for desk room aproximately 30 per cent more space would be available for office work. He said:

"War and Navy have today the jackets of every man who ever served in the military or naval forces, while the Veterans' Administration has a jacket for every claim for pension filed since the beginning of the country. Millions upon millions of files inactive, but which must be kept."

Mother-to-Be And 10 Sons, Oldest 14, Are Evicted

Chicago, Aug. 27 (INS).—Mrs. Jean Wagner, 35, an expectant mother, and her ten sons, ranging in age from Edward, 14, to Terry, 1, were evicted from their flat today.

The husband and father, John, 35, left yesterday to hike the 40 miles to Joliet to attempt to borrow money to pay the four months' rent due. In poor health, he was found unconscious on the highway and was taken to a Joliet hospital.

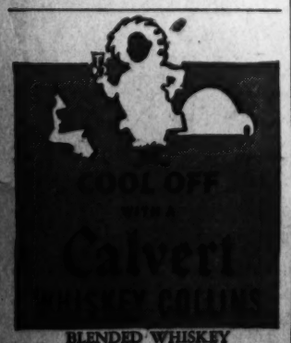

As the Wagners settled themselves in an alley among their few possessions, firemen from a nearby station brought food. Neighbors gathered, and presently left with one or two of the brood to share their already crowded flats. The mother stayed on until all of her sons had been promised shelter for the night, and only then did she consent to be taken to a neighborhood maternity clinic for examination.

Several Cubans Held, Nazis Reveal

Burlin, (Thursday,) Aug. 28 (AP).—Several Cuban citizens have been arrested in "occupied territories" for committing "hostile acts directed against the security of the German Reich," the official D. N. B. announced early today.

The number of Cubans was not stated nor was the place of their arrest mentioned in the brief D. N. B. report.

(Cuba on August 15 ordered six German consuls to leave the country by September 1 after their offices were declared closed for alleged improper activities. Germany took reciprocal action toward Cuban consulates.)

No Curfew on Sleep

A police radio call, "Man slumped over the wheel of an auto," sent a scout car to the 4000 block Alabama Avenue Southeast yesterday, where officers found a motorist sleping soundly. Awakened, he asked, "What time is it?" "It's 7:16 a. m." "Good, now I can get some gas."

Curfew on Sleep

Police headquarters received an avalanche of complaints of a noisy party early this morning from sleepless residents of Capitol Hill hotels. Investigation led to First Precinct Station, where 35 drunks rounded up during the day were whooping it up with "The Volga Boatman."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

More Office Space Needed, But Delayed

The same cry is heard in every defense agency. It's for more office space. The efficiency of the War Department, officials have said, has been lowered from 30 to 50 per cent by the fact that its 27,000 employes here are crowded into 17 different buildings. Several OPM chiefs have reported that their units would have done better jobs if they had adequate space. The organization of key defense agencies like the new War Economic Board, the Coordinator of Information, OPACS, and Civilian Defense all have been delayed and hampered by the shortage of space. Nondefense agencies are faced with removal from Washington to relieve the space shortage.

Who's to blame for this mess? Perhaps many officials, but the bulk of the responsibility falls on the head of John Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, and his assistant, W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of the Public Buildings Administration. These two officials are charged with constructing new office buildings here and they haven't done the job despite the fact that money is available. All the buildings that Congress has appropriated money for should be ready for occupancy today and they aren't. If they were, the space shortage would be greatly alleviated.

Nearly 11 months ago—October 9, 1940—Congress appriated $3,200,000 for two general office buildings. Believe it or not, today PBA hasn't awarded the contract for one of the buildings that will house 4000 employes and it's reported that it'll be around November before construction can possibly begin—13 months after the money became available. This building is supposed to be erected at Suitland, Md.

There Are Reasons

The contract for the other office building was let last December and it was supposed to be ready for occupancy in late spring. Here it is in late summer and PBA reports the structure is only 70 per cent completed. This building will have 600,000 square feet and will accommodate approximately 6000 employes if it's ever completed. Navy Department, begging for space, will get the building.

In April, Congress appropriated $4,100,000 for temporary buildings in the District. As an illustration of what can be done, Temporary Building D, at Fourth and Independence Avenue Southwest, was built in less than the contracted delay of 75 days and it's now being occupied by OPACS. Temporary Building N—in the rear of the Navy Building—was occupied within three months after the money became available.

Temporary Buildings F, G and H—on Twenty-third Street near the Naval Hospital—are well toward completion and the contract on Temporary Building M has just been let. But buildings representing half the money appropriated haven't even been contracted for. These proposed buildings are to be known as WB, WF and WA and they would provide space for 3600 employes.

In fairness to Carmody and Reynolds, it must be said that they planned to erect these buildings on the Arlington Experimental Farm, the place where the gigantic War Department building is now planned. Moreover, Carmody is reported to have wanted to erect Temporary Buildings F, G, H and M on the grounds at the War College but the Army officers blocked the plan because it would have torn up their golf course among other reasons. Anyway, that accounts for some delay.

Lyle Belsley, assistant to Wayne Coy, the President's liaison with OEM, has resigned to accept a key post at OPM . . . Stanley C. Scanlon is an employe candidate for the Social Security appeals board. His manager is Harold Lowy . . . John Baker has been promoted to information specialist at Agriculture and Keith Himebaugh has been made assistant information director.

Biddle Rules Dupont Lease To U. S. Valid

Former Resident Sues for $15,000 Damages, Charging 'Breach of Covenant'

Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle yesterday made public his opinion that the Government should continue to proceed upon the theory that the lease of the Dupont Circle Hotel is valid, at the same time virtually leaving the solution of the problem to expected court action.

Both the Government and the corporation "have proceeded too far in reliance upon the validity of the lease to warrant any other conclusion," he declared in a memorandum submitted to President Roosevelt at the latter's request.

Meanwhile, a former resident of the hotel, Edward J. Fisher, now a resident of the Roosevelt Hotel, yesterday filed a $15,000 damage suit in District Court against the Dupont Hotel Corporation, claiming a "breach of covenant."

Injunction proceedings to prevent conversation of the building from an apartment hotel to a Government office building will be filed in District Court today on behalf of 20 former tenants of the Dupont Hotel by Attorney Martin F. O'Donahue, it was announced by George E. Reedy, sr., a spokesman for former residents.

Developments Traced

The Attorney General's opinion traced the following moves in the Dupont dispute, previously aired at a Congressional hearing:

1. Harry Newman, elected president of Dupont Circle Inc., July 3, "entered into negotiations with the Government for the leasing of the building at a time when he was not an officer or director of the corporation, but held an option to purchase its entire capital stock."

2. By letter of June 23 the Public Buildings Administration transmitted to the corporation a form of lease, worded as effective July 1, requesting its return for execution on behalf of the Government.

3. At a meeting of the board of directors July 3 it was resolved that "Harry Newman, president of the corporation, be and he is hereby authorized to make and execute . . . an indenture of lease to the Government of the United States."

4. On the same day "the lease was signed and executed by Mr. Newman and delivered by him to the Public Buildings Administration."

His Conclusions

On these developments the Attorney General gave his opinion: "There is no room for doubt that this represented an acceptance by the corporation of the Government's offer, except as the matter may be affected by the fact that the lease although dated July 1 was not executed on behalf of the corporation until July 3. . .

"Considering only the factor hereinbefore mentioned, the conclusion would be required that the Government is under a legal agreement to lease the space in the Dupont Circle Hotel as it is made available in accordance with the terms of the lease."

As to allegations that the corporation used "harsh and illegal means" to accomplish its end, the Attorney General's statement said:

"If that is true, it is indeed regrettable but the courts are the forum for the determination of the questions thus raised. That phase of the matter is not for consideration by me and does not in any way involve the Government.

"If the threatened litigation should ensue, and if the courts should decree that the corporation continue to operate the building as an apartment hotel this might, and probably would, have bearing upon the lease.

"It seems to me, however, to be inescapable that both the Government and the corporation have proceeded too far in reliance upon the validity of the lease to warrant any other conclusion than that the Government should continue to proceed upon the theory that the lease is valid until and unless the courts render some decisions requiring a contrary conclusion."

Charges of "Harassing"

In the Fisher damage suit filed yesterday, charges of "harassing" were made against the Dupont Circle Corporation. It was claimed that Fisher obtained a year's lease on an apartment last October 2, and that last July 5 he was notified he must vacate by July 15.

Methods of "harassing" by the corporation, he claimed, included the moving of furniture out of the lobby, the use of pneumatic drills at early morning hours, a refusale by the management to collect garbage.

The suit was filed by Attorneys Leon L. Schlawy and Lewis B. Berkins.

Bishop Urges U. S. War Entry For Christianity

Braddock Heights, Md., Aug. 27 (AP). Immediate active participation of the United States in the present war was urged tonight by the Right Rev. Hunter Wyatt-Brown, Episcopal Bishop of Harrisburg, Pa.

Speaking before delegates to the forty-seventh convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, an Episcopal organization, the Pennsylvania clergyman asserted "it is not just enough to profess to be Christians and then not be willing to shed blood for the ideals in which we claim to believe.

"Supporting those brave British and colonial troops with material weapons," he said, "is not sufficient if the people of the United States are not willing to back them still further through the aid of arms."

662 Oppose Daylight Time, 452 Favor It

The opponents of daylight saving yesterday raised their tally in The Post poll to 662 votes as compared with 452 ballots favoring the measure for the District. Yesterday's totals were 109 against daylight saving and 73 in favor.

One voter said he was in favor because "I think it is about time the people started to save something and stop this wild spending, except for defense, and daylight and sunshine are the cheapest thing I know of to save."

An opponent who signed himself "Let Bad Enough Alone," wrote:

"In the Department of Agriculture the hours have been staggered to assist the transportation company solve the problem. The pay days were staggered to assist the Treasury Department, or somebody. Now, how's to give employes a break and stop staggering things so that we may have a chance to find out whether we are coming or going."

An objector to any change in the current time method who said she was a stenographer in a local department store claimed that most of the pro-saving voters are Government employes from distant places "who really ought not to have a vote in this District controversy.

On the other hand, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing claimed that virtually all of the 6000 Government employes there objected to daylight saving.

Are you in favor of daylight saving time for the District?

D. C. Officials Warn of Rise In Paralysis

The Health Department yesterday issued a warning that infantile paralysis may be on the increase through the next two months and advised parents to be watchful of their children.

Another case of the disease was reported yesterday to the department, bringing the total for this month to 21, an all-time record for August in Washington. The total number of cases for the year is 26. The second highest incidence of "polio" for August here was in 1935 when 19 cases were reported.

Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger said that poliomyelitis may have its highest incidence through next month and October. He said:

"While the present situation need not be necessarily alarming, parents should be watchful of their children, put them to bed at once if there are any signs of fever, head colds, sore throat or any other symptoms of illness."

Seckinger said that "polio" does not usually occur until from the second to the fifth day after illness has taken place. He urged parents to keep children away from contacts of crowds.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Communicable diseases, attributed the increase of the disease to the increased population of the District. He said that the last poliomyelitis outbreak of any size occurred here six years ago.

'Les Sylphides' Draws Biggest Crowd Yet for Ballets Russes

Fortune Gallo presents the Original Ballets Russes on Wednesday night at the Potomac Watergate. Conductors: Alexander Smallens and Walter Ducloux. Program: Les Sylphides (music by Chopin), Shahrazad (music by Rimski-Korsakoo), Cimarosiana (music by Cimarosa).

Thanks to an almost cloudless sky and a barometer set at fair weather, attendance last evening at the Potomac Watergate for the fifth program of the Original Ballets Russes was considerably larger than on the two previous nights. Part of the accretion may have been brought about by the growth of the ballet habit among Washingtonians who have not for some time been offered a full week's engagement. Whatever the cause, there was a crowded assemblage of deeply engrossed and warmly demonstrative spectators who missed no opportunity for applause of individual artists and of colorful ensembles.

BROWN

The second performance of "Les Sylphides" was the occasion for the local debut on the orchestral podium of Walter Ducloux, a Swiss doctor of philosophy who found music so much more attractive than speculative logic that he studied conducting with Weingartner and Toscanini. Experienced hitherto in directing symphonic concerts, he is now trying his hand with ballet, and the manner in which he carried out last evening's assignment speaks well for his adaptability. He can be observed in action again tonight, when he conducts "The Blue Danube."

Fokin's adaptation of Chopin dances to the purposes of pure visual romanticism retains its charm even when it is disclosed in hard white light instead of the blue simulation of moonlight. It is a case of the magical effect of choreography devised solely for the grace of movement. Once more the principal dancers were Tatyana Ryabushinska, Anna Volkova, Marina Svetlova and Roman Yasinski.

The repetition from Sunday of the evening's second ballet brings up the advisability of doing something about a work which has been masquerading these many years in French as "Scheherazade," a name which many people feel uncertain about pronouncing and vague about spelling. We could, of course, adopt Rimski-Korsakov's own title, "Shekherazada," but that might not be an improvement. Inasmuch as most of us have read Sir Richard Burton's translation of "The Thousand and One Nights," would it not be a good idea to use his simple and easily remembered "Shahrazed?"

An entirely new title would be still better for Fokin's choreography, which has no relation whatever to the beguiling narrator of continued stories and deals entirely with the faithless Zobeida. Rimski-Korsakov was very careful to mark the score of his symphonic suite with indications of the particular tales he had in mind, and the music invariably recalls those episodes to the listener. With the ballet itself one can find no complaint as a brilliant and compelling performance.

"Cimarosiana" closed the program and afforded another opportunity to enjoy some excellent divertissements and at the same time make acquaintaince with some unfamiliar and pleasant music by Domenico Cimarosa, whose 76 operas have lapsed into obscurity.

Changes in the announced casts for tonight's performance will bring Vera Nemchinova to the role of the princess in "Aurora's Wedding" and Roman Yasinski to the part of Man in "The Eternal Struggle."

Fair Price List for Gas Is Issued

Henderson Sets D. C. Cost at 16.5c A Gallon; Figures Are Not Mandatory

A fair-price pattern for guidance of Eastern motorists caught in the present gasoline squeeze was issued last night by Leon Henderson, OPACS administrator, on the eve of a special Senate inquiry into the petroleum situation.

Thirty-nine Eastern cities and the District of Columbia are covered in the list, which advises drivers what prices they should pay for gasoline in these 40 areas.

The "white list," which would peg the Washington price at 16.5 cents a gallon—lowest of the lot—was issued in an effort by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply to curb profiteering. Developments earlier in the day in the gasoline situation included:

Final preparation by Ralph D. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, for his appearance at 10:30 a. m. today before a special subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee to shed light on the East's oil "shortage."

Tank Car Service Stressed

A recommendation by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, chairman of the investigating group, that whole trains of tank cars be pressed into operation for hauling petroleum to Eastern refineries.

Formation of a Tanker Control Board to coordinate utilization of American oil tankers announced jointly by Davies and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

A telegram to Henderson by the local gasoline retailers' association protesting against their being characterized as "profiteers" and citing the confusion and uncertainty which has gripped filling station operators the last two weeks.

A demand by Senator Downey (Democrat) of California for distribution of gasoline rationing cards as the "only alternative to inflation."

"The first step in preventing unjustified increases is a properly informed consuming public," said Henderson, as he made the gasoline price list public.

Guide Not Mandatory

The "gallon guide" has nothing mandatory about it. Its purpose is simply to inform motorists of fair maximum retail prices.

"It is hoped," said Henderson's statement, "that motorists will protest vigorously against prices higher than those listed for these cities. Motorists are invited to report by letter to OPACS any cases in these cities where they are charged more for 'regular' gasoline than the prices listed.

"Prices for grades other than 'regular,' or straight, gasoline are expected to be maintained at their normal differentials."

Range to 16.5 Cents

Prices in the "white list" range from a low of 16.5 cents in Washington to 20.1 cents in Manchester, N. H. Harry Wainwright of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association, said that the great majority—if not all—of District filling sattions are abiding by the 16.5-cent rule.

"A few cases were reported to me today," he said, "of 3-cent increases, but I could not confirm these reports and believe them to be untrue."

Henderson said that in Richmond, Philadelphia, New York City, Boston and several other Massachusetts cities excessive prices are being charged.

"Motorists may properly expect service station operators to bring prices down to those listed and should urge the operators to do so," he declared.

The OPACS yardstick provides for a 4-cent profit per gallon to dealers. Accordingly, the fair maximum price is arrived at by adding to the wholesale cost the local and Federal taxes, plus a uniform 4-cent profit margin for the retailer.

In his telegram yesterday to Henderson, Wainwright, spokesman for District dealers, pointed out that while some retailers are receiving full supplies from their wholesalers, others are having their purchases reduced as much as 50 per cent.

"Never in our history has a group of small businessmen been so kicked around and confused as we have the past two weeks," he told the OPACS director.

Miss Hawks, 70, Gets Defense Pin

Miss Mary G. Hawks, 70, was presented with the first gold insignia pin of the National Catholic Community Service yesterday afternoon at the organization's "Institute for Defense," being held at the Catholic School of Social Service this week. Miss Hawks, of Buffalo, N. Y., is the only woman on the N. C. C. S. executive committee.

In accepting the pin from Dr. Franklin P. Dunham, executive director of the N. C. C. S., Miss Hawks said that she was "frankly envious" of the opportunity young women had today to engage in the social service branch of the defense program.

Girl, 6, Badly Hurt by Truck; Falls Injure 4 Other Children

Youngster Runs From House Into Path of Vehicle

A 6-year-old girl was seriously injured yesterday when struck by a truck as she ran across the street, and four other children were hurt, one severely, in falls from moving vehicles. Another child was struck by a bicycle and injured.

Patricia Ann Follin, 6, was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a fractured skull after being knocked down by a truck at Prospect Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street Northwest, near her home.

She and friends had been playing in a vacant house, which they fancied was haunted. Neighbors said they were running from "ghosts" in the house when the accident occurred. Patricia Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noland Follin, 3342 Prospect Avenue.

Donald Gardiner, 4, of 401 Sherman Avenue, and John Harrison, 4, of 310 Crystal Spring Avenue, both of Hillside, Md., were taken to Casualty Hospital after they fell from a moving truck in Hillside. Gardiner, whose condition is serious, suffered possible internal injuries. Harrison suffered severe abrasions about the legs. Police said that the boys had climbed on the back of a parked truck and fell off when the driver started his machine.

Molly Jane Holifield, aged 14 months, and Phredice L. Holifield, 18, of 4000 Ely Place Southeast, were treated at Gallinger Hospital after they fell from an automobile driven by their brother, Roland H. Holifield. Police said that the car was making a left turn from Alabama Avenue Southeast onto Burns Street when the child apparently kicked the door open. Both were treated for minor injuries.

Janice Snoots, 6, of Arlington, accidentally leaned on the handle of the car door while riding with her uncle, Edgar Heishman, on the Lee Highway and fell from the machine. She was treated at Georgetown Hospital for a possible arm fracture and a lacerated scalp.

PATRICIA ANN FOLLIN, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noland Follin, of 3342 Prospect Avenue Northwest, suffered a fractured skull yesterday when struck by a truck

Putman valued the articles at $30.

Hornets Strike Again To Aid Police Search

A swarm of yellowjackets helped Metropolitan Police to find 3-year-old Conrad Yhnell yesterday, who was reported missing from his home at 2945 Newark Street Northwest during the afternoon.

Conrad's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Knowles, told police that the child had strayed away from the house accompanied by his dog. Shortly afterward, officers heard a dog yapping with pain in the wood near a small fishing pond several blocks from the Yhnell home.

Upon investigation, they found Conrad and his small fox terrier covered with stings from a swarm of yellowjackets. The boy was brought home and treated by the family physician. The stings were said not to be serious.

Randolph Says Airport Is 'Federal'

Should Be Outside District and Local Virginia Disputes, Commission Told

The Washington National Airport is a Federal project, rising above local disputes and belonging in Federal jurisdiction, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, declared yesterday after a conference with air lines officials.

The conference, attended by the District Commissioners in the House District Committee Room, was one of a series in which the air lines officials are urging settlement of the jurisdictional dispute between the District and Virginia over the new airport.

Measures now are pending in both the House and Senate District Committees to incorporate the airport land in the District limits.

As spokesman for yesterday's gathering, Representative Randolph declared:

"I am more firmly convinced than ever before that the settlement of this controversy involves more than the jurisdictional dispute between the District of Columbia and Virginia.

"The operation of the Washington National Airport is certainly properly within Federal jurisdiction. From the conception to the completion of the airport, the project has always been considered a national one.

"Neither the District nor Virginia contributed any direct funds toward its construction. The sum of the taxes and license fees received from operation of the airport will nowhere near pay the expenses involved."

According to Representative Randolph, the airline officials pointed out in the closed session that tax revenue from the operation of the airport and its concessions would not pay the cost of police, fire and other public protection.

Representing the airlines at the conference were O. R. Mosier and Fred Glass, vice-president and attorney, respectively, for American Airlines; Paul Brattain, executive vice-president of Eastern Airlines; J. J. O'Donovan, vice-president of Pennsylvania Central Airlines; Robert G. Thach, chairman and attorney of Air Terminal Services, Inc., and Wirt Scruggs of Eastern Airlines.

2 U. S. Agencies Advertised Aluminum for Sale, Nye Says

New York, Aug. 27.—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, charged tonight that the Government Arsenal at Rock Island, Ill., and the Navy Yard at San Diego were advertising 308,000 pounds of scrap aluminum for sale to junk dealers while the Administration was appealing to housewives to give their pots and pans to national defense.

The appeal for aluminum, he told an America First Committee rally, as well as the appeal for the conservation of gasoline, the extension of compulsory military training and other similar defense measures have been visited upon the American public for no other reason than to make Americans feel they are facing the most critical hour in all American history.

"How the pots and pans did fly when the patriots set out to convince the country that the very life of our Nation was in the balance because of the alleged aluminum shortage," the Senator told the gathering.

Speeches, editorials, news columns, news reels and picture magazines played a mighty role in this eloquent outburst of defense. It was a glorious response to the cause of war-mindedness. It helped to perk the Nation to the teachings of those who would have us know that this was the most critical period in all American history.

In the midst of the aluminum roundup, he said, the "preposterousness" of it became evident when the Government arsenal of Rock Island, Ill., "was found advertising for bids, asking buyers to make an offer in 8000 pounds of salvaged scrap aluminum in the Government arsenal yards," and when the Navy advertised in a San Diego paper that it would open bids for 300,000 pounds of scrap aluminum belonging to the Navy for sale to junk dealers.

Similarly, he said, "our modern and up-to-the-minute teachers have educated us to know that there is a terrible shortage of gasoline on the Eastern Seaboard occasioned by reason of the sale of oil tankers to Great Britain which prevents the usual delivery of gasoline to the Atlantic Seaboard. Our Government talks 'quotas' and restricts the amount of gasoline that can be had in a community during a given period."

But "lo and benold," Senator Nye continued, "agencies of the Government, and the oil industry itself," reveal now that there are plentiful supplies of gasoline—as adequate as were the supplies at this time a year ago, and while Americans are conserving gasoline, he added, Canada informs the residents of this country that if they travel in Canada they will encounter no gasoline shortage.

Referring to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill as "the two men in a boat in the bounding waves of the Atlantic," Senator Nye said that some day they "undoubtedly will make these things seem sensible to us."

Calling for more truth and less fiction, he said, "let's be done with fooling ourselves and betraying ourselves by refusing to give truth a place over fiction. . . . Let us have democratic knowledge of what our problem really is, what our obligations really are, what our defense needs might be and how well they are being met by those who spend the billions appropriated in its name."

Missing Girl's Parents Ask Help From Post

The parents of 15-year-old Catherine Haifleigh, who has been missing since she left her home in the 600 block of A Street Southeast August 17, last night appealed to The Post to aid in locating the girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse C. Haifleigh said Catherine left home saying she was going for a walk. However, the parents believe she and a friend had intended to look for work. Catherine did not wish to return to Hine Junior High School, where she had been a student, they said.

"Tell her we want her to come home," the parents said.

Mother Tries To Wipe Out Ill Family; 4 Dead

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—A Brooklyn woman and three of her four children were slain, their throats slashed, and her other child and her husband were wounded similarly today, apparently, Assistant District Attorney Edward A. Heffernan said, because the entire family suffered from a contagious disease which he did not identify.

In the blood-spattered flat where the slayings occurred detectives found a note, which Heffernan said probably was written by the woman, Mrs. Mary Morey, 34. It read:

"This is the best way out. Don't touch anything."

The dead children were Marcella, 7; Claire, 4, and Paul, 3. The wounded were William, jr., 11, and his father, William, a former policeman, both taken to Methodist Hospital.

William, jr., was not expected to live.

Neighbors said they heard screams coming from the Morey apartment at 5.50 a. m., and investigating found William, jr., wandering about the poorly furnished flat, his head and throat bleeding.

Meanwhile, a bakery deliveryman summoned police. Radio patrolmen entered the apartment and found Mrs. Morey and the four children lying face down in the rear bedroom.

Assistant District Attorney Edward Hefferman quoted Morey, who was dismissed from the force in 1938 of intoxication charges, as saying:

"My wife did it! My wife did it!"

A hatchet handle and its bloody blade were found in different parts of the flat. A small knife, blood-stained, was found near the bodies.

Fall at Home Kills Mrs. Louise Ward, Widow of Fireman

A fall down several steps at her home proved fatal yesterday to Mrs. Louise B. Ward, 58, of Rockville, Md., widow of a District fireman.

Mrs. Ward, whose second husband was Fireman James H. Ward, died of a fractured skull in Georgetown University Hospital two hours after she tripped and fell.

THE automobile industry is constructing thousands of these hard-hitting machines. But they're not to be used for traveling to a picnic, beach or band concert. Scout cars, tanks, truck transports, and similar mobile equipment are intended only for American defense. Since manufacturers are busy turning them out, there's less time and material left for building new passenger cars.

This decreased production has reacted promptly on the used car market. The number of "trade-ins" available for sale is rapidly being depleted. Uneasiness in the All-Stars' Camp

Chicago, Aug. 27.—In Chicago's betting mart tonight, if you like the Bears to beat the college all-Americans on the morrow, you'll have to give 12 points before a wager can be made. If you like the collegians, say nothing, lest you be led away to the violent ward.

POVICH

When last seen, the Bears were beating the Washington Redskins, 73-0, and our operatives among the coaches of the college boys report profound uneasiness. Despite their show of confidence and their squad of 70 players, the all-American coaches are, as one of them put it, "wondering what's going to hit us." They don't know if they know how to deal with the Bears.

Coach Carl Snavely of Cornell and other choice minds of the college coaching fraternity who are his assistants have been dabbling for a month with defenses calculated to stop the Bear's murderous "T" formation, but some skepticism remains. What the college boys will do when those big Bear halfbacks come bouncing through the line from all directions is still highly problematical.

Could Be a Revival of 1940

Snavely, for all his coaching experience, has never before encountered the T formation. He's been a big single-wing power man. Homer Norton, his assistant from Texas A. and M., knows how to deal with the double-wing stuff. Most of the job of stopping the Bears has probably devolved on Babe Hollingberry, the Washington State Coach, who tangled with the T-formation as executed by the Stanford team coached by Clark Shaughnessy, father of the Bears' T attack.

If the Bears score quickly tomorrow night, as they did against the Redskins last November, it could easily be a rout. A quick touchdown by the pros would produce the desired psychological effect, and the evidence is that Coach George Halas wants that first touchdown quickly, because he is going to put on the field tomorrow night 10 of the 11 Bears who started against the Redskins.

That means that Bill Osmanski, who scored the first touchdown of that 73-0 game will be at fullback; Ray Nolting and George McAfee at the halves; and Sid Luckman at quarterback. The only change in the Bears' line-up will be the replacement of Bob Nowaskey at left end by Bill Plasman, who is the regular left end anyway. The Bears want this ball game tomorrow night. They consider it not as the start of a new season, but the final flip of their 1940 campaign which would crown that 1940 team as the all-time stand-out. They want none of their record to lose its luster.

Time was when the pros were not supposed to take these games seriously, and Owner-Coach George Halas today was saying that the 98,000 fans at Soldiers Field should not expect too much of the Bears. "We're getting this team ready for a full season" he said. "Those college coaches are bringing their club up to a peak for only one game." But the Bears aren't exactly loafing. The other day in an intrasquad game, fists flew in the battle for positions. Big Lee Arto, of California, and another tackle, Ed Kolman, of Temple, staged a punching fuss in the middle of the contest.

That T-Formation Again

It was no consolation to the collegians when in that intrasquad game of the Bears, the final score was 21-20. It inferred that the Bears themselves, knowing all about their T-formation, were sort of helpless to stop it. And the scouting of the Bears by the collegians won't help much. Shaughnessy and Halas have authorized a book about the T-formation, with diagrams and everything, but they haven't betrayed themselves. "Of course, since that book was written, we've made a few variations" grinned Shaughnessy. "That's the best thing about the T-formation; it lends itself to variations."

The Bears expect the collegians to come up with four or five defenses for the T-attack, and there will be variations to meet each defense. Halas has been sending his squad through two workouts of two hours each daily, and for the four quarterbacks on the club there have been special chalk-talk sessions nightly. The Bears will know how to deal with defenses.

One of the reasons the collegians have always been a threat to win this sort of ball game has been because of their speed and youth, but the fact is that the Bears for all their reputation are the youngest pro-team ever to move into this classic. Halas is not above experimenting either. He has taken big Jack Manders out of his backfield and moved him into the line of a running guard on offense, and reports from the Bears' camp are that Manders is the best thing in the Bears' line.

This isn't saying that the Bears wont be scored on. They never were much of a defensive team, even at their best. And with such as Tommy Harmon, Paul Christman, Charlie O'Rourke, Norman Standlee and Frank Iuzzolino the leather and throwing it, the college boys are a potent scoring threat. Harmon has been running better at any time in his football life, our operatives report. Snavely recently confided that the collegians had only one way of winning the ball game. That is to grab that ball and score more touchdowns than the Bears. He figures he'll need at least five. He may be conservative. The Redskins needed eleven.

Dear Boss,

I found out today that I'm not eligible to join the Bottom Scratchers Club. Don't laugh, Boss, that's a fact. I learned about bottom scratching from Gene Steck, of the San Diego Union. Although he is somewhat of an authority on the sport, he has been unable to make the membership requirements. To tell the truth, after eight years of organization, the Bottom Scratchers have grown from five charter members to a roster of six, and one honorary member. And this, despite the fact that anyone who qualifies may join.

HAIGHT

All you have to do to get your membership card is to jump into the ocean, go down 30 feet and bring up three abalones in one dive. Now these abalones are a kind of shell fish and they attach themselves to rocks. You take a knife with you and cut them loose. Of course you can't sit down there under the water and whittle.

Now if you make the abalone grade, you have one more little test. That consists of bringing up a shark by the tail. The size doesn't count. All you have to do is to toss it in the lap of Chief Walrus Glenn Orr. Since the Bottom Scratchers organized only Wally Potts has met the requirements.

There's more to this bottom scratching than ability to stay under water. I thought for awhile that the club was like the Elks and the members sat around on the ocean floor playing pinochle and drinking beer, but that is not so. They are fishermen, but they never use rods, reels, lines or hooks. Instead they dive down 30 or 40 feet armed with a spear or a knife and they are convinced this is the only way to fish.

There's no limit to the variety of fish they bring up. And, as if it weren't dangerous enough in the day time, they submerge at night carrying waterproof flashlights. In fact, the Bottom Scratchers used this illumination before they were on the market. The Chief Walrus dipped a flash light in paraffine and went down to explore. He had to come up in a hurry because a baby seal thought the light was something good to eat and wanted the hand that was holding it for dessert.

The members are not afraid of sharks. In fact, if I'm not being out-talked, they even go in for submarine hitch-hiking. They grab the dorsal fin of a dog shark and hang on for a free ride that lasts as long as their breath holds out.

Equipment for Bottom Scratchers consists of a pair of lungs capable of getting along without fresh air for from two to three minutes; a face plate, a

Wholesale Upsets Mark Two Rounds

Ralph Bogart Loses Morning Encounter To Walter Burkemo; Alexander Beaten

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

Omaha, Aug. 27.—The first day of match play in the National Amateur Golf Championship has come to be known to the trade as "Black Wednesday." Black, they say, has no shadings.

But is was something blacker than a black Wednesday storm that swept the Omaha Field Club course today and put out of the forty-fifth tournament four former champions and all but a handful of players of established reputation.

In the course of two rounds of 18-hole matches, which reduced the field from 64 to 16, the following stars were shunted to the sidelines:

In the first round—Dick Chapman, winner last year but beaten decisively by Lou Jennings, a 24-year-old comer from Portland, Ore.; Johnny Fisher of Cincinnati, 1936 champion; Johnny Goodman, who had been expected to go far on his home course but went only 20 holes; Mario Gonzales, likable Brazilian youngster who was the only foreign entry and had looked like a real contender, and Charley Yates, the Georgia soldier boy who won the British amateur in 1939.

In the second round—Skip Alexander, the qualifying-round leader from Burlington, N. C.; Wilford Fehrle, a semifinalist in 1940; Art Doering, who went to the same round the year before; Rodney Bliss, another highly rated Omahan, and Freddy Haas, jr., the string-bean former Walker Cupper from New Orleans.

Bogart Out

Ralph Bogart, the District of Columbia champion who rallied nicely on Tuesday to gain a qualifying berth, trailed from the sixth hole and lost in the first round to Walter Burkemo, blond shotmaker from Evanston, Ill., 4 and 3. Burkemo was 2 over par for the route while Bogart needed par in for an 80.

With form taking such a tremendous beating, there were only 4 among the 16 survivors who have well established golfing reputations.

Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, Wash., whose chances of repeating his 1939 victory look better and better, won at 7 and 6 over Alex Welsh, of Rockford, Ill., and then was taken to the seventeenth for a 2 and 1 triumph over Otto Greiner, of Baltimore, semifinalist in this year's intercollegiate championship.

Harry Todd, runner-up to Ward in last month's Western Amateur, beat Jim Lewis, of Toledo, by a moderate 4 and 3 margin and then won eight of ten holes to trim Matt Zadalis, of Ralston, Nebr., 9 and 8.

Minor Ailments Bother 'Skins In Practices

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 27.—Steve Slivinski, hard-running guard, will have X-rays taken tomorrow to determine whether he has a broken bone in his foot. The former University of Washington lineman pulled up lame in this morning's workout and Trainer Doc Mauro believes he may have a fracture of the bone leading to his little toe on his left foot.

An epidemic of minor injuries has struck the training camp during the last two days. End John Stonebreaker was confined to his room today with a twisted ankle. Wilbur Moore limped off the field early with a leg strain. Ken Dow has a bruised ligament. Several other players are favoring bothersome sprains, the latter group including Coach Ray Flaherty, who stepped in a hole and sprained his ankle while chasing a pass.

Flaherty's "all out" scrimmage, originally scheduled for tomorrow, has been shifted to Saturday. Scrimmage will be held tomorrow but the defense will continue to operate in bulky, shock-absorbing pads.

The squad worked this morning in full uniform because local and syndicate cameramen were given their innings. This afternoon the players went back to shorts. Light work only was the keynote at both sessions. In a place-kicking drill, Bob Masterson, regular end, stole the show. Coach Flaherty said that starting next week only an afternoon drill will be scheduled.

Gus Lesnevich Signed for Bout At Uline Arena

Johnny Attell, matchmaker for Mike Jacobs who will promote fights in the Uline Ice Arena this winter, announced last night that Gus Lesnevich, light-heavyweight champion of the world, has been signed to meet the best opponent obtainable, on Uline's first card. The opening has been tentatively set for October 6.

Lesnevich defeated Tami Mauriello in the Garden Tuesday night. He won the title from Anton Christoforidis, Greek battler, last spring.

Red Burman will oppose Melio Bettina in the semiwindup of the Lesnevich fight.

Nats Smash 18 Hits, Beat Chisox, 11-3

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Ho-hum, folks, it was just a breeze. The eight-place Nats amassed a two game winning streak this afternoon. No trouble at all. You wouldn't have recognized the Nats today. They had power, pitching, and no pain. They beat the White Sox, 11—3.

Ken Chase, of all people, pitched a seven-hit game for his first victory in five weeks. You may not believe this, but he was never in a jam. He just went out there and curveballed the White Sox into a sort of helplessness. He allowed only two hits until the seventh, by which time he was eight runs in front.

The Nats were banging the ball with great vigor. They unloaded 18 hits against Johnny Rigney and Jack Hallett before it was over. Power, too. Mickey Vernon crashed a line-drive home run into the right field stands with Travis on base in the fifth. Buddy Lewis and Travis swatted themselves a triple apiece. Lewis and George Archie slugged doubles.

Six hits the Nats packed into a big fifth inning which produced four runs against Rigney. Manager Jimmy Dykes permitted Rigney to stay in the box despite three extra base hits in the session. A telegraph operator, looking up from his work, inquired "Is Rigney still pitching?" The answer he got was "no, just throwing".

Nats Score Early

To Rigney the whole thing was probably something of a surprise. Before taking the mound against the Nats today he had pitched two three-hit shutouts in succession. The Nats cuffed him around for four runs in the first two innings.

Big Julius Solters was the reason Chase didn't pitch a shutout. Solters hit his fourth home run of the season with the bases empty in the fourth, and in the seventh when he led off with a triple to center, and later scored, he had made two of Chicago's three hits to that point. In the eighth he accounted for Chicago's third run with a single to left.

The White Sox made something of a mess of the first inning for Rigney and the Nats came up with two runs on only two hits. Case saluted Long John with a single to left to commence matters, and a bit later Hoag dropped Cramer's fly to center. Lewis took a third strike but on the pitch Case and Cramer pulled a double steal that landed Case on third and he scored when Catcher Tresh's throw got away from Third Baseman Kennedy. A bit later, Mickey Vernon scored Cramer with a single to left. Vernon drove in four runs before the game was over.

Case commenced another Washington rally after two were out in the second when he singled to left, stole second and went to third on Cramer's infield hit. Buddy Lewis got tough at this point and slugged a triple to left and the Nats had a 4-0 lead.

Those four runs in the fifth began with Lewis' double to right. Cecil Travis improved his league leadership in triples by lining one against the fence in left center. Thus far there had been no home run in the infing so Vernon banged one into the right field stands—his ninth—and two more runs were home. Eventually with two out, Bloodworth, Chase (honest) and Case hit singles to drive in the fourth run of the inning.

Dodgers Defeat Reds; Cards Rally to Win

St. Louis Scores Heavily in Late Innings to Win, 8-5

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals, struggling to stay in the National League pennant race, scored six runs in the last three innings tonight to come from behind and whip the New York Giants, 8 to 5.

The victory kept the Redbirds within a game and a half of the first-place Brooklyn Dodgers, who beat Cincinnati, 4 to 2.

Two southpaws, Carl Hubbell of the Giants and Ernie White of the Cards, opened the game but neither finished.

Babe Young's twentieth homer with one on in the third, and costly errors by Johnny Mize, Martin Marion and White himself helped New York pile up an early lead.

White redeemed his miscue by driving in St. Louis' first two runs with a single in the fifth, but it was not his night and Harry Gumbert took over in the sixth to pitch four scoreless relief innings and get credit for the victory over his former teammates.

Hubbell blew a three-run lead in the seventh when the Cards tied the score and Walter (Jumbo) Brown was unable to stop their surge. Brown was charged with the loss.

The Cards made 15 hits, includ-

Ken Overlin KO's Young in Eighth

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 27 (AP).—Ken Overlin, Washington, D. C., former middleweight champion, knocked out Jimmy Young, formerly of Scranton, Pa., tonight in the eighth round of a scheduled ten-round bout which featured an outdoor boxing show here.

Both fighters weighed 162 pounds.

Kirby Higbe Takes 18th Before 31,103; Vander Meer Loses

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 27.—Kirby Higbe cooled off the Cincinnati Reds tonight for his eighteenth triumph as the resourceful Brooklyn Dodgers beat Johnny Vander Meer 4 to 2 before 30,103 fans. Each team made seven hits.

The league leaders collected all their runs in ones off Vander Meer, who gave up eight walks in his eight innings on the mound. Brooklyn tapped him for counters in the first, third, fourth and seventh innings.

Reese Doubles

Pee Wee Reese started off the opening frame with a line double down the leftfield foul line and moved to third on an infield out. Harry Lavagetto then raised a high, deep foul in back of first base and Frank McCormick, running at full speed, speared the ball over his shoulder. Reese, wasting no time, streaked home with the first run.

Vander Meer's faulty control cost him a third-inning tally. Higbe and Reese, the first two batters, drew passes. Then Billy Herman dropped a short fly just out of Lonnie Frey's reach and Higbe scored from second as Lloyd Waner recovered the ball for a force play on Reese.

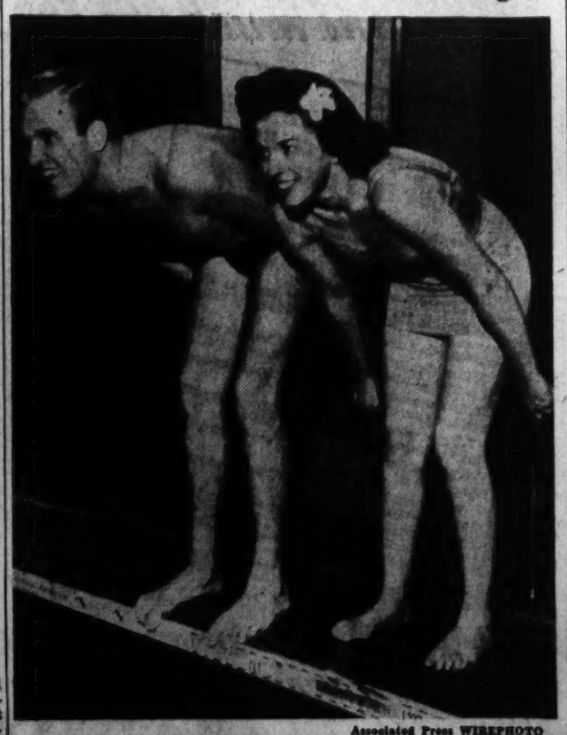

Riser's line double, Dixie Walker's sacrifice and Mickey Owen's fly sent in the third Dodger counter in the fourth, and Walker's single with the bases loaded in the seventh brought home Lavagetto with the last run.

Reds Score Twice

Higbe, meantime, issued three hits and no runs over the first seven stanzas. But the Reds broke through with two in the eighth on Pinch Hitter Jimmy Gleeson's double, a

Yanks Beat Browns, 11-1, For 16th Time

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—Scoring all their runs in the third and fourth innings, the New York Yankees defeated the Browns tonight, 11 to 1, for the sixteenth time this season.

The Brownies looked good in the first two innings, taking a one-run lead in the opener, as starting Pitcher John Niggeling limited the Yankees to three hits.

But the New York artillery exploded in the third, teeing off with Tom Henrich's twenty-fifth home run of the season. Three more hits, two errors and a couple of walks scored four more runs and Archie McKain was sent to the mound to stop the rout.

Although McKain terminated that spree, he was ineffective the next frame. After Bill Dickey singled in two more runs, John Kramer replaced McKain. He retired only one man as the Yanks continued to rattle out hits and Bill Trotter was drafted to stem the tide. He shut out the New Yorkers on only four hits the rest of the game.

Meantime, Pitcher Ernest Bonham settled down after the first inning and the Browns went scoreless on a total of three hits.

Loser Offers No Defense As Bout Ends

Crowd Boos Finish Of Bout Scheduled For 25 Rounds; Lee Savold Victor

By Tony Neri

In a fight which smacked very much of a diving exhibition, Bill Poland, young Jewish heavyweight from the Bronx, last night knocked out Eddie Blunt, North Carolina Negro, in 43 seconds of the fourth round of a contest which had been advertised for 25. The crowd of 6325 at Griffith Stadium voiced its disapproval with continued booing as the North Carolinian offered no defense in the round of the knockout. Blunt weighed 216, and Poland 194.

The fight, given one of the biggest build-ups in local boxing history, offered very little in its billing as a main event. The preliminaries saved the show from being a complete washout. The scheduled 67-round card was completed in 28.

Blow Is a Right

Blunt came out for the fourth and after taking a Poland right in the rib, was looking around for a place to fall. Poland picked out a spot and planted the Negro flat on his face in the center of the ring. In all due respect to Poland, the right which finished Blunt was a powerful wallop that found its mark on the North Carolinian's chin.

In the second round of the abbreviated fight, Blunt had floored Poland for a four count. Both fighters missed repeatedly and Poland appeared baffled with the big Negro's style.

The bout started very fast, too fast for a scheduled 25-rounder. Poland landed the first blow, a right to the body. He missed a couple of lefts and Blunt struck him inside with a right. Blunt tried a pair of short uppercuts but they missed their mark. Poland also missed several blows as the bell sounded.

In the third round, the Jewish boy pushed Blunt against the ropes and followed with a left and right. A pair of light lefts sent Blunt to his knees for a count of six. The crowd then began a series of elongated boos which it kept up until the end.

Both fighters fell to the canvas in this stanza. Poland missed a right and Blunt went down with the Jewish boy landing on top of him. Poland got up, but Blunt took a nine count. The breeze from the blow was apparently too much for the Negro. Poland then hit Blunt with a long right and a chopping left and again Blunt went down. The bell saved him at the count of eight.

End In Sight

The end was inevitable as the fourth round began. Blunt, a former deacon at a North Carolina Negro church, showed no willingness to make a fight. Poland did try to mix it, and his right hand does carry dynamite.

In the 12-round semi-windup, Phil Furr, king of the local welterweights, outpointed Al Franklin, 19-year-old District Negro, in a close return bout. In their previous meeting Franklin beat Furr.

Furr, off slowly, began to find the range in the latter rounds. In the ninth Phil landed damaging blows which were down his young opponent. Franklin, who is scheduled to fight Fritzie Zivic, former champion, in Baltimore next month, fought back valiantly but Furr

Dorothy Gardner Sets Course Record in Mason-Dixon Golf

Mrs. Meckley Easy Victor In 1st Round

Virginia Guilfoil Defeats Mrs. Glick; Mrs. Manion Upset By Mrs. Tasker

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 27.—Dorothy Dardner of Steubenville, Ohio, blasted a four-under-par 72 today to set a new course record for women and come to the fore as the most likely to upset favored Virginia Guilfoil of Syracuse, N. Y., in the Mason-Dixon golf tournament.

Miss Guilfoil, hoping to repeat victories of 1937 and 1939 to gain permanent possession of the $400 gold cup, equalled the previous women's course record with a 73 winning medal score yesterday.

Takes Six on Eighteenth

Miss Gardner shaved a stroke off that in an 8 and 6 decision over Mrs. Ralph Boyd of Colerain, Ohio. Needing only a par 4 to match men's par 70, Miss Gardner pressed two woodshots into the rough on the eighteenth for a bogey six.

Miss Guilfoil moved easily into the second round with a 4 and 3 victory over Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore. West Virginia's State champion, Tiny Ann Hoblitzell squeezed a one up victory from Jean Hopkins of Lakewood, Ohio.

Miss Greiner Loses

Mary Fines Capers of Haverford, Pa., eliminated Mrs. A. Ward Sumpter of Dayton, O., 6 and 5; seventeen-year-old Claire Doran of Lakewood, O., defeated Gladys Greiner of Baltimore, 8 and 7; Mrs. J. H. Keim of Kane, Pa., downed Mrs. Jeanette Myers of Baltimore 4 and 3; Mrs. Betty Meckley of Washington, D. C., ousted Mrs. F. C. Schlundt of Rocky River, O., 6 and 5, and Mrs. Edwin Tasker of Toledo, O., upset Mrs. D. F. Manion of Oil City, Pa., 5 and 4.

Pairings for second-round play tomorrow are:

Miss Doran vs. Mrs. Keim.
Mrs. Meckley vs. Miss Gardner.
Miss Guilfold vs. Mrs. Hoblitzell.
Miss Capers vs. Mrs. Tasker.

Mrs. Capers won the annual driving contest with drives of 230, 235 and 225 yards was having one of his better nights and held a slight edge.

In the top preliminary, Lee Savold, of Des Moines, Iowa, knocked out Claudio Villar, Spanish heavyweight invader from Cuba, in 2:55 of the fourth heat of a sensational scrap which had been scheduled for ten rounds.

Floored 4 Times

Savold pounded the 206-pound Villar to the floor four times before Referee Volkman counted the fatal ten. The Des Moines battler smashed the Spaniard's nose early and Villar's face was a bloody mass as he tried to stave off Savold's blistering attack.

The Des Moines heavyweight was relentless as he went after the kill. Swinging lefts and rights which found an easy target in the tired Villar, Savold chopped the Spaniard down for two nine counts and an eight before finishing him off.

Villar had originally been signed to meet Pat Comiskey, of New Jersey, but the latter didn't show up and Savold was shifted from meeting Buddy Scott while Scott fought Frank Donofrio. Comiskey's manager claimed his fighter had a fractured hand and wouldn't be able to fight.

Scott Wins Easy Kayo

Ben Morez, giant Ukrainian of New York City, stopped the hitherto undefeated Jabo Kenner, local Negro, in the fourth round by a technical knockout in the second preliminary. Kenner had been sent to the floor three times in the third round by the blows of the ponderous Morez. The fight was halted on the advisement of Dr. William F. Greaney, boxing commission physician, while Kenner was sitting in his corner awaiting the bell for the fourth.

Kenner took counts of eight, five and eight, respectively before the bell intervened. The 286 pound Morez half slipped to the canvas in the initial round. Kenner weighed 217. The bout was listed for six rounds.

In a scheduled ten rounder, Buddy Scott, recent victor over Tommy Gomez, knocked out Frank Donofrio, of Philadelphia, in 2:20 of the second round. Donofrio was substituting for Savold who met Villar when Comiskey failed to show up.

Entries Are Open For Tuesday Golf

Members of the Women's District Golf Association with handicaps of 12 and under have until this afternoon to enter next Tuesday's lady-pro tournament at Congressional Country Club.

Mrs. P. W. Rutledge, new tournament chairman of the association, is accepting the names and will close the entries today. Each pro will play three women partners. Entry fee for the ladies will be $2 and they will receive half handicap allowance.

The pros have until Tuesday to enter the Washington Open Championship, to be played Thursday, September 4, at Indian Spring, and will be limited to 75 players. Mel Shorey is accepting entries at the host club.

Mildred Burke, who meets Mae Young in a feminine title bout at Turner's Arena, is pictured with her 2-year-old filly, also called Mildred Burke. The filly is by San Juan out of Virginia Gerken, and is expected to be raced around the Maryland tracks this fall. Miss Burke has won more than 400 bouts

Mildred Burke Will Wrestle At Turner's

Mildred Burke, who claims she has won more than 400 matches during her wrestling career, will engage Mae Young, Oklahoma City cowgirl, in one of the double wind-up bouts on tonight's show at Turner's Arena. Sharing the spotlight with the championship bout between the feminine star will be a finish scrap between Ernie (The Terrible) Dusek and the Green Hornet masked grappler.

Miss Burke always has lured a capacity crowd to the Arena, where she has won 10 matches.

In Miss Young, the champion will be meeting a strong, study wrestler who will outweight Miss Burke by some 12 pounds. But the champion claims she has given away as much as 25 pounds, and still triumphed.

The Dusek-Hornet bout is considered by Promoter Joe Turner the "natural" of the season. Both Dusek and the Hornet hold victories over Joe Cox, the Kansats Krasher, who is around seeking a match with the winner.

Pat Fraley, the Coast Irishman who has copped five local scraps, will take on Able Coleman, the diminutive Pole, hoping that a victory will earn him a match with either Dusek or the Hornet.

A two-man team match will find the scientific duo of Maurice LeChappelle and Ace Freeman pitted against Fred (Legs) Grobmier and Angelo Leone. First bout is at 8:30.

Garfield Nine In Final Round

Garfield Playground nine advanced to the finals of the inter-playground city-wide tournament by defeating the New York Avenue team, 7 to 2, yesterday. As a result, the victors will meet Rosedale for the city title today at Taft playground at 4 o'clock.

In yesterday's game, B. Aguilino pitched 6-hit ball for Garfield. Struble was the losing pitcher.

"BEST USED CAR DEAL IN TOWN"

Rickey Denies Any Plans To Buy Phils

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—Branch Rickey, vice president and business manager of the St. Lous Cardinals, today denied knowledge of or connection with any plan to buy the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club.

A report that Rickey was slated to become president of the Phillies under purchase plans now in the formative stage was published by the Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

"If there is a syndicate planning the purchase of the Phillies," Rickey commented, "I know nothing whatever about it. Nobody has contacted me about such a thing."

The Post-Dispatch said Ford Frick, president of the National League, had told a representative of the newspaper in New York that as far as he knew there had been no move toward buying the Phillies by any group.

"Before attempting to buy control of a major league club," Frick said, "it is only natural for any syndicate to contact the president of the league. They have to be acceptable to the head of the organization before any deal of the kind can be consummated. No one had contacted me."

Charlotte Loses First of Twin Bill

Hogan, Snead Co-Favored At Hershey

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 27—Ben Hogan and Sam Snead, winners of nine of the 24 major golf tournaments of 1941, stood out tonight as the men to beat for the $5000 Hershey Open championship over 72 holes of medal play in the next four days.

Hogan, now the host professional at the Hershey Country Club, carries a remarkable record into the tournament. He has won $12,733 this year, $4000 more than Snead, the nearest competitor among the golf professionals. Little Ben has averaged 70.3 strokes per round, while Snead is second in this department, too, with an average of 71.04 over 65 18-hole rounds.

Hogan and Snead have just about spread-eagled the field in the competition for the Vardon Trophy, given to the professional golfer with the best accomplishments over a year's period. Hogan has 418 points; Snead, 343, with Craig Wood, United States Open champion, in third place at 316.

Fifty-three for Hogan

Hogan has finished in the money in 53 consecutive tournaments. He has the Hershey Open; the Tam o' Shanter, at Niles, Ill.; the Atlantic City, N. J., Open; the Hearst Invitation at Philadelphia, and the Providence, R. I., Open remaining to catch Snead's all-time record of money winning in a year—$19,908, set in 1938.

Other leading money winners for the year are Craig Wood, United States Open champion, $8166; Johnny Bulla, $7072; Byron Nelson, $6752; Clayton Heafner, $5527; Lloyd Mangrum, $4725; Lawson Little, $4301; Horton Smith, $4165; Vic Ghezzi, the P. G. A. champion, $3725; Harold McSpaden, $3544, and Jimmy Demaret, $3325.

Maryland and the District of Columbia are well represented in the starting field of 100. From the Washington section Al Houghton, Cliff Spencer, Robert T. Barnett, Al Treder, Lewis Worsham, Leo Walper and Freddie Bolton were in line while Baltimore was represented by Johnny Bass, Frank Invernizzi, Andy Gibson, Leo Kernan, Ralph Beach, Carroll McMasters, and, Hagerstown by Rut Goffey.

Wood and Ghezzi will be missing when the field tees off tomorow in the opening 18-hole round. They are booked solidly for exhibition matches. One round will be played daily through Sunday, with first prize of $1200 at stake.

Today's practice rounds produced nothing remarkable except for a hole-in-one by Dave Douglas of Newark, N. J., on the 146-yard fourteenth. Most of the scores ranged in the high seventies as the 7000-yard layout, built for long hitters, was stretched even longer by heavy overnight rains.

Byron Nelson Wins Ohio P. G. A. Golf

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 27 (AP).—Finishing with a 10-under-par 62, Byron Nelson, of Toledo Inverness, won the Ohio P. G. A. Open golf tournament here today with a 72-hole total of 271, or 17 under par. Herman Keiser, of Akron, was second with 278.

Nelson, former national Open champion, had an eagle and eight birdies in his 62-round on the Losantiville course. The previous course record was 68 set by John Revolta, of Chicago, several years ago.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

THE DODGERS, COBB, LESNEVICH

New York, Aug. 27.—"What the Dodgers need, Van Mungo, their aimless Ambassador to Montreal told a mutual friend the other day, "is a pitcher who can go in there and win 'em about six games. If they gonna win, they gotta get that little extra pitchin'—the kind I could give 'em if they'd only call me back."

CONSIDINE

It was a new international record for wishful thinking, inasmuch as Van's pitching at the Dodgers' Montreal farm made such an impression on the Montreal management that said management moved outfield. But Van was right about the need of a little more throwing. Or maybe a little more luck for old Fred Fitzsimmons. The club has gone to pieces behind Fred on his last two starts.

The recent split series between the Dodgers and Cards showed plainly that there is little to choose between the clubs. Breaks will decide the pennant winner. The Dodgers would seem to be getting one by playing the Giants seven times out of the next 14 games, but things do not always work out that way. If the Cards don't lose any more men they'll be dangerous down to the wire. Padgett, Mize and Hopp are oafish fielders, and pitchers like Lanier, Shoun and Gumbert are third raters. But the Cards can hit that ball forever and can outhustle any team in the game. Young Pollet should take up most of the slack caused by the enforced benching of Slaughter and Terry Moore. The ball players say he's going to be great.

Bean Ball Is Here Forever

Larry MacPhail would like to revise baseball's unwritten rule about retaliatory bean balls. For years it has been the custom, when throwing a ball at a rival player's skull, to choose the best hitter on the rival team and dust him off. Wyatt did this last Sunday to Mize, in retaliation for a Pollet duster. Ball players figure that by doing this they are fracturing two birds with one apple. They are hurling a warning to the slugger's team, to quit that stuff, and they are nullifying the chances of the slugger's knocking another plank out of the centerfield fence.

MacPhail can't understand the bean ball, to start with, but he realizes that like England, there'll always be one. That's the main reason why he helped to perfect helmets. But when there must be a bean ball, or a dusting off, MacPhail thinks it would be more reasonable to aim it near the skull of the pitcher who threw the first bean ball of the game, or the catcher who ordered it thrown. But ball players figure, "why waste a duster on a bum who can't hit anyhow?"

The catcher, by the way, usually goes scot free in all the furore that follows a bad beaning. So does his manager, when as a matter of fact the heartily abused pitcher is usually only a tool of either of these.

Mr. Cobb Gives Up Golfing

Ty Cobb is through with competitive golf, now that his series with Babe Ruth is finished. "I'm afraid I'm beginning to take it more seriously than those 12 batting titles I won," Ty told Fred Corcoran, PGA tournament boss, when Concoran suggested a continuation of the rivalry. Cobb wasn't kidding, either. He and Babe became one-day managers of a couple of sandlot teams in Cleveland early this month. Big, blustery Babe grabbed a bat and took a turn at the dish. But Cobb wouldn't bat. He decided that it might hurt his golf swing, and later when he realized that this was what kept him from batting, he decided that golf was getting too much of a hold on him.

What a sad scene that was at the garden when, at the end of the Lesnevich-Mauriello fight, Announcer Harry Balogh said "The winnah . . . and Nee-Yew champion . . ." and was drowned out by the noisy celebration by Mauriello's rooters. Balogh finally finished ". . . Gus Lesnevich."

Miss Brough Paces Girls' Tennis Play

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—The four top-seeded players moved into the semifinals of the National Girls' Tennis Championship Tournament today, with Defending Champion Brough, of Beverley Hills, Calif., scoring the most impressive victory.

Miss Brough, seeded No. 1, played sensationally in defeating eight seeded Nellis Sheer, of Miami Beach, Fla., 6—1, 6—0. She has lost only three games in her three tournament matches thus far.

Second seeded Doris Hart, 16-year-old Miami, Fla., star, also won an easy 6—0, 6—3 victory over Gert Moran, fifth seeded player, from Santa Monica, Calif. Barbara Krase, of San Francisco, seeded third, turned back Marie Jacks, of San Diego, Calif., 6—4, 6—3, to earn the right to meet Miss Brough tomorrow, while Miss Hart's opponent will be Kitten Catton, of Alameda, Calif., seeded fourth, who topped Mary Ann Morgenstern, Hermosa, Calif., 7—5, 6—1.

In the doubles competition, the Misses Hart and Sheer defeated Patricia Hurd, Lakewood, Ohio, and Janet Witwer, Akron, Ohio, 6—0, 6—3; the Misses Brough and Moran defeated Gloria Evans, Upper Montclair, N. J., and Jean Rockey, Westfield, N. J., 6—2, 6—1, to enter the semifinal round.

Bears' T Formation Faces College All-Star Attack Tonight

100,000 To Witness Grid Clash

Bears Are Favored, 3½ to 1, in Chicago; 5000 Service Men Have Free Seats

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The Chicago Bears, champions of the professional football world, turn their explosive model "T" attack against the collegiate all stars tomorrow night before the season's first sell out crowd.

With 93,200 tickets sold and 5000 free seats provided for service men, a record throng will pack Soldier Field on Chicago's lake front to witness this eighth annual battle of collegians and professional title holders. The Bears will trot on the field probably 3½ to 1 favorites because they will present the same line up, with one exception, that slautered the Washington Redskins, 73 to 0, in the championship game of the professional season last year.

Carl Snavely, head coach of the all stars, gravely shaking his head, summed up the prospects by saying:

Great Backfield

The mystery: Has the all star coaching staff of Snavely and four assistants been able to coordinate the touchdown power of such players as Michigan's Tommy Harmon, Indiana's Ed Rucinski, Purdue's Dave Rankin, Stanford's Norman Standlee and Minnesota's George Franck?

The conjecture: How long will it be before the Bears vaunted technique blitzes a wedge through the all star defense in an effort to duplicate the rout of Washington in the 1940 pro finale?

Snavely, Cornell University's coach, has been aided by Fritz Crisler of Michigan, Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern, Orin Hollingbery of Washington State and Homer Norton of Texas A. and B., in seeking out the best of more than 60 collegians chosen in a Nation-wide poll of fans. The stars are the products of diversified types of coaching and systems and Snavely and his aides have had only days in which to prepare their men.

Halas Pessimistic

The Bears, whom Snavely calls "the greatest team of football players ever assembled," trained at Delafield, Wis., for the same period. But their owner and coach, George Halas, protested:

"The All-Stars have to prepare only for this one game. We've had to plan ahead for our regular season. I don't see how anyone can expect us to win."

And Halas didn't crack a smile.

The Bears will use plays based on the "T" formation and man-in-motion system that raised havoc in professional circles. Their backfield of George McAfee, Bill Osmanski, Ray Nolting and Sid Luckman can be augmented by other able players. There isn't a rookie end on the team. Every wingman is a veteran of a year or more of professional football and all are strong defensively. All six, save Bob Nowaskey, former George Washington player, stand 6 feet 1 inch or better and only George Wilson and Nowaskey scale under 200 pounds.

Stars Won Twice

As to the tactics the All-Stars will try against the professionals' front wall, Snavely says his team is ready with power plays, fast running maneuvers and aerials. "If any of these appear successful against the Bears, that's what we will use," Snavely said.

In the previous seven games, the collegians won their only victories by defeating the Green Bay Packers, 6 to 0, in 1937, and Washington, 28 to 16, in 1938. Two games resulted in ties.

The starting line-ups:

Bears	Position	All Stars

Heath Stars, Indians Defeat Athletics, 11-4

Outfielder Drives in Seven Runs With 2 Homers, Triple; Cleveland in 3d Place

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—Led by Outfielder Jeff Heath, who drove home seven runs with two homers and a triple, the usually impotent Cleveland Indians, jumped back into the American League's winning column today with an 11-to-4 victory over Philadelphia.

The Tribesmen collected 18 hits off the Athletics' Tom Ferrick to equal their noisiest offensive of the season. In addition to the four men Heath drove in with his eighteenth and nineteenth circuit drives of the season, he sent another across on the triple, Clarence (Soup) Campbell, another Tribe outfielder, contributed five straight singles. Despite the barrage, Ferrick pitched the entire game.

Steven Gromek, rookie right-hander from the Flint club of the Michigan State League, made his second start for the Indians and emerged with his first major league victory, although he permitted 11 hits.

Harold Zedwick Makes Left-handed Tourney Semifinal

By the Associated Press

Sylvania Country Club, Toledo, Ohio., Aug. 27.—Harold Zedwick of Toledo, playing quarter-final matches in the National left-handed golf tournament here, advanced to the semi-finals today with a one-up victory over Sam Alpert, of Chicago.

Alvin Everett, the defending champion from Rome, Ga., eliminated Don Wearley, Toledo, 6 and 5.

Bob Romberger, also of Toledo, was beaten by A. J. Antonio, Linden, N. J., a former champion, by 6 and 5.

The other match saw Johnny Mross, Milwaukee, public links champion, rally to beat Lou Lavine, Detroit, 1 up.

Orrel Mitchell Is Football School Guest

Orrel Mitchell, a local boy who has made considerable of a name for himself in the coaching world, will be "guest" coach today as The Washington Post football school engages in its next-to-last session.

Mitchell will lecture on and demonstrate the changes in old gridiron rules as well as on new rules, calling on his own scholastic career and coaching experience. A veteran member of both the D. C. Football Officials Association and the D. C. Basketball Officials Association, Mitchell has made a thorough study of most athletic rules and thus will speak authoritatively.

Meanwhile at yesterday's session the class of approximately 100 went through its usual stiff workout—designed to get the boys in top shape for the scholastic season starting next week—and again the main topic of conversation was the game which will cap The Post school's two-week grind tomorrow.

It will be the "Shirtless Wonders," handled by Coach Sam Fox, against Coach Jim O'Leary's "Bleary-Eyes"—the latter tag being applied by Fox. Play will be over the regulation time, with all aspects of real football retained except tackling.

Plays were rehearsed yesterday, Fox teaching his boys various Big Ten plays and O'Leary leaning more toward Southwestern spreads.

With the split of the squad for game purposes, a preview of high school hostilities later on was in the offing. Outstanding back of Fox's club will be Herby Adams, Eastern High's ace, and O'Leary's ball luggers was headed by Charley Voigt, stellar Wilson triple-threat.

G. W. High Meets Lawrence High Oct. 31

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 26.—George Washington High School gridmen will meet Lawrence (Long Island) High School's eleven under the floodlights of the G. W. stadium on October 31 in the first intersectional contest ever scheduled for the local scholastics, Coach Al Doran announced today, as returning lettermen and newcomers to the varsity squad were summoned to report for opening drills of the season.

The night tilt will be the first of two games scheduled with the New Yorkers, with the Presidents scheduled to return to Long Island on an unspecified date in 1942, Doran said.

The intersectional tussle will highlight a ten-game schedule, which comprises one of the most attractive home schedules ever offered G. W. supporters. Only four games will be played away from home, and the season will be climaxed with the annual Old Oaken Bucket clash with Washington and Lee high on the G. W. field Thanksgiving Day.

The Presidents will engage six Virginia Class A Conference opponents, meeting Lane, of Charlottesville; Maury, of Norfolk, and Washington and Lee at home, and opposing Petersburg, Hopewell and Andrew Lewis, of Salem, in out-of-town games.

From last year's eleven, which experienced a drab season, Doran will have a complete veteran backfield composed of Capt. Johnny Shelton, fullback; Dalton Dove and Leon Chisolm, halfbacks, and Marty Foltz, quarterback. The front line was harder hit by graduation, and the only returning lettermen are End Billy Bell and Tackles Henry Grimm and Jimmy Deeton.

The schedule, which includes one open date which probably will be filled by a District opponent, follows:

September 19, James Monroe High School, at Fredericksburg; 26, St. John's High, at home.

October 3, *Lane High of Charlottesville, at home; 11, *Petersburg High School, at Petersburg; 17, *Maury High of Norfolk, at home; 24, open; 31, Lawrence (Long Island) High School, at home.

November 7, *Andrew Lewis High School, at Salem; 14, *Hopewell High School, at Hopewell; 20, *Washington and Lee High School, at home (10 a. m.).

*Virginia Class A Conference games.

Military Police Arrest Greenberg For Speeding

By the Associated Press

Fort Center, Mich., Aug. 27.—Corpl. Henry Greenberg, former outfielder of the Detroit Tigers baseball team, was arrested by military police at 12:30 a. m. today for speeding inside the Fort Custer grounds.

Press relations officers at the fort quoted the military police as saying Greenberg, who has his own automobile, was driving 40 miles an hour along Dickman Road, where the speed limit is 25 miles an hour.

As an immediate result, they explained, Greenberg automatically is "grounded"—deprived for 30 days of the privilege of driving on the military reservation.

Arrest of the former major leaguer disclosed for the first time that he had not accompanied the Fifth Division on its trip to the Second and Third Army maneuvers in Louisiana. Greenberg was one of three members of the Second Infantry's Antitank Company to be left behind for what the Army calls "housekeeping detail."

Wilson Wild, Bosox Bow To Tigers, 6-3

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 27.—The Detroit Tigers, after dropping their last two games, juggled their line-up for today's opener with the Boston Red Sox and coupled with the wildness of Jackson the move paid off with a 6-to-3 victory.

Lefty Bob Grove, trying for his 301st major league triumph, started for the Red Sox, but injured his side at the start pitching to Tuck Stainback and retired from the game. Wilson, who succeeded Grove, yielded only six safeties the remainder of the distance, but wildness nullified his performance.

The Tiger's first four runs were unearned. A wild throw to first base by Wilson scored a run in the first, two walks and Wilson's second wild heave to first brought two more in the second and the Boston hurler wild-pitched a run home in the fifth. Rudy York got his twentieth home run in the sixth.

Butcher Boy Takes Top Money in Feature at Marlboro Oval

Field Swung Wide at Head Of Stretch

Berwyn Carries Pack To Outside; Winner Returns $10.50 Payoff for $2

By Clocker Mike

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 27.—B. W. Dulaney's Butcher Boy, after failing three times in the favorite's role, came back today at the odds of 4-1 to take top money in the 5½ furlongs of the fifth race. Berwyn ran interference entering the stretch and carried everything to the outside fence, allowing the winner to come between horses and take the lead. Happy Hostess managed to save the show award.

Although he had run out in practically every start this year, Berwyn was made the favorite by the 5000 fans on hand. For the first part of the trip it appeared that backers of the choice really knew something when he went straight as an arrow for the first half mile. Scocca, on Butterman, figured he would keep up his good work and instead of going to the inside he took his mount around the leader. At this stage Berwyn went very wide and carried his challenger with him. At this stage Dufford sent Butcher Boy through and took command to draw out and win under strong handling. Highland Song flashed speed in the early stages but could not keep up with Berwyn and Butterman when they started to move.

Pays $10.50 Price

In scoring his fourth win in fifteen starts this year, Butcher Boy covered the 5½ furlongs in the mediocre time of 1:08-4-5 and returned his backers a good $10.50 mutuel.

The opening race brought together eight maidens going over the 6½ furlongs and the winner turned up in W. May's Skewer. The daughter of Sun Circle came with a burst of speed in the stretch run to score by two lengths over Uncle Jimmie. Lenelan, after forcing the pace, could take no better than third.

Faultlessly ridden by Pat Grant, Skewer was not to be denied with her closing rush and she finished the distance after using up 1:28. She was backed down into the favorite role and returned only $5.60.

Dear Al:

I was talking to Donald Hay yesterday and he was very high in his praise for the Pascoag, R. I. track. He visited the plant over the weekend and said that everything has taken shape and is ready for action. Hay also had many kind words for B. A. Dario, the man behind the works at the new plant. When the Maryland racing commission met they decided that Willie Kelly, suspended the final day at Cumberland, would be allowed to resume his saddle activities this coming Monday. However, Kelly has announced that he will not be in Maryland but will travel to Wheeling Downs and take in that meet. E. B. Lee's Fortunate Boop, a scheduled starter in yesterday's first race, crashed into the fence early in the morning while being blown out. She suffered injuries which could not be remedied and she was destroyed. Jockey Willie McDonald suffered injuries yesterday morning when the saddle came off a horse he was breezing. McDonald was taken to a Washington hospital, where it was found he had suffered no serious injury. In the first six days of the meeting there were 16 favorites to reach the winner's circle. This brings the percentage of winning choices to 33 1-3. Bill Schamerhorn, who has been doing an excellent job in the starter's stand, will serve in the same capacity at Timonium. This is his first year in the stand and he has performed like a veteran. J. Gilbert Haus, one of Race Secretary Brennan's right hand men, is confined to the Maryland General Hospital, in Baltimore. As yet the doctors have given no word as to his condition but here's hoping for a speedy recovery. Haus had just received announcement of his appointmnt as race secretary at the Rolling Rock meeting. Jockey Buddy Root suffered the sad fate of having his 13-day-old son pass away yesterday. Root, who was leading the riders at the present meeting, is one of the best liked riders around the track and we offer our deepest sympathy. CLOCKER MIKE.

First race—MY DOTTIE was bet on when she lost her jockey last out. Has been training well since and I believe she is the right one. MISS HILDUR has plenty of speed and may be dangerous. FLICK is another with early speed.

Second race—WAY OUT showed a good race while finishing second to Peit Fours and must be given a call in this affair. OSOFREE is down on the list but would be a factor if able to start. BRAINCHILD'S races have all been good lately.

Third race—Once again we'll have to go down on the eligible list to get STEEL BEAM on top. Is a classy sort and should have little trouble with these. FAIR FLAME should furnish the contention. CHIEF TEDDY appears to have his pet track.

Fourth race—ELTONHEAD was beaten by HIBLAZE and poor racing luck last out and should make amends at the expense of this field. PRAETOR is stepping way up but his winning effort was very good. PETIT FOURS is another cheap one that scored in good time.

Fifth race—GLITTER GIRL had no chance of running with HAPPY LARK but is placed easier here. GAYLE F. is a speedy sort and will be in front for a spell. MARANDAN is in good form.

Sixth race—TYR has been a galloping winner twice here and I see no reason to go against him now. BROOKIE BOY has been racing with better than these and may surprise. ODENATHUS was second to the top one and is a factor.

Seventh race—YANKEE LAD always shows a good race and I believe it will be a winning one here. OUR TEDDY is better than ever and may upset the top one. RIVER BROOM could be dangerous off that last effort.

Eighth race—If QUILL is sent right back in here I will have to string along. OVERCALL showed improvement last out and may be ready for brackets. CHRISTINE ADEE was third at long odds and may show improvement.

Best bet—TYR.

Bill Cunningham's Column

A New Gene Tunney— With a New Purpose

"We have, I am convinced," he said, "the greatest Navy on earth —mechanically. We have the resources. We are gathering the man-power. In terms of a fight, the wise man figures every possible source of weakness and does what he can to forest all it. The only possible weakness in the American Navy is the possible weakness always inherent in the human element."

Cunningham

His deep and sincere voice moved along in its precisely clipped phrases, its occasional second-semester word and its frequent interpolation of the very broad A. It was that latter that used to throw the boys for a loss, but I'm long since broad A-broke myself. I can decode 'em as fast as any Cabot can throw 'em.

I was listening to Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney as he spoke so sincerely of his new line of work, but my thoughts kept wandering back through the angle of years to other Tunneys I'd seen and known and had talked with so often. In memory I saw him again, as I saw him the first time, a pale, intense and strangely serious light heavyweight, a private from the Marine Corps waiting to enter the ring in the Inter-Allied Games in Paris, just after we'd finished the first chapter of this modern Hundred Years War.

I was a member of the same general American team at the time, but in a less violent department—horsemanship.

And somehow we found ourselves sitting beside each other back there. He told me he was from New York and that he was a fighter—that he was getting ready to fight in the Inter-Allied championships. He didn't resemble my mental picture of what a prize fighter would be. He looked more like a choir boy. He had the hands of a girl. I've always remembered those thin and sensitive hands.

Fighter and Battleship

He was moving that right one now as he talked about battleships.

"... that human element," he was saying; "it's our sacred and intelligent duty to see that our crews are as keen, as quick, as alert, as courageous, as physically fit as we can possibly make them. I personally can't think of any form of physical activity that fits into the picture more perfectly than boxing.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that there's such a perfect analogy between a fighter and a battleship. Each prepares. Each trains. Each gets just as ready as possible, and then when action comes, each moves in and slugs for the knockout. There's no retreat. There's no running away to fight another day. It's either one antagonist or the other. One stands. The other falls. The main stock in trade of both is the knockout."

It was as he'd said "knockout" that he'd moved that right hand.

That was the one that beat Dempsey that night. It didn't look huge even now, although Tunney had chopped wood, worked with squeeze-weights and, in every possible fashion, striven to thicken and strengthen it. But that was the one that memorable night in Philadelphia that he drove like a blackjack squarely between Dempsey's black brows as Dempsey rushed him across mid-ring and hurled him back into the ropes. That was the first blow of the fight. Dempsey says to this day that's practically all he remembers of it.

"... and so," the mellow voice of the former world champion went on, "I am forming this division of 600 athletic instructors. I'm looking for good men, young men, but college graduates, preferably, with degrees in physical education. But the accent is to be upon boxing where I can make it. And where I can find a good boxer who's likewise a good boxing instructor, I'm after him. We want men of good character. We believe in trying to teach a young fellow to do something real and gallant and worth while with his life."

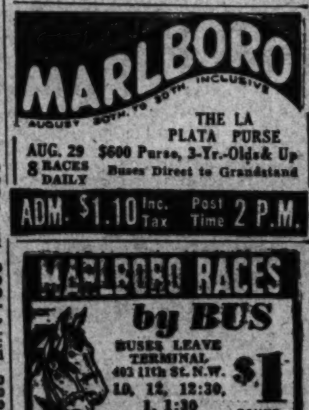

Cochrane and the Draft

"And you wrote," he was saying, "that it looked a little too much as if Freddy Cochrane (the new world welterweight champion) had ducked the draft by enlisting in this particular work I am superintending. Well, he did duck the draft, but the draft would have put him to digging ditches, peeling potatoes and serving as just another man with a rifle or a tank, when he has a definite sort of special talent that will make thousands of young Americans better sailors and better men. I want you to see it my way."

Brewers Defeat Naval Air in National Federation Series

Airmen Bow, 5-3; Heurich Wins Third

Posnak, Barry Drive Home 4 Runs in Big 4th Inning; Smith Homers for Losers

A run-filled fourth inning was sufficient to keep the Heurich Brewers' winning streak intact as they turned back the Naval Air Station nine, 5 to 3, in a National Capital Amateur Baseball Federation Tourney game on the East Ellipse yesterday.

Scoring 4 of their 5 runs in the fourth, the Brewers' activities commenced when Collier and Hersberger walked, Lacy sacrificed, Kidwell walked, filling the bases, and Barry singled to right field to send Collier and Hersberger home. Then Posnak tripled down the right field line to drive in Kidwell and Barry.

For the final run in the seventh, Kidwell doubled to right field and went home on Barry's single.

Although the Airmen came out on the short end of the score, they did so to the tune of the Navy Band and the noise of 6000 or more spectators. High point of the game for the losers was M. W. Smith's homer in the fifth, which went far over the left fielder's head.

Heurich's victory gives them three games won and none lost thus far in the tourney. Naval Air and St. Elizabeths have lost one each.

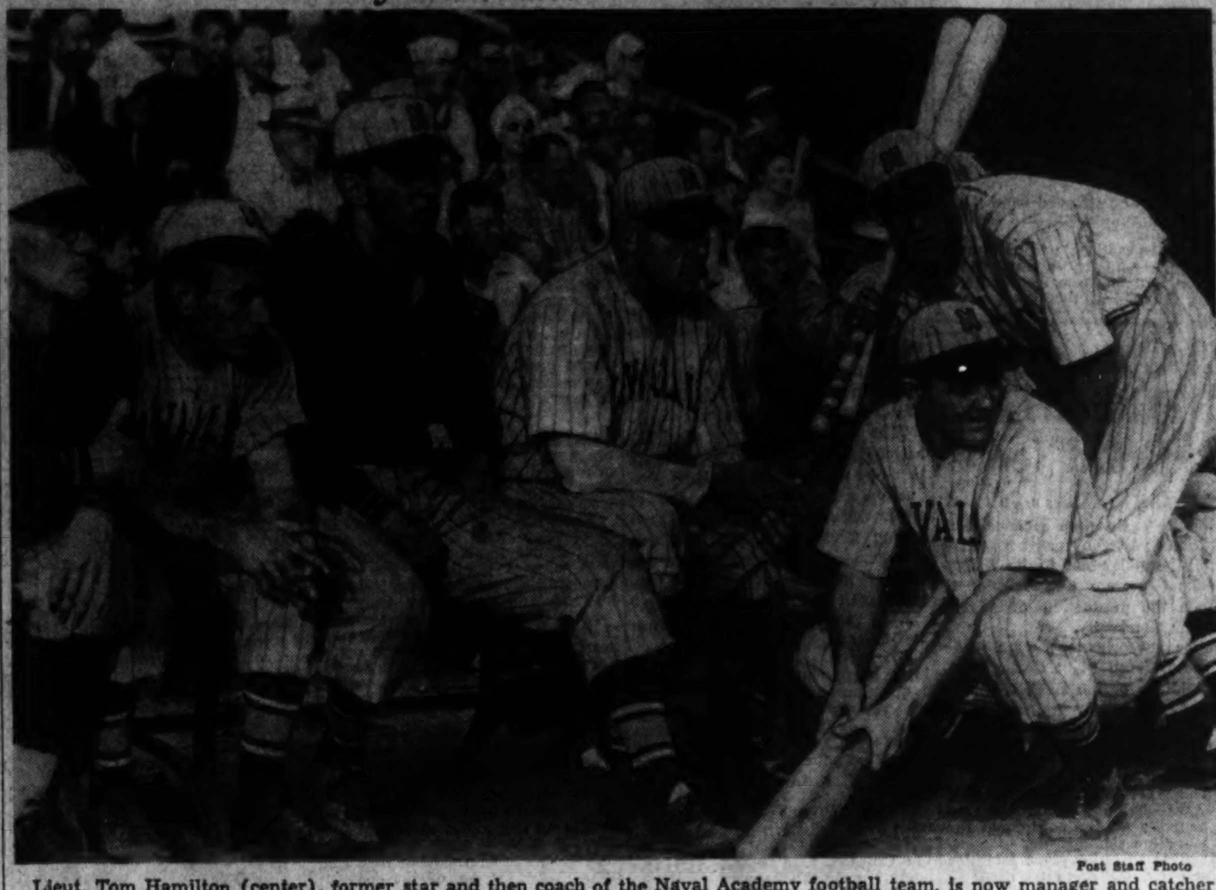

Today's game will be between Heurich and the Saints on the East Ellipse at 4:30 p.m.

Former Navy Coach's Instructions Came Too Late

Net 'Ladder' Is Created For District

Taking a page from the program of various local golf and tennis clubs, a group of Washington net enthusiasts yesterday erected a city-wide "ladder" which will be in effect henceforth.

The rules of the affair, originated by Austin Rice, veteran District racqueter, will be the same as those governing a club "ladder." Though 22 names were all it was possible to obtain for the original, the list will be increased to 25 and remain at that figure.

Briefly, the rules are:

1. Any player may challenge any one of the three players immediately above him at any time.

2. A player may be challenged by the same player only once in 30 days, though the last three players on the list may be challenged by anyone, whether on the ladder or not.

3. A player who is challenged must be willing to play a match within two weeks or lose his position on default.

4. The player challenging must furnish new balls, but the rental of courts must be paid by the loser of a match.

5. Players not on the ladder may be placed there on request, in a position designated by the president of the District of Columbia Tennis Association.

Standing on the ladder, it was revealed, will have no bearing whatever on tournament ratings.

Following is the original ladder, with names, addresses and telephone numbers:
1—Hugh Lynch, jr., 1531 West Faulkland, SLigo 3604.

Fireworks, Concert Added to Card For Cup Regatta

Side attractions including a concert by the United States Navy Band and fireworks were planned for the fifteenth annual President's Cup Regatta which opens September 6 at East Potomac Pool.

The fireworks display will be held September 13 at East Potomac Park, as a part of the feature sailing events planned for that weekend.

Although the power boat races have been canceled for gas-saving purposes General Chairman R. Aubrey Bogley announced the committee is being held intact for the future when it is hoped the speed-boat races will be resumed.

Oarsmen and canoeists throughout the East have entered the races to be held September 7 off Georgetown on the Potomac.

with a sixth-inning run after Lewis opened with a single to center. Wright dropped Travis' fly, just like that, and all hands were safe on the third of four Chicago errors that marked the game. Vernon scored Lewis with a single to left.

Irked by two scoreless innings in the seventh and eighth, the Nats rustled two runs out of Hallett in the ninth. Archie opened with a double to right and Early scored him promptly with a single to left. When Solters kicked the ball around, Early took second and chugged home on Bloodworth's single to left with the Nats' eleventh run of the ball game.

Turnabout Fair Play

When Bloodworth singled to center in the fifth inning it was his second hit in 35 times at bat . . . Taft Wright, who robbed Cecil Travis and Jimmy Bloodworth of extra-base hits with fancy catches in right field, knew how it felt when Lewis stole a hit from him by the same method in the eighth . . . A crowd of 3615 customers saw the game . . . The Nats have won seven and lost four thus far for their best road trip of the year . . . Tomorrow Alex Carrasquel gets another starting job with left-handed Thornton Lee, due to pitch for the White Sox . . . Travis has now hit four more triples than anybody else in the league . . . And George Case who was tied with Joe Kuhel for the base-stealing lead with 19, stole himself another pair in the first two innings today to move out in front of Kuhel.

Move Started To Ban Police On Boxing Unit

A bill to prevent any member of the Metropolitan Police Department from serving on the District Boxing Commission will be introduced in the near future by Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri.

"Policemen should do police duty and that alone," he said yesterday. "An outstanding trouble with the police force is that too many members spend their time carrying out assignments that cannot by any stretch of the imagination be classed as police duty."

Under present law, it is required that one member of the boxing commission be associated with the Police Department. Retiring Chief of Police Maj. Ernest W. Brown has been chairman of the commission since it was founded.

Representative Cochran also criticized the current practice of detailing members of the Metropolitan force to duty at the Capitol and White House. He urged that the Commissioners should "start a movement" to return men to full-time duty on the local force.

"If we can get men in uniform patrolling the streets and doing police duty as they should, the crime wave in Washington will soon disappear," he said.

Grove, Injured, Out 'Indefinitely'

Detroit, Aug. 27 (AP).—Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, Boston Red Sox hurler who hurt his left side in today's Boston-Detroit game, suffered no serious injury but will be out indefinitely.

Manager Joe Cronin said an X-ray tonight showed "nothing serious" but that a physician had diagnosed the injury as a pulled muscle and torn fiber.

Cronin said the 41-year-old hurler probably would be "out for some time, possibly the remainder of the season."

rubber-lined glass disc held over the face with elastic bands and swimming fins, sort of duck feet of rubber, making for faster underwater swimming.

Two undersea citizens have been scratched off the Bottom Scratchers' list. They are Mr. Sea Lion and Brother Jewfish. Sea Lions have a habit of nipping the back of the diver and they eat meat, too.

Chief Walrus Orr put the ban on Jewfish. He slid down a wharf piling once and leveled off. Right in front of him was a monster Jewfish opening his mouth and gushing the water through his gills. Orr watched his chance and when the Jewfish opened his mouth the diver shoved the spear forward, with the added momentum of a push from the piling.

The spear went deep in the Jewfish's mouth. The fish evidently knew that the diver wasn't picking his teeth. Jewfish can't go in reverse, so this one came forward. The Bottom Scratchers almost had an Ex-Chief Walrus.

Brother Orr barely got out of the way of the handle of the spear projecting from Mr. Jewfish's mouth. The handle struck the piling and broke in half, leaving a jaggered, splintered weapon on the Jewfish's bow. For once, Chief Walrus Orr wished his hobby had been skywriting.

Well, Boss, I have thought the thing over and I have decided that whenever I get the urge to do some bottom scratching I'm going to do it at home—in the goldfish bowl.

Always your ace,
POUNDS HAIGHT.

Pirates Whip Phillies, 12-2; Lanning Hurls

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—Johnny Lanning went the route for Pittsburgh today to score his ninth triumph of the season as the Phillies folded up, 12 to 2.

The Pirates banged out 21 hits off three hurlers, Cy Blanton being charged with the defeat. He allowed nine safeties in the first three and one-third innings.

Arky Vaughan led the Pirate attack with three doubles and a brace of singles as the visitors made merry against the hapless local club. The Pirates batted around in the fourth with a four-run salvo that clinched the game.

Lanning scattered ten hits.

be Pat Abbott, the one-time movie extra from Los Angeles and 1938 finalist. Abbott had to go the full 18 holes to beat Johnny Vavra, his first-round rival, and took Wehrle into camp by 3 and 2.

The fourth "big leaguer" was Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the one-time Cinderella kid who was runner-up to Goodman in 1937 and Ward in 1939. He whipped another New Yorker, Arthur K. Atkinson, jr., his first time out, and followed that with a 4 and 3 decision over Lloyd Ramsey, of Lexington, Ky.

The principal dope-upsetters were Skee Riegel of Glendale, Calif., and Bobby Riegel, former Virginia teen-age star who now lives in Houston, Tex., and Jennings, the bank clerk who Ward predicted would be a tough customer for anybody.

Skee Riegel Wins

Skee Riegel put out Gonzalez by 2 and 1 and Grover Poole of Raleigh (N. C.), the Southern Conference titleholder, 6 and 5—being three under par for the latter performance. Bobby (no relation) Riegel, handed Goodman a 20-hole licking that took much of the punch out of the tournament for the local galleryites. Jennings first handed Chapman a 5 and 4 defeat which Ward had forecast and then, despite some sloppy golf, was able to eliminate Bliss by 4 and 3.

Art Doering, Medinah, Ill., defeated Ray Brownell, Delmonte, Calif., 2 and 1.
Bruce McCormick, Glendale, Calif., defeated John Kraft, Denver, 4 and 3.

Cubs Divide Bill as Root Wins No. 200

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 27.—Manuel Salvo hurled a five-hit 6 to 0 victory for the Braves in the opening game of a twin bill today, but the Chicago Cubs came back in the nightcap for a 6 to 4 win.

In the nightcap, the Braves took a two-run lead in the first, driving Raffensberger to the showers, but the veteran Charlie Root took over and hurled the rest of the way to reach the 200-mark in wins for his career.

Zeigler's Filly Wins Saratoga Juvenile Feature

By the Associated Press

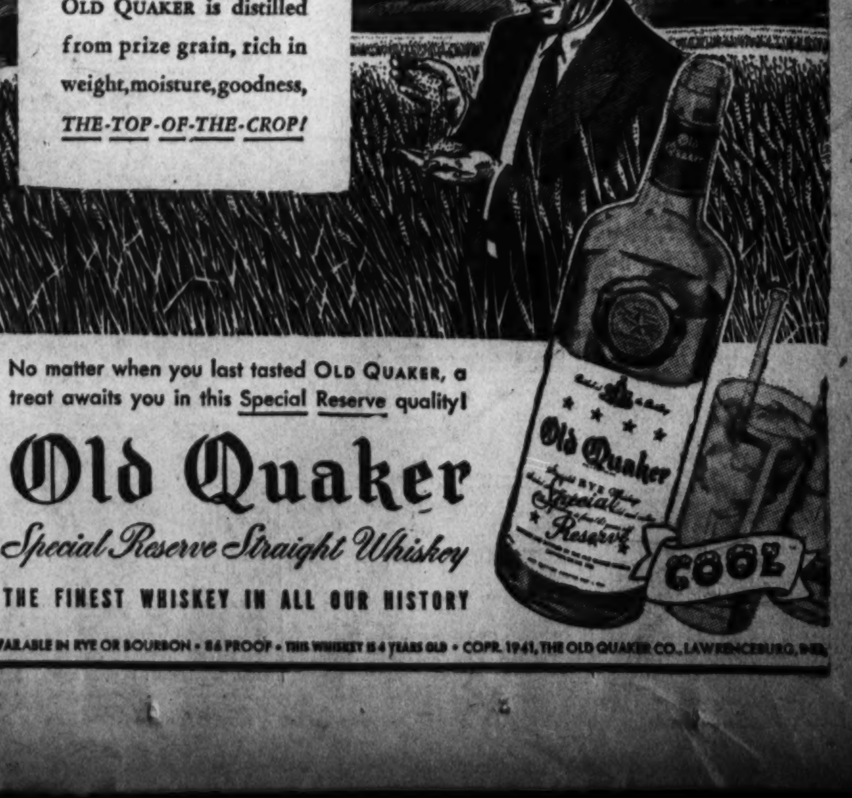

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 27.—William Ziegler, jr's Romping Home, winner of the Schuylerville Stakes earlier in the meeting, took a flashy field of fillies into camp here this afternoon when she drove up in the stretch to prevail by a length in the thirty-ninth Adirondack Handicap. Coupled with Enhance, Romping Home gave favorite players their initial score of the day and picked up a purse of $4500 for her owner. The daughter of Espino paid $5.80.

Breckinridge Long's Equipet, highweight of the field in the absence of Mar-Kell and Petrify, saved second mony by a head from P. M. Burch's Horn. Air Sure, a consistent winner in Canada, was a wide running fourth in the field of 11 young glamor girls. A throng of 9928 saw Romping Home cover six furlongs of dried-out going in 1:13 2-5.

Porter's Girl and Equipet took care of the pacemaking task for most of the journey. The former retired after the first two furlongs. Equipet, second to Mar-Kell in the recent Spinaway Stakes, then forged into a lead of a length or more and maintained it into the last furlong. Romping Home, however, had been taking dead aim on the leaders. She responded with a will to Johnny Longden's stretch call and had to give her utmost to wear down Equipoise's daughter. Horn was well up from the start.

Store Orders Rise Sharply During July

In the wake of record sales Washington department stores are stocking up heavily, a report by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond indicated last night. Outstanding orders for merchandise at the end of last month were 113 per cent heavier than on July 31, 1940, the report showed.

Richmond reported 96 per cent more goods on order; Baltimore, 97 per cent, and the Fifth Federal Reserve District, 106 per cent.

The survey also showed that Washington stores had 15 per cent greater stocks of goods on hand July 31 than they had at the same date in 1940. During July, collections of bills due July 1 were 28 per cent in District of Columbia as compared with 35 per cent in Baltimore and 30 per cent in Richmond.

Two Join Merrill Lynch

S. Harold Williams, assistant manager of the Washington office of Merrill Lynch, E. A. Pierce, Fenner & Beane yesterday announced the addition of two new members to the investment department. They are William V. Freeman, formerly of W. W. Mackall & Co., and Chester L. Brown, formerly head of a New York municipal bond firm.

At the same time Mr. Williams revealed that offices occupied at 729 Fifteenth Street Northwest will be suspended after the close of business Saturday and all business transacted thereafter at 815 Fifteenth Street Northwest. This follows the merger of Merrill Lynch, E. A. Pierce & Cassatt with Fenner & Beane.

Bankers Meet Tomorrow

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Cotton futures prices surged ahead swiftly today until the volume of spot house selling discouraged the advance. Final prices were 14 to 18 points higher.

Talk of boll weevil damage, lively mill buying and speculative demands were behind the rise. Profit-taking and more favorable weather reports were factors in the slump, which began around mid-day.

The mill interest was said to stem from submission of bids on large quantities of gray goods for U. S. Army requirements.

Exports Tuesday, none; season so far, 16,386 bales. Port receipts Tuesday, 11,431 bales; season so far, 259,206 bales.

Complete Cessation of Auto Output Unlikely In 1942 or Early 1943, Says Studebaker Head

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 27.—Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, told a group of more than 250 newspaper and trade magazine writers here today that he did not believe the production of passenger cars would cease altogether during the latter part of 1942 or early 1943.

He made the statement during a question-and-answer period in connection with Studebaker's annual press preview of new model automobiles.

"Both from a standpoint of providing passenger car transportation for national defense and the employment of automobile workers," Hoffman said, "I see no justification for the cessation of passenger car production. During the last war the maximum cut was approximately 66 per cent."

A cut of 26½ per cent in passenger car production for the first four months of the 1942 model year has been ordered by the national defense agencies, with an intimation that output volume for the new automotive year may not exceed 50 per cent of the 1941 total.

"No one," Hoffman continued, "can predict with any accuracy as to whether the industry will be allowed to build the 2,145,000 passenger cars tentatively scheduled. If that number should be built, Studebaker expects to build something more than 90,000 passenger cars during the model season."

Hoffman said, in answer to another question, that "if the private automobile is not unfairly taxed and if restrictions on installment buying are not carried to extremes, the demand for new cars will exceed the supply because national income will be at a record level."

He expressed the belief that not less than 3,000,000 defense workers will be added to industry pay rolls and that they would require at least 500,000 cars alone. Pointing out that approximately 2,500,000 cars would be scrapped, Hoffman asserted that "we must face the fact that there is going to be an impairment of motorcar transportation in this country by the end of this year."

H. S. Vance, chairman of the Studebaker Corporation, said in reply to a question that the Studebaker aviation engine project is of such size and importance that it "probably will require all the slack in labor and facilities which may result from reduced automobile production."

He said also that the corporation will be able to maintain an automotive engineering program even if the defense emergency requires complete cessation of car production.

The preview was held at the Studebaker proving grounds, west of here, which was converted into an imitation military camp.

'Stripped' Car Considered

Detroit, Aug. 27 (AP).—The fact that passenger automobile production is to be sharply reduced during the defense emergency and that some companies have decided to bring out no 1943 models has not lessened engineering interest in new model designing and styling.

The engineers know that any engineering advances or styling improvements they may hit upon cannot be applied to new cars for a long time to come.

Consideration has been given to what might be stripped from the average automobile besides "bright-work" trimming and still leave it a serviceable unit without thought of styling.

Whether the motor industry would find it practicable to produce a "stripped" passenger vehicle with absolutely no "eye appeal" but serviceable as a means of transportation is a question developing considerable difference of opinion among the trade authorities.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Buying forces expanded operations in board of trade commodities today, particularly in the soybeans pit, and prices of beans, wheat and oats rose to highs unequaled here since 1937.

Soybeans gained more than 4 cents, May, 1942, deliveries selling up to $1.61⅝ while in the spot market No. 2 beans hit $1.67. Wheat and oats rose more than a cent, May wheat selling above $1.21 at one stage and May oats near 50 cents.

Prices close dat or near the day's highs in most pits with wheat 1-1⅛ cents higher than yesterday; September, 1.13⅞@1.14; December, 1.17¾@1.18. Corn was ½ up; September, 76⅞; December, 80⅝; oats, ⅞@1⅛ up; soybeans, 4@4⅛ higher; rye, ¾ to 1⅛ up and lard, 5 to 13 higher.

Profit-taking and some hedging sales were noticeable in the wheat pit as high prices were approached and this caused reactions at times. Arrivals at principal terminals increased, the 12 markets receiving 1,803,000 bushels compared with 1,440,000 a week ago and 1,376,000 a year ago. Only 31 cars arrived here, however, and the spot market was ½ to 1 cent higher, with No. 2 red quoted up to $1.13 and No. 2 hard up to $1.13¼. The Government loan rate on these grades is $1.15.

Broad Buying Strengthens All Staples

By the Associated Press

Commodity futures prices closed generally higher yesterday after advancing on broad buying demand based on a variety of factors.

Cotton at New York was an early leader but slipped from its peaks on increased selling and closed 70 to 90 cents a bale above previous levels.

Commission house buying sent cottonseed oil futures upward and the close was .10 to .18 of a cent per pound higher.

Soybeans surged upward as much as 1⅛ cents a bushel to a four-year high in Chicago to stimulate advances in all grains. Wheat finished 1 to 1⅛ cents a bushel better and corn added about ½ cent a bushel.

Chicago hog prices advanced 10 to 25 cents a hundredweight, boosting lard values. Cattle trading was steady but owners asked 25 cents more per hundred pounds for spring lambs.

Reports of additional sales of world quota sugar for export sent prices in that market up .05 to .06 of a cent a pound.

The only backward step of the day was made by coffee futures. Santos lost .02 to .08 of a cent a pound and Rio was .08 to .18 of a cent lower. The decline was attributed September delivery notices coupled with a scarcity of demand and easier spot prices.

The Associated Press index of 35 cash commodity prices again advanced, setting a new four-year high at 92.18 per cent of the 1926 average compared with 91.84 per cent the day before.

Trade Permitted in Silk Warehouse Receipts

E. R. Stettinius, jr., defense director, said yesterday that the order freezing all supplies of raw silk permitted changes of title by transfers of negotiable warehouse receipts, provided no change took place in the custody or location of the stocks.

Stettinius said the interpretation of the order issued last month would facilitate the balancing of accounts by owners of warehouse stocks of raw silk. It does not affect silk in the possession of mills.

New Car Financing Off 17% in March

The Commerce Department estimates the daily average volume of retail financing of new passenger automobiles dropped 17 per cent in July from June figures. Compared with last year, however, July volume was up 20.5 per cent.

Steel Workers To Stay on Job Over Holiday

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27.—To keep defense production running full blast, most of the steel workers in the Pittsburgh district will forego a holiday on Labor Day and stick to their posts.

Officials of the district's two largest operators, Carnegie-Illinois and Jones and Laughlin, reported their workers would be paid time and one-half for the day. Included in the extra pay groups are the continuous process workers who normally work holidays without overtime payments.

In a notice to 25,000 employes at plants in Pittsburgh and Aliquippa, Pa., Jones and Laughlin said:

"The pressing need for steel for national defense makes it essential there be no let-up in our steel production. The choice was one of either working Labor Day and producing much-needed steel in this emergency or not working and depriving industry of steel production which can never be made up."

J. L. Perry, president of Carnegie-Illinois, said:

"Demands continue for steel in increasing amounts. It is no longer a question of how much steel can be provided to industry but how soon. For this reason, Carnegie-Illinois feels it cannot justify loss of ingot production which would be caused by a shutdown on Labor Day."

Carnegie-Illinois operates eight mills in this district.

Nearly 60,000 steel workers in the Chicago area will forego the holiday also.

Labor Day, Christmas and July 4 are the traditional holidays in the steel industry.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. said it would operate its steel producing departments at its South Chicago, Ill., and Indiana Harbor, Ind., plants, involving about 8,000 men.

Republic Steel Corporation said from 400 to 500 men out of a total of 2,200 would work Labor Day in the South Chicago, Ill., plant, but finishing departments would go down.

Inland Steel Co. said a decision had not yet been made.

Increased British Shipments Swell U. S. Gold Imports

By the Associated Press

British Empire shipments swelled gold imports to $13,058,374 last week, the largest figure for any week in recent months.

Although Russia started shipping gold to pay for war purchases in the preceding week, none was received from the Soviet in the week ended August 20.

Principal receipts that week were $6,559,053 from Australia, $3,235,137 from Canada, and $1,807,218 from British Malaya.

Silver imports were $874,274, including $512,794 from Mexico, $147,511 from Canada and $126,024 from Peru.

Rep. Smith Suffers Heart Attack On Bomber Flight

Misfortune, hard on the trail of Representative J. Joseph Smith (Democrat) of Connecticut, overtook him with a heart attack yesterday in an Army bomber in which he had started for the third time on an inspection trip.

Smith and Representative Carl T. Durham (Democrat) of North Carolina, members of a House Military Affairs subcommitte and matergating Army personnel and materiel, were bound for Moline, Ill. There they were to have met Representative Thomas E. Martin (Republican) of Iowa. The three legislators were to have inspected an ordnance plant at Burlington, Iowa, and then proceed to Camp Beauregard, La., to watch current Army maneuvers.

Smith and Durham tried twice to take off Monday but engine trouble forced cancellation of the flight both times. Yesterday sixty miles west of Washington in the bomber, Smith suffered the heart attack. The plane turned back to Bolling Field where the Representative was treated, and then transferred to Walter Reed Hospital. He was reported resting comfortably late yesterday but will be in the hospital several days. Representative Durham took off again for Moline.

2 Priests Get Passports to Sail To China Posts

Delayed because of the war in the Far East, passports and visas have finally been obtained for one local and one nearby Catholic priest, who will sail for South China mission posts in October.

They are the Rev. James A. Sheridan, M. M., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sheridan, 1432 B Street Southeast, and the Rev. John D. Moore, M. M., Cash Valley Road, Cumberland, Md.

Father Sheridan came to Washington when a small boy, attended Holy Comforter Parochial School at Fifteenth and East Capitol Street, served as altar boy at Holy Comforter Church, was graduated from Gonzaga High School, and attended Catholic University for two years before enrolling at Maryknoll (New York) Seminary.

The fathers were ordained to the priesthood of the Catholic Foreign Missionary Society of America on June 22 at Maryknoll. The traditional departure ceremony for outgoing missioners scheduled for the last Sunday in July will take place at the Maryknoll headquarters on September 14. Announcement of the priests' sailing plans came yesterday from Maryknoll.

Stocks Continue Buoyant on Improved Buying; Steels, Aircrafts and Utilities Among Leaders

New York, Aug. 27.—The stock market today retained the faint bullish tingle that spread over the list at the close of last week.

Yesterday's moderate advance apparently stimulated confidence in the speculative sector and prices were bid up moderately. Steels, aircrafts, utilities, coppers, rails and specialties had the best support, although most of these groups had one or more laggard members. Generally the gains were confined to fractions, but in isolated cases ran to a point or more.

It looked as if the market found the key to further recovery in the meagerness of selling on a higher opening. When the fresh gains were permitted to stand, buying expanded a bit, keeping most stocks on an even keel while some of the favored issues pushed ahead to best levels at the end. There was also a quota of losers.

The Associated Press 60-stock average recorded an advance of .1 of a point at 43.5. The day's turnover of 432,410 shares compared with 458,930 Tuesday.

There was little in the day's news to associate with the upturn, and Wall Street remained preoccupied with worries involving the war, spreading Government controls in business and emergency taxation.

As in the recent recovery sessions the improved demand for stocks was ascribed mainly to ideas the market's technical position was sound and that it might have some better news to work on after the Labor Day holiday.

Among leaders were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Consolidated Aircraft, Sperry, Bendix, American Can, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Great Northern pfd. and Pepsi-Cola. Loew's and Boeing established new 1941 highs. Standard Oil (N. J.) dipped after investment quarters reported preparations were under way for an off-the-market offering of 150,000 shares.

Posting gains in the Curb were Humble Oil, Fairchild Engine, Pennroad and Sherwin Williams. Down a little were American Cyanamid and Bell Aircraft. Transactions here were about 93,000 shares, against 102,000 the previous day.

The bond market had many firm spots among the rails and specialties today but the main list held mostly in a fractionally higher range.

Transactions of $8,439,150, par value, were the largest since July 22 and compared with $6,713,300 on Tuesday. The rail and foreign groups in the Associated Press averages each gained .1 of a point, while the utilities, industrials and low-yields held stationary.

Some of the low-priced rails, especially those undergoing reorganization, got off on the right foot almost at the start of trading and held leadership both in point of activity and net gain up to the close. Included were New Haven 3½s at 26, Delaware & Hudson 4s at 55¼, Wabash first 5s at 69½, Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s at 27, Norfolk & Southern 5s at 26½ and Seaboard Airline refunding 4s at 7¼.

Contract Bridge

"Please settle the dispute as quickly as possible so that I may get some sleep," writes R. P. B., in submitting a question on the ticklish point of replying to a double.

"At a rubber-bridge game the other night I was playing with my favorite patrner (?) (friend wife), and the following situation arose. My wife set South with this hand:

♡ A863
◇ 754
♣ 963

"The bidding:

1 H	Pass	2 H	Double
Redouble	?

"What is the correct bid for South? Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!

Two spades is the response most strong players would make. It is the cheapest, the easiest, the safest since the doubler promises spade strength—and the least informative to the adversaries. A pass, while permissible now under the new Culbertson code, reveals a pitiful show of weakness just when a camouflage of strength may be necessary.

If South's partner is not a reckles doubler, a reply of two spades shouldn't place the pair in peril of a large set. Maybe R. P. B. should hie to the drug store for a sleeping potion after all, for if his favorite partner passed, she can call upon Ely to back her up.

Word comes through that Major Bowes and his amazing Amateur Hour are to return to WJSV and the Columbia network just a week from today—Thursday, September 4.

A dozen weeks have gone by since the well liked Major, one of the most successful figures in the entertainment world, made his last aural appearance. Before that he hadn't missed a broadcast for something like seven years.

The Major was forced reluctantly off the air by the need for an urgent operation, and he's spent most of the time since in a hospital and convalescing at his Rumson, N. J., home.

As a manifestation of the high regard in which his sponsors hold him—not that he exactly needed same, because the weekly salary they pay him is the highest in the radio business—that motor company had installed in his hospital suite an ultra-modern air conditioning system so that their super-salesman might pass his convalescence in comfort.

Even in the hospital Major Bowes supervised all the details of the substitute program which starred the orchestra of Morton Gould, one of the graduates of the Amateur Hour. And, to get away from it all, they say the Major listened to the radio most of the time.

A Note From the East

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and the Japanese Ambassador, in a momentous effort to decide the question of peace or war in the Pacific, sat down together around a White House table yesterday to see if America and Japan could solve their explosive differences without shooting.

A personal message from Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye to President Roosevelt, delivered by Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura, led to the conference, which is likely to affect deeply the future of every nation with a stake in East Asia.

The meeting, called as war clouds were gathering in the Orient, was unique in the tempestuous history of the American-Japanese relations. It arose from a set of circumstances which had brought the two countries to a crisis over American determination to continue sending war aid to China and to Soviet Russia, in spite of Japan's announced determination to create a "new order" in the Far East.

Other Meetings Ahead

Secretary Hull told reporters after the meeting that it would be followed by another, and perhaps several others.

The two nations, he said, are engaged in an effort to work out in what he termed an intimate and personal way the problems and questions between them.

Hull would not say whether the purpose of the conferences was to reach some written agreement—such as a neutrality pact—or merely a verbal arrangement.

The nature of the message from the Japanese Premier to the President was a guarded secret, but it was apparent that it was instrumental in bringing about the three-man talk-in the President's office.

Hull said at a press conference after the morning meeting—which lasted 45 minutes—that there had

Army Weeds Out Reserve Officers

New War Department orders will relieve most Reserve officers now on extended active duty, and give most Regular Army line officers promotions.

The Post also learned last night that provisions affecting the Reserve officers will be applied to National Guard officers.

At least 25,000 officers are expected to be affected by the orders.

Guns for Soldiers

Gen. Lear Calls for Team Play To Put the Army at Its Peak

The Post today incorporates in its series "Guns For Soldiers" the address of Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commanding the Second Army, to his 100,000 officers and men, at the opening of maneuvers yesterday near Hope, Ark.

This address was made by a fine soldier to a fine young army.

It expresses better than any recent pronouncement the spirit that has made America great.

It should be required reading for every defense worker in Washington—for every citizen in this country.

When Gen. Lear says "By perseverance, by work, by correction of mistakes, by learning team play, we will make progress" he expresses exactly what The Post is asking for in "Guns For Soldiers."

By Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear

THE Army phase of maneuvers is about to begin. There will be plenty of work for everybody in this command. By perseverance, by work, by correction of mistakes, by learning team play, we will make progress.

After that phase is completed, we will enter the maneuvers between the Second Army and the Third Army. This will be the biggest and most important Army undertaking in our peacetime history. It will be a test of our training up to this point. Again every man will do his best, learn by his mistakes one day so that he may do better the next. That is what we are here for. That is why in rain or in heat, under forced marches and long nights on the road, every man will put out his best effort. Remember, each soldier is important, each squad is important. The individual contribution of the soldier, the collective contribution of squads, platoons, companies, regiments and divisions, will make this Army more fit to fight, more fit to serve the Republic. To do less than that would be to deny our country our best services.

I am confident that you will do well—each and every one of you. I am confident that you will answer those critics who have belittled the American Army.

Denies That U. S. Soldiers Are Quitters

JUST like you, I read the newspapers and magazines and take note of what they say about the Army. Like you, I read and discuss with my associates articles that are critical. There have been some I haven't liked at all. I don't like it when it is said or inferred that the American soldier is afraid of his weapons, that he is a potential quitter, that he is too selfish to give his time and efforts ungrudgingly to his country when his national leaders tell him solemnly and gravely that the Nation faces a crisis.

We aren't that kind of men. We are not represented by the disgusting quotations that reflect on the spirit, the manhood, the character, and the patriotism of the young American. We are not the kind of men that any foreign dictator would prefer to have as enemy troops. I resent all such inferences and allusions. I am confident that you join me in that resentment.

I am being very frank with you. We are all on the same team. A general officer's job is a combination job of player and coach. But we are all equal in playing the game—the most honorable game in life: Service to our country. That calls on us to put out—unstintingly.

WE will never get paid for that service what it is worth. We will make sacrifices and have hardships that others will not share. We will know labor and sweat and fatigue at a time when we know there are plenty of others who are taking it easy.

Second Army Can Take It, He Asserts

But that's the soldier's life in a time of emergency. And if war is brought to this Nation, you will suffer hardships and deprivations that will make your period of training and of field work look like child's play. And that, too, is the life of the soldier when his country is threatened. It is a real man's life.

Well, young men of the Second Army, can you take it?

I'll answer for you, from my most profound conviction: YOU CAN; and if called upon on the battlefield, YOU WILL.

That's what I think.

Now I don't feel a bit sorry for the American soldier.

He is treated as no other soldier in the world is treated. He eats the best and most nourishing food. He wears the best clothes. He is given the best medical attention. And while his pay is small by some standards, it is the biggest pay received by any soldier under the sun. And the hospitality of America towards the soldier is unrivaled anywhere.

I AM not sorry for you, either, because you are giving your time for the period of the emergency to your country—even this additional time about which there has been so much talk. I know that most of you have left jobs. I know most of you would be home earning high wages if you were not in the Army. I know you would like to be back in the affectionate atmosphere of your family, in the company of

Gas Rationing Not Yet in Sight, Davies Tells Senate Probers

A special Senate investigating committee, told yesterday that no legal authority existed for compulsory rationing of gasoline, will hear testimony today by the Maritime Commission's chairman, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, on the muddled petroleum situation.

Principal witness yesterday, as the Capitol Hill inquiry opened under chairmanship of Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, was Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator for national defense.

It was, however the petroleum unit's council, J. Howard Marshall, who informed the investigators of the lack of authority to impose rationing upon gasoline consumers. His opinion was in response to a question by Maloney.

Davies, who earlier had read a 51-page statement to the committee, told the members that rationing is not yet on the horizon. He added, however, that September deliveries to filling stations will have to be reduced 15 per cent below July. At present the curtailment is 10 per cent.

Police Sure Capital Man Tells Truth

Suspect Also Admits Slaying of Seventh Woman in N. Y. and Attacking Six Here

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Staff Writer

Acting Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly announced early today that a 38-year-old man had confessed to the rape-murders of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff and Mrs. Rose Abramowitz.

Kelly declared that the suspect, formerly an undertaker's assistant here, also admitted the sex-slayings of a New York waitress and four Negro women in Washington.

Further, Kelly said, the man admitted he raped four Negro women here and attempted to rape two others.

Kelly told reporters:

"I am positively convinced that the suspects confession to the sex crimes is true."

The police chief identified the confessed killer as Jarvis Roosevelt Catoe, a Negro, of 1700 block Swann Street Northwest.

Murder Victims

Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department clerk, last June 15.

Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, 25-year-old bride of 30 days, last March 8.

Miss Evelyn D. Anderson, 26-year-old New York waitress, August 24, in The Bronx, New York City.

Ada Fuller, Negro, 1333 Corcoran Street Northwest, last January 22.

Mattie Steward, Negro, 48, 1423 Swann Street Northwest, November 28, 1940.

Josephine Robinson, Negro, 34, Blagden Court Northwest, December 1, 1939.

After Day of Questioning

Kelly's spectacular announcement came after day-long and continual questioning of the suspect by Washington and New York police.

The acting police chief, who was sworn in only yesterday as major and assistant superintendent pending the forthcoming retirement of Supt. Ernest W. Brown, walked into the police headquarters press room shortly after 12:30 a. m. and declared:

"I have an important announcement."

To The Post reporter, who was talking on the telephone, he said, "Hang up the phone."

Then he announced the "solution" of the unsolved cases, which cumula-

She Thought She Hailed Cab

Confession Reveals Attack, Slaying Took Place in ½ Hour

Police Supt. Kelly early this morning released an abbreviated version of Jarvis R. Catoe's confession to the rape-murder of Jessie Strieff, as follows:

"I was going west on Florida Avenue in my own auto during the height of the storm (Sunday afternoon, June 15). The girl was standing at the corner of Nineteenth Street and she stuck up her hand and hailed me.

"'I beg your pardon,' she said. 'I thought you were a cab.'

"'No, this is not a cab,' I answered, and I offered her a ride. I opened the door and she got in.

"I took her to an empty garage and attacked her.

"I used the belt of her playsuit to tie her up and then I strangled her with it.

"I then drove to the garage in the alley (behind 1717 Q Street Northwest) and dumped her body there.

"It all happened in a half an hour."

Chief Kelly said that the killer described in detail the layout of the garage, in which Miss Strieff's body was found the following morning.

Russians Admit Dam Blown Up as Part of Program Of Destruction

(Detailed Accounts, Page 4 and 5.)

By the Associated Press

The Russians officially announced last night that in the most spectacular application yet made of Stalin's vow to leave the invading Germans nothing but a wasted land they had blown up the 110-million-dollar Dnieper River dam below Dnieneropetrovsk.

This spectacular act of destruction, which flooded thousands of square miles of the lower Ukraine, established beyond question that the defenders were in the gravest difficulties in the south, and was accompanied by German claims that their troops had smashed to within 30 miles of the northwestern metropolis of Leningrad. Which one of the four German and Finnish allied offensives had made this advance and precisely where was not stated by the Nazis.

Dnieperopetrovsk Admitted Lost

Moreover, the Russian command officially admitted late last night the forced evacuation of Dnieperopetrovsk itself, a great industrial city which the Germans had claimed some days ago.

The night Moscow communique, issued considerably earlier than usual, had little to add to this acknowledgment save the customary report of continued heavy fighting everywhere.

Capture of Viipuri, most important city lost to Russia in the former Russo-Finnish war, was forecast soon in a dispatch from Helsinki. The same dispatch indicated that with this advance the Finns might seek an armistice with Russia, even though a separate peace could not be signed until the conclusion of Nazi-Soviet hostilities.

[Similar rumors, apparently with some background of authenticity, were reported in Stockholm dispatches to the New York Times.]

But while it thus appeared that the Red flanks were swaying in both north and south, even the Germans conceded that not all the initiative had passed to their arms.

For Russian counterattacks at the center, apparently somewhere in the vicinity of Gomel, and in the Ukraine, were acknowledged in Berlin, although it was claimed that in both theaters they had been bloodily broken.

As to the Russian center, yesterday's dispatches indicated that the action was of the greatest violence. It was in the Ukraine itself where the Russians threw themselves at the Dnieper in an effort to cross back to the west.

Iran Ceases Resistance To Occupation

By Edward W. Beattie, Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 28.—A vital route for the flow of United States and British war materials to Russia was opened up today when a new "peace government" in Teheran capitulated to the British-Soviet invasion after four days of armed resistance.

Following the Iranian government's "cease fire" orders to its troops, British and Soviet armies already deep into the desert kingdown swept on in a peaceful occupation of oil centers, ports and railroads.

Iran's new premier, Ali Furughi, placed in office Wednesday night by Shah Riza Khan Pahevi, ordered the capitulation with full approval of the Iranian parliament "to avoid bloodshed and internal disorder," it was announced in Teheran.

The new government promised to maintain friendly international relations "especially with Iran's neighbors," meaning British India and Afghanistan on the east, Russia on the north, Turkey on the north-

21 Americas To Seize Idle Foreign Ships

100 More Vessels Expected to Bolster Hemisphere Defense

The 21 American republics agreed yesterday to place in operation all foreign vessels driven into Western Hemisphere ports by the European war.

The action was announced by the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee which has been working on the problem for the past seven months in an effort to alleviate a shipping shortage resulting in American waters because of diversion of vessels to take supplies to Britain and the Near East.

Compensation Promised

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State and chairman of the committee, said he believed the action "is the most important, concrete step ever taken by the Inter-American Committee." He added that it was "signal proof of what united efforts, instead of individual efforts, can do."

While the exact number of foreign ships idle in Western Hemisphere ports was not officially stated, best estimates put the total at around 100.

The committee announced that "just and adequate compensation" would be made to the countries whose vessels are affected.

It said the action was taken "to promote the defense of the economies of the American republics as

Nelson Executive Director, Wallace Chairman of New Planning Council

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night ordered a wholesale reorganization of the entire defense administration, creating for the first time, through the medium of a seven-man priorities and allocations board, a central planning agency to appraise military and domestic civilian needs.

The reorganization, put into effect by executive order, appoints Donald M. Nelson, hitherto director of OPM purchases, to the key post of executive director of the new body, known as the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

Vice President Henry A. Wallace was named chairman of the board.

DONALD NELSON

Other members include the present OPM Board (consisting of Codirectors William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, War Secretary Stimson and Navy Secretary Knox), Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Special Presidential Assistant on the lease-lend program Harry Hopkins.

Biggers Going to Britain

At the same time, the White House announced other drastic personnel changes in the defense administration. The most important:

Transfer of John D. Biggers from head of the OPM purchasing division to the post of Minister to England to facilitate British military aid.

Transfer of Edward R. Stettinius, jr., from his position as director of OPM priorities to a newly created post of lease-lend administrator, to work under the supervision of Hopkins.

Nelson was also named director of the OPM priorities division, replacing Stettinius. It was expected that Nelson's former job would be assumed by the present deputy director of purchases, Douglas MacKeachie, and that Deputy Produce-

Byrd's Proposal

Senate Committee Approves Nondefense Economy Group

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Creation of a special "nondefense economy" committee, representing the spending and taxing committees of the House and Senate, was voted yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee, now nearing the end of its work on the Nation's biggest revenue bill.

The committee approved the proposal for investigating ways to reduce civil expenditures in the Federal budget in the form of an amendment to the 1941 tax bill, offered by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Simultaneously the committee approved a resolution offered by Byrd, not as a part of the tax bill, instructing the Budget Bureau to submit by September 15 alternative sets of estimates for reducing nondefense expenditures by one billion dollars, 1½ billion or two billion. The resolution requires presentation of detailed schedules, agency by agency.

The special Congressional committee, which the Byrd amendment would set up, would consist of the
